Assails Security Act's Foes for Third Time in Two Days.

Text of President Roosevelt's address on Page 9.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 30.—President Roosevelt tonight gave the country a glimpse of the horizons beyond his re-election, promising "to go forward" until "all our people fairly share in the ever-increasing capacity of America to provide a high standard of living for all its citizens."

Slashing out for the third time in two days at the Republican "pay envelope propaganda," he noted that 77 Republican Representatives and 15 Republican Senators voted for the social security act, with but 18 Representatives and 5 Senators of that party recorded against it.

Then he added, thrusting out his jaw:

"Distraught Republican leadership, driven to desperation, and urged on by the same sinister forces which generation after generation have opposed all social legislation, now repudiate their own Representatives and Senators, and leave them looking positively silly."

Three times, after counting off the New Deal's "achievements significant of better life for all the people," he voiced a resonant refrain of expected victory, saying, "On November 3d, the American people will say that that was a job well done."

The third time he varied his triumphal chant to say, "On November 3d the American people will say that this is a job well begun," after speaking of the Administration's efforts to "build a structure of economic security for all our people."

Speaks to 4,000.

Then in closing his brief address to 4,000 persons jammed in the Brooklyn Academy of Music, he predicted for a fourth time: "On November 3d, the American people will say that our policy for the future is their policy for the future."

On the same platform where he stood arm in arm with Alfred E. Smith when the latter was known as "the Happy Warrior," the President tonight faced an audience so eager to applaud him and ready to boo denunciation of his enemies that it drowned out the endings of many sentences with either cheers or hisses.

When he applied the words "positively silly" to the Republican leadership, someone shouted "and that goes for Al Smith, too."

Observers agreed the most significant cheer of the meeting came quite unexpectedly with the President's mention of the NRA. Even the President seemed unprepared for the instant roaring ovation that sprang spontaneously from the crowd, as he hadn't emphasized or unduly stressed the name, and the cheer momentarily set him off balance.

Smith Missing First Time.

The ancient little music hall has been the invariable scene of the President's semi-final speech in every campaign—and tonight was the first time in 17 years of political campaigning that Al Smith was absent from the festive scene. Four years ago Smith indicted Hoover on this same small wooden stage for "not living up to his promises" and thwacked him roundly for creating "35 new departments and boards."

The President interpolated a telegram in his speech for the biggest laugh of the evening. It read:

"In the morning the sunflower turns east; in the afternoon the sunflower turns west; but it always goes to seed before November."

The President did not itemize his future policies, contenting himself with a broad recapitulation of the New Deal's record, and then defining the task of the future as "to go forward, to consolidate and to strengthen these gains—to close the gap by destroying the glaring inequalities of opportunity and of security which in the recent past have set group against group and region against region."

He then promised that "by our policies for the future we will

Campaign in Brief

Moving rapidly to the climax of the long election campaign, both Presidential candidates delivered seminal addresses last night.

President Roosevelt, at Brooklyn, said the Administration had laid a foundation for "a safer, happier, more American America" but a big task remains in wiping out "inequalities of opportunity and security."

Gov. Landon, crossing West Virginia, voiced a pledge to wives and mothers to keep America out of war, and asserted "household budgets" must pay for New Deal spending.

Herbert Hoover told a Denver audience he had rejected, while President, most of the ideas adopted by the New Deal because they would retard recovery.

Jesse Jones, R. F. C. head, declared the country had nothing to fear from the election but the net result of the Administration has been improvement in the well-being of everyone.

Hoover Asserts He Discarded Roosevelt Ideas

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 30.—Herbert Hoover said here tonight he had rejected, when President, most of the ideas subsequently adopted by the Roosevelt Administration.

"I rejected all these things because they would not only delay recovery but because I knew that in the end they would shackle free men," he asserted.

The former President, in an address prepared for delivery before a Republican gathering in the municipal auditorium, urged the election of Gov. Alf M. Landon to "save the soul of America."

Earlier in an interview Hoover described "enormous increases in registration all over the country" as a factor supporting his confidence of victory for Landon.

"All our previous experience has shown that new votes are cast as protest votes," he said. "Landon's campaign is accelerating greatly. * * * The Republicans will win New York. Our Pennsylvania lead-

New Entry Claims 9 Babies, Throws Derby in Turmoil

Toronto, Ontario, Oct. 30 (AP).—An eighth mother dashed into Toronto's stork derby today with a surprise last minute spurt that carried her into an immediate tie for first place.

With the finish line less than 24 hours away, Mrs. I. Sobel MacLean announced her entry in the $500,000 "more babies" race with a claim of nine children in the last ten years.

Her sudden appearance broadened the tangle of leaders in the frenzied competition for the money the late Charles Vance Millar bequeathed to the woman who bore the most babes in the decade following his death.

The decade ends tomorrow, and Mrs. MacLean, a Scotch mother from eastern Ontario, is the sixth woman to enter a claim of nine offspring within that time.

Mrs. Lily Kenny, one of the other five, had one day left to break the tie. She was confined, awaiting her tenth child.

Crowds Hail Him In West Virginia

New Deal's Frankness Questioned by Kansan, En Route Home.

Aboard Governor Landon's Special Train, Oct. 30.—Nearing the end of his campaign trail, Gov. Alf M. Landon swung westward tonight through the coal-ribbed Alleghenies, strewing pledges of "safe" government, peace and "your money's worth" to clustered thousands along the way.

In Charleston and Huntington, W. Va., heart of this mountainous mining and industrial region, he addressed his appeal to the largest crowds of his homeward tour; again he berated the Roosevelt Administration in terms of household costs, and questioned "the quality of goods it carries in stock."

As the "Sunflower Special" turned with the sun, through Virginia towns and scattered West Virginia communities, rural voters, smut-faced miners and railroad workers turned out at the stations to hear his "back porch" addresses, and his pleas for "non-partisan" support.

Bids for Women Vote.

In Charleston, capital of a State where political currents run down a divide, the Kansas Governor made a major bid for the women vote. Here Landon left his train to motor to a nearby auditorium, filled to its 2,500 capacity. Amplifiers outside carried his words to a few thousand others in the street. One "marching club" said it had come from Wheeling, 185 miles away.

To 15,000 persons massed around the station in Huntington Landon spoke from a raised platform hastily constructed near the train after local Republican leaders complained the Governor could not be heard by the crowds from the rear of the train. In Charleston, the Republican nominee directed staccato questions at New Deal frankness and the audience answered each propounded query with lusty negatives.

Not Told in Advance.

"Did it tell you frankly in advance what you were getting?" he asked.

"No-o," came the rally's response.

"Is it telling you now what it proposes to offer you if it should be re-elected?"

Some robust voice almost stopped the meeting by shouting in reply, "We wouldn't believe them if they did."

He spoke of the "household budget," and applied it on a national scale by renewing his attack on administration "waste," and interpreting taxation once more in terms of "hidden" levies, and how they affect the family income. His speech reached a climax in discussion of the troubled state of world affairs, the danger of international conflict, and a parting assurance that "we can keep out."

"If other nations should become involved in war while I am President, I pledge you that I will do everything in my power to keep America out. And I believe that in the light of our experience in the last war, we can avoid the pitfalls.

"We can keep out if we are prepared to defend ourselves; if we observe strict and impartial neutrality; if we are willing to forego short-run profits; if we keep our heads. This last is the most important of all."

Follows Holt in Attack.

Landon's Charleston address followed an assault there last night on WPA "waste, politics and applesauce" by Senator Rush D. Holt, youthful Democratic independent. Holt has been opposing the re-election of Senator M. M. Neely, his Democratic colleague, and flirting with the Republican ticket.

Crowds had gathered at stations along the route as the Landon train headed westward through Virginia

First Paulist Elevated to Domestic Prelate Rank by Pontiff.

The Right Rev. John J. Burke, C. S. P., who last month was elevated by Pope Pius XI to the rank of domestic prelate with the title of monsignor, died shortly after 3 p. m. yesterday following a heart attack. He was 61.

Mgr. Burke died at his home, 2405 Twentieth street northwest. He had just returned from the offices of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, of which he had been general secretary since 1919, the year of its establishment as the central body for the religious program of the American hierarchy.

Mourned by Roosevelt.

His statement follows:

"A powerful spiritual force has been lost to our national life in the passing of Mgr. Burke. As scholar, writer and pulpit orator he touched life at many angles, while always as a humble follower of the Master he was a splendid disciple of that Christian teaching of which he was an eloquent advocate.

The tall, silvery-haired priest was a familiar and popular figure in Washington. He was a constant companion of Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, when the latter came here recently. It was due to his efforts that Cardinal Pacelli made his only talk before a strictly lay audience. This was at a luncheon of the National Press Club, where Cardinal Pacelli, speaking for Pope Pius XI, made an impassioned plea for international peace.

First in America.

The elevation of Father Burke to the rank of domestic prelate with the title of monsignor established a precedent in the United States. A Paulist father (Congregation of St. Paul the Apostle), he was the first member of a religious community ever so honored. Theretofore the title of monsignor had gone only to secular, or diocesan, priests.

Mgr. Burke took a leading part in the efforts to aid the Catholic Church in Mexico in its difficulties with the government. Twice in 1928 he crossed the Rio Grande on a quasi-diplomatic mission and succeeded in negotiating with the then President Calles an informal agreement for a more desirable status for the church.

Under this agreement, the exiled Bishop Leopold Ruiz Y Flores returned to Mexico. Later, however, the informal agreement was rendered inoperative by political upheavals.

Father Burke's elevation was announced on September 8 by Archbishop Amleto G. Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States. It was be who recommended that

Train Rams Auto; Woman Is Killed With 6 Children

Rockmart, Ga., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Six children and the young mother of one of the victims were killed instantly killed today when their car, stalled on a grade crossing on the outskirts of this town, was struck by a northbound Southern freight train.

The dead: Mrs. Ruth Mauldin, 27, driver of the car; Howard Mauldin, 10, her son; Frances Wilson, 12; Sarah Hill, 15; Eva Hill, 12; Virdie Lee Hill, 10, and Emma Jean Hill, 7.

All were of Rockmart.

The car, a new sedan, stalled on the crossing and Mrs. Mauldin and the six children screamed helplessly as the fast-moving freight roared down on them.

The car was struck near its center, catapulted 50 feet down the track and hurled into a ditch.

All occupants of the machine were dead when witnesses reached the wreckage. Several of the bodies were badly mangled.

Rebels Bomb Madrid Area, 59 Are Killed

Soviet Ship Searched.
By the United Press.

Odessa, U. S. S. R., Oct. 30.—The rebel battleship Almirante Cervera stopped and searched the Soviet freighter Dnestr in the Strait of Gibraltar, the vessel's master, Comrade Golubev, reported here by radio today.

According to Golubev, the Spanish war vessel fired a blank shell as a warning. Spanish officers, the report said, went through the ship's documents and cargo, then allowed it to proceed.

Rebels Bomb Madrid.
By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Oct. 30.—Rebel war planes killed 59 persons and wounded at least 130 in daring daylight raids on Madrid and the suburb of Getafe today.

The insurgent planes dropped at least ten bombs within Madrid itself in the first serious bombardment of a European capital since the World War.

The dead in Madrid numbered 41, while unconfirmed reports from Getafe said an additional 70 children there had been blown and mangled to death besides the 18 already known killed.

Most of the 130 wounded were women and children.

The city was tense tonight. Accounts of the tragic deaths spread quickly and the streets were almost deserted except for a few pedestrians who hugged the walls of buildings and kept their heads down as if they expected more bombs to fall.

The majority of the casualties were women cut down by shrapnel as they chatted in line waiting for their daily ration of milk.

The insurgent planes, which have made daily reconnoitering flights over the capital, in their two visits today for the first time dropped bombs instead of propaganda leaflets.

Suburb Bombed.

They first bombed the nearby suburb of Getafe, their bombs killing 18 persons and wounding four. Eight of those killed were children and six were women. The others were men.

In a second visit, the war planes bombed the southern section of Madrid itself, killing 15 and wounding more than 70.

Two Scotch Red Cross ambulances were destroyed by incendiary bombs, although none of the Scotch staff was reported injured.

Three planes in formation made the second raid.

So sudden were the raids that no warning sirens were sounded and gun crews had no time to train anti-aircraft pieces on the planes.

Boulevards Littered.

The dead and dying littered Madrid's boulevards and byways, the screams of the wounded mingling with the cries of those seeking their families.

The raiders accomplished their deadly missions at an hour when the city's streets were filled with those returning home from work.

Earlier the government, forcing all available men into battle, tonight decreed draft dodgers would be punished as deserters from the army.

(Army deserters in war are court-martialed and usually shot.)

The threat to draft dodgers was contained in a published decree mobilizing all able-bodied men between 20 and 45 years old.

Rebel Lines Bombed.

With insurgents near Illescas, Spain, Oct. 30 (AP).—Government war planes, inactive for the last two weeks, returned to the Spanish civil war today.

Rebel troops at Torrejon de La Calazada, about ten miles nearer Madrid than Illescas on the same highway, fought bitterly to crush a government counter-attack.

The battle saw two highly mechanized forces pitted against each other for the first time in the insurgent siege of Madrid.

Airplanes, swift whippet tanks, and field and anti-aircraft pieces were all brought into play.

Rebels Accuse France.

Lisbon, Portugal, Oct. 30 (AP).—Spanish rebel radio stations broadcast a statement tonight that French military airplanes unofficially were helping the Madrid government in the Spanish civil war.

The statement said the French machines were flying low over insurgent lines and ports in eastern Spain.

37,000 Strike in West; Government Studies Peace Proposals.

Unions Are Blamed In First Violence

Sympathy Action Starts In Five Other Cities Over Nation.

A Nation-wide maritime strike threatened last night when 1,000 members of the seamen's defense committee, an insurgent organization, voted to ask the International Seamen's Union to call a sympathy strike on the Eastern Seaboard in support of the West Coast walkout, in which 37,000 men quit their jobs yesterday.

David Grange, vice president of the union, called a meeting in New York tonight to consider the proposal, after other officials said they believed the union would not call a general strike "on any condition." A deadlock was forecast by some, resulting in a partial strike.

Meanwhile, sympathetic walkouts occurred in five cities—New York, Boston, New Orleans, Providence, and Port Arthur, Tex.

Proposals Studied.

Numerous Government agencies were studying proposals last night to end the strike, which already has tied up 100 ships on the West Coast. Drastic punitive action will be taken by the International Longshoremen's Association against locals or individuals joining in the walkout, Holt Ross, southern representative of the American Federation of Labor, said at Gulfport, Miss., according to the United Press. Early last night Pacific Coast shipowners, in answer to Secretary Perkins' effort to halt the strike, citing previous experiences, said the Labor Department could not assist in negotiations.

Police, recalling the bloody 1934 strike, guarded the tense waterfront areas of Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Associated Press reported the first violence at San Pedro, the Los Angeles harbor city, where John C. Wright, 41, said four men beat him because he had no union card. State authorities considered closing liquor stores in the harbor area.

Ocean-borne commerce, accounting for a $1,000,000-a-day import and export business besides the heavy domestic trade, came to a full stop.

Vessels Fail to Sail.

According to the Associated Press, vessels which failed to sail yesterday in the New York area were the American Trader, the Panama Pacific liner Virginia, the Shepherd liner Sagebrush, the Luckenbach liner Horace Luckenbach, all docked here, the Union Suphur liner W. R. Kevar at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the Weyerhauser liner Everett at Erie Basin.

Walkouts were reported on the steamships Arizonan at Boston and the William H. Machen at Providence, R. I., and similar notice was served on the Mauna Ala at Philadelphia.

Joseph Curran, chairman of the committee, which demanded a walk-out, said a strike vote "must come from the union assembly tomorrow night."

He indicated the strike would be called by the committee if the union failed to take action.

Agreement Question.

John M. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine Co., declared the "sit down" strike "raises sharply the question of whether agreements between American shipping companies and the unions of which their crews are members aren't mere scraps of paper."

"Only recently," he said, "all American flag lines operating out of New York granted concessions, including higher wages and overtime to the members of the International Seamen's Union. A contract embodying these concessions and accepted by the union does not expire until December 31, 1937."

He insisted relations were "most friendly" between owners and "accredited representatives of employes" on the coast and that sympathy strike action was being taken "solely because of a condition existing on the Pacific Coast."

San Francisco housewives were reported hoarding food.

Milk Increase Threat Holds Despite Ruling

AAA Prepares to Appeal Decision Outlawing Marketing Pact.

Despite Thursday's District Supreme Court decision invalidating Washington's milk-marketing agreement and order, an increase in local retail milk costs remained a threat last night after producers renewed demands for higher prices and AAA officials announced plans for appealing the ruling.

Following a conference between dairy experts, attorneys and farmers in the AAA dairy section yesterday, the Department of Justice was asked to take immediate steps in filing a reversal plea with the District Court of Appeals.

The milk-marketing agreement, which establishes Federal control over the local dairy business, was held unconstitutional by District Supreme Court Justice Oscar L. Luhring, when he granted a temporary injunction to 12 independent producers. Despite his ruling, however, Maryland and Virginia producers serving the Washington area will demand the new high price beginning November 1, date set by the AAA marketing agreement, it was reported.

Approximately 1,100 dairymen will seek the agreement's increase of 4 cents a gallon from dairies buying their milk—Chevy Chase, Embassy, Wakefield and Thompson's. The increase to producers threatens to boost retail prices to 14 cents a quart.

Local dealers, he said, have a margin of 6.4 cents on every quart of milk they sell for 13 cents, since the farmers are paid 6.6 cents.

In Richmond, Montgomery pointed out, dealers sell milk for 13 cents, but pay 7.8. The New York dealer, who sells for 13 cents, pays 8 cents.

11 Council Aids Join to Indorse Security Laws

3 Advisory Board Members Agree on Aims, but Suggest Changes.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 30.—Eleven members of the National Advisory Council, which helped frame the Federal social security act, today issued a statement giving the act their unqualified approval following criticism of it by Republican leaders.

Three other members of the council issued supplementary statements, all of them agreeing with old-age and unemployment insurance in principle, but stating the present act should be amended.

"To leave unemployment insurance to the long-separated and haphazard actions of the individual States and to place the protection of old age merely on a pauper basis," the statement said, "would be two long steps backward from the real advances made in the present Federally integrated act."

The statement was signed by Morris E. Leeds, Philadelphia manufacturer; Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union; Miss Mary Dewson, member of the National Consumers League; John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire; Belle Sherwin, former president of the National League of Women Voters; George M. Harrison, grand president of the International Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Helen Hall, president of the National Federation of Settlements; Paul Kellogg, editor of Survey, and Mgr. John A. Ryan, director of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Council.

Mollison Sets Atlantic Record; Aims at Wife's Cape Town Mark

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 30.—Capt. James A. Mollison logged a transatlantic speed record tonight and indicated he might take off tomorrow in his announced attempt to better the London-Cape Town record held by his wife, the former Amy Johnson.

Mechanics at Croydon Airport tonight checked and tuned the motor of his monoplane in which he landed early in the morning, after flying from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, in 13 hours and 17 minutes.

His actual flying time from New York to London, irrespective of his 24-hour lay-over in Harbor Grace, was 19 hours and 59 minutes.

Before going to bed to catch up on much needed sleep, the haggard pilot said he awaited only favorable weather before taking off for Cape Town.

The present record is held by Mrs. Mollison, who traversed the route in 78 hours 26 minutes flying time earlier in the year.

The rivalry between Mollison and his wife over the Cape Town-London record dates back several years and has been held by each in turn.

(Recently Mrs. Mollison said she and her husband had decided to separate and that she would fly under her maiden name.

(Mrs. Mollison wrested the London-Cape Town record from her husband December 18, 1932, flying the distance in 4 days 6 hours and 55 minutes.

(In May, 1934, Jean Batten bettered the mark, but in May of 1936, Mrs. Mollison established records for solo flights each way and also set a mark for the round trip which she flew in 7 days 22 hours and 43 minutes.)

Mollison did not have much to say today concerning his 2,100-mile flight across the storm-tossed Atlantic.

"I'm so tired," was about all he remarked to airport attendants who pulled him from his ship. Much of the trip was made in a snowstorm, he said.

Edward Discards Imperial 'We' for Plain 'I' In Parliament Speech Urging European Peace

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 30.—King Edward VIII broke another ancient royal tradition in his first speech to Parliament today by discarding the imperial "we," "us" and "our" in favor of the democratic "I," "me" and "my."

(Last night, according to the Associated Press, King Edward broke still another hallowed tradition when, at his first dinner party in Buckingham Palace, he left the famous gold dinner set on the sideboard while his 14 guests ate off china.

(The dinner was in honor of Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine foreign minister, who has been in Europe for some time.

(Sticking to his determination to make palace functions as pleasant as possible, the monarch asked those attending to wear ordinary evening clothes, not court dress.—Editor's note.)

The most important section of the address to Parliament, a comprehensive discourse covering domestic and foreign affairs since Edward became King, was a clearly implied invitation to central European powers to settle their differences at the conference table and not on the battlefield.

The address was read by the Earl of Onslow as the King did not appear. His majesty will attend the state opening of Parliament next Tuesday and will speak from the throne.

While the speech was being read, the King was consulting with the Duke of Norfolk, who as earl marshal of England is in charge of arrangements for the King's coronation next May 12.

"A conference was held at Montreux (Switzerland) in the summer for revision of the straits convention of Lausanne," the King said in preface to his invitation to European powers to settle differences by negotiation.

"The successful outcome of this conference, to which I am pleased to think my government contributed, has set a happy example for the future."

The treaty which was revised at Montreux was the one which, after the World War, took away from Turkey control of the Dardanelles.

London, Oct. 30 (AP).—Wallis Warfield Simpson and King Edward still see each other, friends said tonight, but thus far have avoided public appearances when together.

Twice this week, since Mrs. Simpson divorced her broker husband, the King and his American-born friend have been reported in each other's company.

Figures Show 1936 Campaign May Cost Most

Democratic Expenditures Are $3,406,501; G.O.P. Report Delayed.

By Felix Bruner.

Indications that the present campaign will go down in history as one of the most expensive ever conducted were seen yesterday as the last pre-election reports of various political organizations began to pour into the office of the Clerk of the House.

The Democratic National Committee reported that from January 1 to October 28 it had spent $3,406,501. In addition, other hundreds of thousands have been spent by Labor's Non-Partisan League, the Good Neighbor League and many lesser organizations. These sums are in addition to the money spent in Congressional, State and local campaigns.

At the start of the campaign, James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, said that he believed a fund of $2,000,000 would be sufficient.

The report of the Republican National Committee's final pre-election report has not yet been made public, but it is expected to add to the proof that the business of electing public officials is one of the biggest industries from the viewpoint of monetary outlay in the country.

Drive Is Intensive.

On the anti-Roosevelt side was the report of the American Liberty League showing that through its Washington office alone it has collected $424,580 and spent $466,574 since January 1.

An indication of the tremendous drive that is being made for votes in Pennsylvania was contained in the report of Jay Cooke, treasurer of the Republican committee of that State. He listed campaign expenditures, exclusive of the Pittsburgh area, at $676,638, and contributions of $735,340. The receipts included $172,085 from the sale of "dollar certificates."

The Democratic committee report showed that in addition to its expenditures it had unpaid obligations of $469,782. Its list of receipts showed a loan of $25,000 from Samuel Kramer, of New York, and one of $10,000 from Richard J. Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

The list showed contributions of $10,000 each from the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators, Raymond E. Buck, Fort Worth, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Morrison, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. W. L. Clayton, Lookout Mountain, Tenn., and Laurence A. Steinhardt, Minister to Sweden.

Other contributions of $5,000 or more included: Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, New York, $5,000; Lewis S. Rosenstell, New York, $7,500; Democratic State organization of Arkansas, $32,500; Floyd Odlum, New York, $8,000; Jesse H. Jones, Houston, Tex., $6,000, and the following of $5,000 each: Charles Harwood, New York; Fred Pabst, Milwaukee; W. L. Clayton, Lookout Mountain, Tenn.; Frank L. Crocker, New York; Paul V. Shields, New York; R. W. Bingham, Ambassador to England; Willard N. Taylor, New York; Richard J. Reynolds, Winston-Salem, N. C.; James A. Gray, Winston-Salem; S. Clay Williams, Winston-Salem; Marjorie Post Davies, Rosyln, N. Y.; Walter F. Baline, Maplewood, N. J.; R. J. Trippett, J. W. Cilliland, and A. H. Meadows, all of Shreveport, La.

The Democratic report showed that sales of the party's convention book, now a subject of heated controversy, brought $21,347. The sale of advertising in the book, not listed as political contributions, is the center of the argument. John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, complained to the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures, that the Democrats were accepting party contributions "in the guise of advertising."

In a reply, filed with the committee yesterday, W. Forbes Morgan, treasurer of the Democratic committee, said that at least 73 firms which bought advertising in the Democratic book also bought advertising in the Republican book. He said that in comparison with other publications the rate of $2,500 a page charged for the Democratic book was not too high and that "the price paid for an advertisement was solely and exclusively for the business advertising returns resulting from the publication."

Miners Give $97,500.

Morgan said the convention book had "an exceptionally select and wide distribution and circulation."

The Senate committee is expected to consider the complaint and the response when it meets November 9.

The United Mine Workers of America reported to the clerk of the House that the organization had spent $97,500 between October 21 and October 28 in the interest of re-electing President Roosevelt. The miners gave $50,000 to the Democratic National Committee; $40,000 to the Pennsylvania State Democraic committee and $7,500 to Labor's Non-Partisan League in Luzerne County, Pa.

Other reports showed:

Republican Congressional Committee—Expenditures from January 1 to October 28, $365,627; receipts, $381,745.

By Franklyn Waltman

Copyright, 1936, by The Washington Post.

THIS Presidential campaign has demonstrated once again the impotency and futility of third-party movements in national elections. As the campaign comes to a close Father Charles E. Coughlin's Union Party candidate, Representative William Lemke, has been pushed completely out of the picture by the two major Presidential candidates.

WALTMAN.

Not only has the movement been ineffective—but it does not even attract any attention in the hurly-burly ending of the campaign. It is clear that Lemke does not stand a chance of capturing the electoral vote of a single State—and as the campaign has shaped up it is doubtful whether the presence of his name on the ballot will make any difference in the prospects of the two major candidates in any State.

In a few sections where Lemke might draw sufficient votes away from President Roosevelt to make possible a Landon victory in a State or two, the cry is now going up with good effect: "Don't waste your vote," and "a vote for Lemke is a vote for Landon." Thus, two major parties, except in Minnesota and Wisconsin, continue to dominate American national politics—and the third parties in those two States favor the re-election of President Roosevelt.

This was to have been expected. The American political system is not geared to third parties—nor are American voters interested in them. In 1912 Theodore Roosevelt made the most valiant third party effort ever attempted in this country. As the standard bearer of that party he won pluralities in six States and assured to his Democratic opponent pluralities in sufficient States to give him victory that year. The candidate of the Republican Party carried only two States.

Yet four years later the nucleus for a third party established by the Bull Moose movement had completely evaporated and the old elephant which seemed ready to expire in 1912 had so far revived that its Presidential candidate came within 24 electoral votes—which could have been had by a comparative handful of popular votes—of winning.

In 1924 Robert M. LaFollette, the elder, again attempted to lead a third party. He was able to carry only one State—his home State—Wisconsin. In three or four States he took sufficient votes away from the Democratic nominee to the give the electoral votes of those States to Calvin Coolidge. But the outcome would have been no different if he had not made the attempt.

The complete futility of the La-Follette effort is the more significant in that he was indorsed that year by the labor groups, by the Socialists and numerous liberal and progressive groups which this year are ardently backing the Roosevelt candidacy.

In view of those previous third party efforts, I wrote in this place June 18 that "agitation for a third party this year, coming to the surface unexpectedly in the last few days among left-wing Democrats and Republicans * * *, is one of those political developments which make good reading, but are without real significance."

On that occasion it was said here that "it is highly improbable that such a third party ticket would have any effect whatever, even if it materializes" and that "were Senator Long here today, third party talk and aspirations might be taken seriously—he was the one man who could have attracted a following which might have given serious concern to the President."

And on that occasion, more than four months ago, I made bold to forecast that the revolt of the conservative Democrats against President Roosevelt and their support for Gov. Alf M. Landon would make a louder noise by far than any third party movement—that indeed, the insurgency of the Smith-Ely-Reed wing of the Democratic Party would constitute a greater threat to Mr. Roosevelt's re-election than the left-wing third party movement.

The futility of making any progress with a third party generally has been recognized since 1924 and those groups dissatisfied with the two major parties in this campaign have seen fit to affiliate with the Democratic Party—retaining, however, their own identity and for purposes of boring within.

Whether they advance their own causes by this maneuver depends in part on the outcome of Tuesday's election. Should Mr. Roosevelt be re-elected these groups will be entitled to a place at the patronage pie counter and they will be entitled to a place in the Roosevelt councils. Mr. Roosevelt may or may not follow their advice. If he does the possibility exists that in time—perhaps by 1940—these appendages to the Democratic Party will soon be running the party, as they have been doing in some respects in the last two years.

In that eventuality the Democratic Party will go through an intra-party purge. Its name will remain the same but new faces with new philosophies will be its leaders. Thus the tail will wag the dog. But it is by no means certain this will happen. Despite the rather general expectation that 1940 will see new political alignments, it is doubtful that the fight will be pitched on any basis other than that of Democrat versus Republican—but it would not be at all surprising if Franklin D. Roosevelt were the Democratic candidate that year.

Hoover Asserts He Discarded Roosevelt Ideas

Plans Were Turned Down as Bars to Recovery, Ex-President Says.

ers are absolutely confident. The same is true in Ohio. The silent vote will be Republican."

Hoover said he will make a "last-minute" campaign speech in California Monday night, but the city has "not been chosen definitely."

"The transcendent issue before us," Hoover said in his speech tonight, "is free men and women. * * *

"Our people did not recognize the gravity of the issue when I stated it four years ago. That is no wonder, for the day Mr. Roosevelt was elected recovery was in progress, the Constitution was untrampled, the integrity of the Government and the institutions of freedom were intact.

Tinkering Brought Panic.

"Then the realization of intended tinkering with the currency drove bank depositors into the panic that greeted Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration. Recovery was set back for two years, and hysteria was used as the bridge to reach the goal of personal government."

Hoover asserted that Roosevelt "on the eve of this election has started using the phrases of freedom," and demanded, "Why does the New Deal not really lay its cards on the table?"

Charging that four years ago "we also heard many phrases which turned out not to mean what they were thought to have meant," Hoover asked that the President "reply in plain words" to these questions:

"Does he (Roosevelt) propose to revive the nine acts which the Supreme Court has rejected as invasions of the safeguards of free men?

"Has he abandoned his implied determination to change the Constitution? * * *

"Will He Stuff Court?"

"Does he intend to stuff the court itself? * * *

"Will he discharge these associates of his who daily preached the 'new order' but whom he does not now allow to appear in this campaign?"

With the declaration that the country wants "not alone economic recovery" but also "moral recovery," Hoover said, "We must re-establish truth and morals in public life. No people will long remain a moral people under a Government that repudiates its obligations, that uses public funds to corrupt the people, that conceals its actions by double bookkeeping."

The former President said he had warned against the Administration's "philosophy of government four years ago from a heart heavy with anxiety for the future of our country."

"That warning was based on sure ground from my knowledge of the ideas that Mr. Roosevelt and his bosom colleagues had covertly embraced despite the Democratic platform," he added.

"I rejected the notion of great trade monopolies and price fixing through codes. That could only stifle the little business man by regimenting him under his big brother. That idea was born of certain American big business and grew up to be the NRA.

Rejected Schemes.

"I rejected the schemes of 'economic planning' to regiment and coerce the farmer. That was born of a Roman despot 1,400 years ago and grew up into the AAA.

"I refused national plans to put the Government into buisness in competition with its citizens. That was born of Karl Marx.

"I vetoed the idea of recovery through stupendous spending to prime the pump. That was born of a British professor.

"I threw out attempts to centralize belief in Washington for politics and social experimentation. I defeated other plans to invade State rights, to centralize power in Washington. Those ideas were born of American radicals.

"I stopped attempts at currency inflation and repudiation of Government obligation. That was robbery of insurance policy holders, savings bank depositors and wage earners. That was born of the early brain trusters.

"I rejected all these things because they would not only delay recovery, but because I knew that in the end they would shackle free men.

Started Prosperity.

"Rejecting these ideas, we Republicans had erected agencies of government which did start our country to prosperity without the loss of a single atom of American freedom.

"All the ardent peddlers of these Trojan horses received sympathetic hearings from Mr. Roosevelt and joined vociferously in his election. Men are to be judged by the company they keep."

Hoover called the Statue of Liberty in New York, rededicated two days ago by the President, the "forgotten woman" and said Republicans offered a rule that "free men must have equal rights and equal opportunities."

"For that," he continued, "the Government must be the vigorous umpire. But we want a Judge Landis, we do not want a Simon Legree * * * No man will be the captain of his own soul if a Tugwell manages it for him."

Hoover charged that by "taking vast sums of the people's money and then manipulating its spending to build up personal power," the Administration created "a score of new instruments of public power."

"Public funds are used right and left to subsidize special groups of our citizens and special regions of the country," he said. "At public expense there is a steady drip of propaganda to poison and public mind."

Charges Pork Barrel.

Federal spending, Hoover said, brought "a huge number of citizens with a selfish vested interest in continuing this centralization of power," enabled "the independence of members of Congress to be sapped by the pork barrel," and "subtly undermined the rights and the responsibility of States and local governments."

"The New Deal taxes are in forms which stifle the growth of small business and discourage new enterprise. By stifling private enterprise the field is tilled for further extension of Government enterprise. * * *

"By politically managed currency the President has seized the power to alter all wages, all prices, all debts, all savings at will. But that is not the worst. They are creating personal power over votes. That crushes the first safeguard of liberty."

Hoover said his address was "no occasion to elaborate the details of a program," and added:

"But surely we must dump the whole New Deal theory of restriction of production, of code monopolies, of constantly higher prices for manufactured goods.

Urges Policy Rejection.

"We must reject their currency and credit policies which will repeat our calamities of booms and depressions with greater heights and depths. We must reduce spending and amend the forms of taxation which now destroy enterprise and employment. We hold overswollen fortunes must be distributed through pressure of taxes.

"We hold the first essential is to improve constantly our machines and methods. That will create plenty and make it cheaper * * * thereby we give increasing employment to everybody. We hold that this can be done only by private industry and not by government. * * *

"We must have government that builds stamina into communities and men, that makes men instead of mendicants. We must stop this softening of thrift, self-reliance and self-respect through dependence on government.

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 30.—E. J. Margett, California director of the Townsend Plan, said he had urged Dr. F. E. Townsend to withdraw his support of William Lemke in those States where the name of Union Party's candidate is on the ballot and give that support to Gov. Alf M. Landon.

Margett said he informed Townsend in a telegram that he believed a vote for Lemke would merely constitute a protest vote while Townsend support of Gov. Landon would elect the Kansan "with an overwhelming majority."

Dr. Townsend already has urged Townsendites to vote for Gov. Landon in those States where Lemke's name is not on the ballot.

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 30 (AP).—The Syracuse Post Standard tonight announced the result of a poll among 1,387 registered voters of Sangerfield Township, Oneida County, which has voted with the Nation since 1880 except four years ago—favors the Republican nominee by two to one.

The ballots were returned by 637 voters.

The township normally is Republican. For 52 years its vote in the national election was reflected in the national returns.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, national Republican Chairman, said tonight there was "a Nation-wide sweep for Gov. Landon, so obviously in progress during the last few weeks" that it "began to swing not only political independents but rank and file Democrats against the Roosevelt-Farley political machine."

* * * *

Orators entered cars in all parts of the city to give riders three-minute addresses in behalf of President Roosevelt's re-election.

The idea originated with a man who made a political speech on a street car earlier in the day under nobody's auspices but his own. Party workers quickly adopted it.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union and a Democratic elector in New York, denied today that he was "seeking any political or foreign assignments" in answering the charge of the Rev. Charles Coughlin that "Mr. Roosevelt has already bargained with Dubinsky to receive the post of ambassador at Moscow."

"You see," he said, "only four months ago, the Soviet government refused me a visa to visit Russia, on account of my known record of consistent opposition to communism. When I came back from a visit to Russia in 1931, I had written some impressions of conditions as I saw them that apparently didn't quite please the powers that be in Moscow, which made me persona non grata."

"I intend to stick to my union and would suggest to the Rev. Coughlin to stick to his church. He is not so hot as a politician."

Rexburg, Idaho, Oct. 30 (AP).—Asserting he seeks to improve the lot of the American farmer, Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, criticized the reciprocal tariff tonight as an instrument that has brought foreign produce into competition with domestic output.

"We must keep the American market for the American farmer," he told a crowd estimated by former County Attorney E. W. Parkinson at 2,000.

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Good Neighbor League announced today that Mrs. Anita McCormick Blaine, daughter of the late Cyrus Hall McCormick, will speak in behalf of President Roosevelt at 10:30 (Eastern standard time) tomorrow over a national radio hook-up.

Mrs. Blaine is the daughter-in-law of James G. Blaine, Republican, who lost to Grover Cleveland in the 1884 Presidential election by 37 electoral votes.

* * * *

Medora, N. Dak., Oct. 30 (AP).—Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the Senate Munitions Investment Committee, asserted in an interview today none of the Presidential candidates has "fully defined a neutral policy."

"On the neutrality issue," Senator Nye said, "I have not seen that any candidate has fully and forcibly gone to the real center or defined what they mean by a neutrality policy."

Nye said he did not expect to take part in the Presidential campaign.

The Republican National Committee said last night the Agricultural Adjustment Administration was "intimidating (cotton) producers and coercing them into voting the New Deal ticket."

Citing what it said was an AAA letter to growers who held certificates in Federal cotton pools, the Republicans said "the letter leaves the impression . . . the New Deal must be victorious in the coming election in order to assure further payments to the producer on his certificates."

37 Unionists Held In Show Bombings

New York, Oct. 30. (U.P.).—The police bomb squad tonight raided Local 306 of the Motion Picture Operators Union and arrested 30 men and seven women for questioning in the tear gas bombing of eight theaters last night.

No charges were filed against the 37 immediately. They were taken to headquarters and were to be booked later. The arrests were an aftermath of labor unrest in the industry. A score of persons were injured slightly in last night's bombings.

Police said the theaters bombed employed nonunion operators.

Suit for $25,000 Filed Over Dog Bite Injury

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 30.—Mrs. Bertha Rodenhauser, near Hancock, Md., filed suit here today for $25,000 damages for alleged injuries received by a daughter, Dorothy, bitten by a dog.

Asbury and Marjorie Wigfield, neighbors and alleged owners of the dog, were named defendants.

George M. Smith Will Retire Today

George M. Smith, superintendent of the Baltimore division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, having reached the age of 70 years October 9, will retire from the active service at the close of business today, it was announced. To mark the occasion his friends in and out of the railroad field will tender him a farewell banquet at the Southern Hotel in Baltimore tonight.

Smith has an enviable record of 55 years and 2 months of continuous service with the Pennsylvania Railroad. He is a native of Baltimore County, where he attended the public schools. At the age of 15 he left his studies and began his railroad career, choosing the train-service department.

Smith was promoted to superintendent of the Delaware division on September 16, 1918, and was made superintendent of the Baltimore division two years later.

11 Farm States Battleground Of Campaign

Both Candidates Made an Intensive Drive for Support.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Oct. 30.—The farm belt's block of 127 electoral votes in 11 Midwestern States drew intensive bids by President Roosevelt and Gov. Alf M. Landon in the Presidential campaign nearing its end today.

President Roosevelt twice traveled through the sector.

Gov. Landon launched his bid for support of agriculture at Des Moines, in the heart of the corn belt, and followed up with many talks and rear platform appearances in farm States.

Roosevelt not only pointed to the record of his farm policies, the AAA and its successor, the soil conservation program that poured millions of dollars into the farm pocket, but proposed at Omaha, Nebr., a four-point program for the future.

This program embraced conservation against land wastage, increasing purchasing power of the people to provide a larger domestic market for farmers, an attack on the "evil of farm tenancy" and providing a "sound plan of crop insurance."

Farm Programs Issue.

Landon, propounding his farm program at Des Moines, promised "protection of the family type farm."

The Republican nominee said his would be done by carrying out the party plank for "reasonable benefits upon the domestically consumed portion" of crops when there are exportable surpluses.

He also proposed farm storage of surpluses, promised "fullest attention" to the question of crop insurance, and advocated a program of cash payments for "proper conservation practices."

Roosevelt, in his Omaha talk, said the "tariff equivalent" program proposed by his opponent would cost up to $2,000,000,000 annually and would "wreck" agriculture. It was, he said, "a straight subsidy of unlimited farm production" and the "Federal Farm Board all over again."

On a swing through Landon's home State, Kansas, Roosevelt said at Wichita:

"The farmers of the Nation are a good example of what Government can do not only in direct help but in providing security for the future. From a state of collapse in 1932, agriculture has not only been brought back to life but has received the encouragement of Government which enables it to face the future with confidence."

Roosevelt called his first trip through Western farm States a "nonpolitical" journey. It carried him into the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, where he viewed drought conditions. It was on this trip he had a conference with governors of drought States, which included his Republican opponent, Gov. Landon.

The eleven States in the area include Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Missouri, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

In 1932 Roosevelt won over Herbert Hoover by 74,806 votes, while the Republican Landon won the governorship by 5,637. In 1934 Landon was re-elected by 62,153. There have been swift shifts of sentiment in Kansas; in 1928 Hoover had a Republican triumph of 320,669.

Chairman Frank G. Todd, of the Republicans, said: "There is no doubt about it. We believe Landon will win by between 85,000 and 100,000 votes."

C. M. Fitzwilliam, State Democratic chairman, predicted: President Roosevelt will carry Kansas by a majority of at least 30,000."

Bossism Issue.

Across the river in Missouri the perennial issue has blossomed again—the Democratic dynamo of T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City leader. Republicans called it "boss control." Jesse W. Barrett, Republican seeking the Governorship, declared Kansas City registration was "padded" by at least 60,000 names. Lloyd C. Stark, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, termed "bossism" an "overworked" issue.

Former Senator James A. Reed, a Democrat, campaigned against Roosevelt but supported the Democratic State ticket. Conversely, William Hirth, defeated in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, advocated Roosevelt and endorsed the Republican Barrett.

Democratic Gov. Guy B. Park predicted Roosevelt and Stark would win by "200,000 to 300,000."

Grover W. Dalton, Republican State chairman, said he expected both national and State Republican tickets to win in Missouri, adding: "Missouri Democrats and Republicans alike are turning from the pink politics of the New Deal and the corrupt elections and Government of the past four years under the Kansas City Pendergast machine."

Roosevelt carried Missouri in 1932 by 460,693 votes. The Hoover margin in 1928 was 171,518.

Roosevelt carried every county in Oklahoma in 1932. Gov. Landon spoke in Oklahoma City last week on the same platform with picturesque William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray, former Democratic governor but a New Deal critic. Landon's speech was pointed in its bid to Democrats to join forces with him.

Only once in recent history was Texas turned from the Democratic ticket and that was in the case of Hoover versus Smith. Roosevelt won in 1932 by 662,389. The 1936 campaign has been relatively quiet.

Court to Name Aid for Inquiry In Bond Racket

Special Investigators Due for Appointment Nov. 3 in Prince Georges.

A special prosecutor to assist him in his investigation of the Prince Georges County bonding racket will be appointed next Wednesday, November 3, it was announced yesterday by State's Attorney Alan Bowie.

Identity of Bowie's assistant was not revealed, although it was hinted it would be one of the lawyers who have been closely associated with the investigation of bonding practices.

Bowie has stated he will not be able to begin his scrutiny of the maze of evidence submitted to him by the Keystone Club until this session of the Circuit Court is over.

The court recessed yesterday until Wednesday, the day after elections. The remaining cases on the docket will take about three days to complete, the State's attorney said.

After adjourning, probably Saturday of next week, the court will move to Calvert and then to Charles County for the month of November. The special session of the grand jury which was recommended for further study of the bonding racket with the possible view of returning indictments against several "minor" county officials, will not be called before December 1, it was learned.

Meanwhile, Keystone attorneys are continuing to receive complaints from scores of Washington residents, who allege they were caught in the county bonding swindle. About 100 affidavits have now been assembled and will be presented to the grand jury when it reconvenes if Bowie's check-up of police court records proves the stories told in the declarations to be true.

French Minister Absolved by Court

Paris, Oct. 30. (AP).—A court of honor cleared Interior Minister Roger Salengro tonight of Rightist chargest he betrayed his country during the World War.

The three-man committee of war veterans, headed by Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin, army chief of state, announced that, contrary to the assertions of the Rightist press, Salengro was not condemned to death as a deserter, but was acquitted by a military court.

Middle-Atlantic States Are Swept By Snow, Wind

The cold swept in toward the Capital with the Weather Bureau forecasting near-freezing temperatures for early today.

The snow at Frostburg, a month later than usual, was accompanied by temperatures around the freezing point. The large flakes melted as they touched the ground.

From Cape Hatteras to Portland, Me., storm warnings were displayed, the Weather Bureau indicating a disturbance was moving eastward from the lower St. Lawrence Valley accompanied by strong northwest winds. Strong winds blew in Washington all day yesterday.

The low forecast by the weather man for Washington this morning is 35 degrees, with a possibility that the chill winds may force the mercury down a degree or two below that.

The prediction for tomorrow is fair and moderately cold.

84 Held in Ship Soviet Rebellion

Buenos Aires, Oct. 30. (U.P.).—Eighty-four mutinous seamen of the Spanish steamer Cabo San Antonio tonight were ordered held for trial on charges of attempting to resist and resisting Argentine authorities and for unlawful assembly.

The sailors, part of 92 members of the crew arrested and held incommunicado all day while local authorities investigated an alleged plot aboard to seize the ship's arsenal and kill Capt. Jose Lanz and other officers, were accused of attempting to prevent maritime police from detaining four of the crew believed involved in the plot.

The men were arrested by maritime police summoned by radio after members of the seamen's soviet aboard sought to gain entrance to the arsenal, which was sealed and guarded by eight Argentine maritime officers since the vessel's arrival here Oct. 1.

A woman tobacco vendor, Consolacion Casorla, who was with the sailors, also was taken into custody.

Tobacco Firm Licensed.

Richmond, Oct. 30 (AP).—The British American Tobacco Co., Ltd., which relinquished its Virginia charter about two years ago, was licensed again today by the State corporation to do business in Virginia. The company, capitalized at 34,181,761 pounds sterling, paid the maximum entrance fee of $5,000 on domestication.

H. L. Seamons, Herndon, Va., Is Found Dead

John Spinck, who discovered the body, summoned Special Policemen C. B. Runyon. Dr. E. C. Shull was called and attributed the death to heart disease. Dr. Shull said Seamons had been dead about three hours.

Seamons had been a resident of Herndon for about 20 years. He was a native of Missouri and was educated in New York. For many years he maintained an office in Washington, where he was representative of a Pittsburgh heating company.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Fannie Lou Seamons, Fairfax County Health nurse; a daughter, June Seamons, a student in the State Teachers College at Fredericksburg, and a brother residing in Missouri.

New Deal Helps Unite Classes, Says Cummings

'Rugged Individualism' Is Called Policy of Each Man for Himself.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 30.—Attorney-General Homer E. Cummings tonight defined the Republican "rugged individualism" as "the doctrine of each man for himself and the devil take the hindmost."

The Cabinet officer spoke at a Democratic rally held by the State Democratic Campaign Committee. The speech was broadcast.

The Roosevelt doctrines which New Deal opponentts claim are setting class against class are actually doing just the opposite, Cummings held. He asserted that what the President is seeking is "a correction of social evils, a broader based existence, a wider participation in the benefits and advantages of our common country, and a more generous distribution of prosperity, so that there will be less and less occasion for class antagonism."

The Attorney-General attacked a statement of Col. Frank Knox, the Republican Vice Presidential candidate, that recovery began under the Hover regime.

"If recovery began with Mr. Hoover," Cummings said, "then, of course, the Republican Party should have renominated him; or, at the least, should in their platform have indorsed his Administration; or, at a minimum, should have said a few kind words about him in that immortal document. Their political strategy, however, is to persuade the American people, if they can, to forget all about Hoover and his Administration as soon as possible.

"The Hoover Administration is the hair shirt the Republican Party must wear in penance for its sins."

The Attorney General claimed that prosperity has returned as a result of well-conceived measures promptly enacted, intelligently directed and vigorously administered," and denied that the President has retarded recovery. He countered the Republican claim of a quicker business revival abroad by saying:

"If you look across the waters to the troubled people in foreign lands you will find little encouragement for the criticism of conditions in this country. To mop up unemployment by putting millions into the Army and setting more millions to work manufacturing munitions may be one way to meet the unemployment situation, but . . . it is not American way."

Hirohito's Brother Plans to Visit U. S.

Tokyo, Oct. 30 (AP).—Prince and Princess Chichibu, of Japan, are expected to visit the United States after attending the coronation of King Edward in London next May. The prince is a brother of Emperor Hirohito.

The imperial couple was to arrive in Tokyo tomorrow from the rural army post where Prince Chichibu is stationed.

Extortion Note Sent to Mellon Riches Heiress

The names of Mrs. David K. E. Bruce, daughter of Andrew W. Mellon, Mrs. William E. Fine, of Yonkers, N. Y., and Robert Owen Foster, of Minneapolis, yesterday were added to the list of wealthy persons who received threatening extortion letters from Frank Vitolo, 33-year-old acrobat, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, revealed.

Vitolo, held in the Federal House of Detention at Yonkers since his arrest September 30, previously had admitted authorship of threatening letters received by Harry Sinclair, oil magnate; Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, wife of the former editor of the Saturday Evening Post; Mrs. A. Hamilton Rice, wife of the explorer, and William R. Coe, author, of Yonkers.

Arrested After Apology.

Vitolo was arrested after he sent a letter to Mrs. Robert H. Montgomery, of Miami, Fla., apologizing for having sent her an extortion letter demanding $5,000 on January 15, 1936.

The acrobat is charged with sending extortion letters to Foster, prominent Minneapolis business man, threatening to kidnap his daughter, Mary, 19, unless $10,000 was paid.

The money was to have been placed in a package and dropped on the highway near St. Paul by Foster's chauffeur when the latter heard pistol shots as a signal. The instructions were caried out but the extortionist failed to appear.

All of the extortion attempts, Hoover pointed out, were markedly similar in method and technical experts in the F. B. I. scientific laboratory established that most of them were in Vitolo's handwriting.

Vitolo, Hoover said, confessed he had written several letters to Coe offering to return jewelry worth $249,580 which had been stolen from the author's home, in return for $20,000.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported from St. Paul that Clinton W. Stein, in charge of the F. B. I. office there, said yesterday the arrest of Vitolo had solved a threatened kidnaping in Minneapolis two years ago.

Note Asked $10,000.

He asserted Robert Owen Foster, former music merchant, had received a letter late in the summer of 1934, warning his daughter, Mary, would be kidnaped if $10,000 were not paid. He said a second letter, received three weeks later, directed Foster to send his chauffeur to a designated point on a highway outside of Minneapolis with the money. Signal to throw the package of bills from the car would be a pistol shot.

Foster immediately informed Federal agents. A trap was laid, with a dummy package. The signal for tossing the money never was heard, however.

Since then the girl has married, and now is Mrs. J. Raymond Greenhill, of St. Paul.

In most of the cases where Vitolo asked his would-be victim to meet him, he asked that a white scarf be tied to the windshield of the automobile used in keeping the appointment.

Girl Scouts Plan Celebration Today

Founders day will be celebrated today at the National Girl Scouts "Little House," 1750 New York avenue. It also is the final day of National "Girl Scout Week," which was opened by Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, when she viewed the arts and crafts exhibits.

The baking and cutting of a birthday cake, the singing of Scotch and Southern songs and a sketch of the life of Juliette Law, by Girl Scouts, will celebrate the birthday of the founder of girl scouting. During Mrs. Low's many visits to England and Scotland she became interested in the Girl Guides, initiated by Sir Robert Baden Powell. Upon her return to Savannah, Ga., she gathered in her home young friends and formed the first Girl Scout troop on March 12, 24 years ago. There are now nearly 400,000 Girl Scouts.

Mrs. Henry H. Flather, chairman of the National "Little House" committee, will preside and Girl Scouts from Lyon Village, Va., Betty Hicks, leader, will assist in the celebration.

Press Club's Pool On Electoral Vote Predicts Landslide

In the opinion of members of the National Press Club the election next Tuesday is going to be a landslide if the "Crow's Nest Pool" is any criterion. ickets in the pool to select the winning electoral vote run as high as 511 and average around 400.

Numbers instead of candidates are picked in the pool. Thus it makes no difference what candidate wins. The idea is to pick the electoral college vote that the winner will have.

Members of the club are "casting their ballots" at the desk, leaving what they think will be the winning number with Manager Albertin. The "pools" close before noon Tuesday.

Committee Named To Head Seal Sale

District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association board of directors yesterday approved preliminary plans for the annual sale of Christmas seals, proceeds of which will finance an expanded program in the fight against tuberculosis for 1937.

A seal sale committee was named by Dr. William Charles White, president of the association. This committee includes Wallace Hatch, chairman; Mrs. Whitman Cross and Mrs. W. Frank Persons.

A committee of judges in the health essay contest for pupils of the sixth grade in public schools also was named. It includes Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, chief medical examiner of the public schools, chairman; Dr. Numa P. G. Adams, dean of the Howard University Medical School, and Mrs. Whitman Cross.

Odd-Job Man Is Held by Jury In 'Leg' Murder

By the Associated Press.

Dedham, Mass., Oct. 30 (AP).—A special session of the Norfolk County grand jury today indicted Oscar Bartolinie, 50-year-old Quincy odd-job man, for murder of Miss Grayce Asquith, of Weymouth, 40-year-old former photographer's model.

The grand jury returned three indictments. The first charged Bartolini, with murder of the widow September 20 with "an instrument unknown." The second charged him with breaking and entering in the night on August 18. The third charged him with assault with intent to rape also on August 18.

Superior Court Judge Lewis Goldberg held Bartolini without bail on the first charge and in bail of $2,500 each on the other two indictments after ordering pleas of not guilty entered in all three charges.

Mrs. Asquith's legs and her head were found in Boston Harbor. Her torso is still missing.

Mme. Jusserand, Widow of Envoy, Back in Capital; Praises Memorial

Former Diplomatic Wife Recalls Husband's Work Here.

Back in Washington where she spent a score of years while her husband was French ambassador to the United States, Mme. Jules Jusserand feels her return is something of a homecoming.

She said so yesterday at the French Embassy, where she will be a guest for the next ten days.

Mme. Jusserand fingered the silver chain that hung on her neck and talked of her late husband, of the Capital as she used to know it, of famous figures of the past who were close friends of M. Jusserand, of her "homecoming" as it is, and as she expected it to be.

"I cannot express my gratitude to friends of my husband who will dedicate a memorial to him in Rock Creek Park, where he so much enjoyed walking," she said. "The thoughtfulness, the affection that prompted the memorial moves me deeply. I now know that the love my husband felt for Americans was, and is, returned in full measure."

Next to his own country, M. Jusserand cherished the United States, she said. "Even before he came over as Ambassador, he was fond of Americans. When he was a boy in school in London, he met James Russell Lowell and came to know him very well. Later in France he was a close friend of Henry White and Henry James."

From the time of his interview with Theodore Roosevelt in this country the two were drawn together by a number of common interests. Both were fond of walking and often took long strolls through Rock Creek Park, Mme. Jusserand said. "And both were tremendously fond of tennis, and enjoyed arguing with each other, whether it was over the game or something more important."

MME. JUSSERAND.

This is Mme. Jusserand's first visit to Washington since her husband's recall more than a decade ago. While she emphasized her gratitude to American friends of her husband who will unveil the memorial to him on November 7, she said her return to the United States to be present at the occasion, though in the nature of a homecoming, was far different from the one she planned for a number of years while M. Jusserand was living.

"From the time we left America, we planned to come back for a visit," she said. "So while I am most happy to be here now to see my many friends, and most grateful for the memorial to be dedicated to my husband, I cannot help thinking how different this homecoming would be, if he could be here with me."

M. Jusserand was Ambassador to the United States for a longer period than any other diplomat has ever served consecutively. A special act of Congress was required to provide authorization for his memorial, which is the first to a foreign ambassador ever erected on land donated by the United States Government. The Congressional committee to which the matter was referred originally was urged to support the legislation on the ground that "Jules Jusserand won the friendship of every American acquaintance and commanded the respect and admiration of our leaders of thought in the academic world."

Mme. Jusserand, who arrived in this country October 12, visited friends in Boston and New York before she came to Washington. She expects to sail for France November 11.

Expresses Gratitude for Tribute to Be Paid to Him on Nov. 7.

Countess Denies Alfonso's Charge

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Countess of Covadonga, the former Edelmira Sampedro y Roboto, of Cuba, filed papers today in Supreme Court denying charges made against her in an annulment action brought by Alfonso de Bourbon, the Count of Covadonga and former heir to the Spanish throne.

She also began suit for a separation, charging he abandoned her last March and refused to support her. The countess, now in Havana, is receiving $250 monthly from her husband, pending trial of the annulment suit.

In answer to his suit she denied that she broke a prenuptial agreement whereby she promised to aid her husband in his fight against hemophilia, the hereditary blood ailment from which he suffers. She denied there was any such agreement, and also denied his charge that she married him because of his title and wealth.

The countess asked the court to dismiss his suit.

Married Before Trial, Expectant Wife Chided

New York, Oct. 30. (U.P.)—Mrs. Mary Bouton was rebuked in court today because she got married and became a prospective mother between the time of an automobile accident and the day she was brought to trial because of it.

In December, 1935, her car killed Paul Cigala. Last June she was maried and is expecting a child in the spring. In sentencing her to an indeterminate penitentiary term, Judge Charles S. Colden said: "This is a novel situation, indeed, where a defendant gets married knowing that this case was coming up and then uses that as an excuse."

Work in Music Wins E. T. Rice Coolidge Medal

50 Years Devoted to Aiding Chamber Ensembles Is Basis for Award.

Edwin T. Rice, of Boston, vice president of the Society for the Publication of American Music, was awarded the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge medal, bestowed each year by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress for eminent service to chamber music, at the Founder's Day concert yesterday afternoon. The recipient was introduced by Oliver Strunk, chief of the music division, and the presentation of the medal was made by Mrs. E. S. Coolidge.

"This month rounds out for Mr. Rice a half century of enthusiastic devotion to chamber music," said Strunk. "It was just 50 years ago, in October, 1886, that he began the serious study and practical exploration of this literature as a member of a group brought together by Edward de Coppet. In 1903, when the Flonzaley Quartet came into existence, it was Mr. Rice who aided Mr. De Coppet in his relations with its members.

"When a premature dissolution of the Kneisel Quartet threatened, it was Mr. Rice who effectually prevented it. At one time or another, he has served as officer or board member with the Institute of Musical Art, the New York Symphony Society, and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society. What touches us more closely is his connection, as organizer, vice president and judge, with the Society for the Publication of American Music."

The ceremony of award took place during the intermission of a concert given by the newly organized Coolidge Quartet, which is composed of William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicholas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb. These musicians made their first public appearance as a group in a program containing Haydn's Quartet in C, Op 74, No. 1; Berezovski's Quartet, Op. 16, and Beethoven's Quartet in B flat, Op. 130.

W. Wilson Cobbett was the first to receive the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge medal in 1932. Since then awards have been made in successive years to Adolfo Betti, Alfredo Casella and Carl Engel.

Cooper Sues Eight, Demands $500,000

Col. Wade H. Cooper, one-time president of three Washington banks, yesterday filed suit in District court for $500,000 damages from eight men whom he charged "conspired" to have him indicted in the days following the closing of two of his banks, the Commercial National and the United States Savings Bank.

In addition, Cooper, through his attorney, Richard L. Merrick, asserted the group had been guilty of "malicious prosecution" in having him indicted. On each count he asked damages of $250,000.

Those named as defendants are J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency; Robert C. Baldwin, receiver of the Commercial National Bank; F. G. Awalt, former deputy comptroller of the currency; George P. Barse, chief counsel of the Treasury Department's Insolvent Bank Division; Leo A. Rover, former United States Attorney for the District; Irvin Goldstein, an assistant United States attorney; Gibbs Lyons, an official of the Treasury, and Samuel C. Simon, an accountant in the Department of Justice. All were mentioned in their personal capacities and not as Federal officers.

A. F. L. Sees Gain Regardless of Vote

The American Federation of Labor in its monthly survey of business, predicted yesterday that the present business upswing would continue throughout the winter and spring, regardless of who is elected President.

The federation estimated that business in September and October was 15 per cent above last year, but still 10 to 20 per cent below normal.

Workers, however, the report said, are not faring so well. It said that the average work week in 1936 has been increased from 38 hours to 40 hours.

"By thus adding to the work time of those already employed instead of taking on new workers, American industry has denied jobs to several hundred thousand unemployed," the report said.

At the same time, it was stated, there has been no significant gain in hourly wages.

Colby Asks Ohioans To Vote for Landon

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 30 (AP).—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Woodrow Wilson, discribed President Roosevelt and the New Deal tonight as "disloyal and unfaithful" to the Nation and urged his hearers to follow the lead of Jeffersonian Democrats by backing Gov. Alf M. Landon for the Presidency.

Colby said the position of Jeffersonian Democrats is not the "product of idle thought."

"We took our stand after much self-searching and anguish of spirit," he said. "Our Nation can only be happily governed by sincere, sober-minded and responsible men."

O'Connell Dies; Metal Trades Labor Leader

Vice President of A. F. L. for 23 Years Was Ill Only Short Time.

James O'Connell, for 23 years a vice president of the American Federation of Labor and one of the Nation's outstanding labor leaders, died yesterday at his home at 2126 First street northwest. He was 78 years old, and had been ill only a short time.

In 1934 Mr. O'Connell retired. At that time he was president of the metal trades department of the federation, a post he had held since 1908.

Mr. O'Connell was one of the American delegates to the British Trades Union Congress, at Plymouth, England, in 1899, and a member of the Commission on Industrial Relations named by President Wilson in 1913.

A native of Minersville, Pa., he served as a vice president of the American Federation of Labor from 1895 until 1918. During the World War he was made a member of the committee on labor in the Council of National Defense. Upon his retirement as head of the metal trades department, he was made president emeritus.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ellen O'Connell; a daughter, Mrs. Leslie B. Bell, of Washington, and three sons, the Rev. Thomas E. O'Connell, pastor of St. Paul's Catholic Church, Richmond; James O'Connell, jr., and Thomas E. O'Connell.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 9 a. m. at St. Martin's Catholic Church, followed by burial in St. Mary's Catholic Cemetery.

Va. Labor Leader Hit Security Foes

Richmond, Oct. 30 (AP).—W. D. Anderson, legislative representative of the Virginia Federation of Labor, charged in a speech here tonight that "reactionary employers" were using "unscrupulous and unfair tactics" in notices of the effective date of the pay-roll tax for "old-age benefits."

"The Virginia Manufacturers Association," he said, "is calling on its members to stress the point that the 1 per cent pay-roll tax will be deducted from the pay of workers in January, 1937. Notices are being posted by some Virginia employers that have the name of the Social Security Board, the Federal agency that administers old-age benefits, printed in large type at the bottom, indicating the board issued the posters.

"Workers should pay no attention to these posters because the Social Security Board has issued a statement that it has not authorized any such posters."

These methods, Anderton charged, were "for no other purpose than to try and mislead the working people into believing this tax is an unfair one to the discredit of the Democratic Administration." He declared the Jeffersonian Democrats, through paid advertisements, had joined the "political move by those who have always been labor's enemies."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress observes Founder's Day with a concert by the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicholas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb) in the chamber music auditorium Friday afternoon. Program: Quartet in C, Op 74, No. 1 (Haydn), Quartet, Op. 16 (Berezovski), Qartet in B flat, Op 130 (Beethoven.).

Those who joined in honoring Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge yesterday afternoon at the annual concert with which the Library of Congress publicly acknowledges indebtedness for her generous endowment of chamber music activities also had the opportunity to welcome the debut of the newly organized Coolidge Quartet. In the case of three of the members, Messrs. Kroll, Berezovski and Moldavan, the occasion was one of renewing a pleasant acquaintance, and the cordiality to the newcomer, Victor Gottlieb, violoncelli.

Although without the platform experience of his colleagues, Mr. Gottlieb proved himself a worthy associate. He draws a suave and resonant tone, resourceful in nuance, and his technique is expert and unassertive. From the ease and assurance of his playing one would augur a roseate progress in quartet work. The new ensemble is excellently balanced, flexible, adroit and consentient.

How much Haydn's music expresses his own sunny and genial disposition and how little it reflects any of the social readjustments of his age is exemplified in the C major quartet, which was composed, we are told, in 1793. That very year the most momentous and tragic events were afoot. Haydn's ill-starred countrywoman, Marie Antoinette, was for months closely guarded in the Temple, and on October 16 rode in a tumbril to the guillotine. Yet this quartet, so abounding in the joy of living and in carefree happiness, might have been written in a world blessed with millennial peace.

Mr. Berezovski's quartet is a strongly vitalized work in the contemporary idiom, interesting in both its thematic material and its integrity of construction. The writing is sinewy and closely knit, and the ideas are tersely set forth. There are no traces of rhetorical expansion, and the energetic directness has an effective impact.

After the intermission and the presentation of the Elizabeth Sprague Colidge medal to Edwin T. Rice, the program drew to its close with an admirable performance of Beethoven's B flat quartet. Of its richly significant movements, the most persuasively played with the cavatina, that beautiful and moving threnody of a spirit uplifted by hope above the sufferings of mortality.

Spanish War Peril Ended, Blum Says

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 30.—Leon Blum, first Socialist Premier of France, optimistically declared today that the danger of a general European war growing out of the Spanish revolution has passed.

The Premier's views on the international situation were revealed in an exclusive interview, the first he has given to the foreign press since he assumed power as head of the French government five months ago.

Regardless of the Russian intent to regain liberty in commerce of arms and ammunition with the Madrid regime, Blum is convinced continental powers are intent upon preventing the Spanish crisis or other class, political or economic interests from drawing Europe into another war.

"The real danger of the spread of warfare beyond the Spanish frontiers is past, thanks to Franco-British co-operation and observance by signatory powers of the non-intervention pledge," Blum asserted.

Churches of Christ Announce Theme

"Everlasting Punishment," is the subject of the lesson sermon in all the Churches of Christ Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden text is from Romans 12:9 "Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson sermon is the following from the Bible: "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that yea are able; but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it." (I Corinthians 10:13.)

The lesson sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Shriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "At all times and under all circumstances overcome evil with good. Know thyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil."

Dr. Cartwright to Give Talk on Church Spirit

Duplicate Services Scheduled Sunday Mornings in St. John's

Rector to Repeat Sermon So That All Parishioners and Visitors May Attend; Programs for Other Churches Announced.

Beginning tomorrow, St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, will have duplicate services on Sunday morning. Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector, announced yesterday he will preach the same sermon at a 9:30 a. m. service that he will deliver at the 11 o'clock service.

The need for such a service has been felt for a long time, the rector explained, because the congregation at the 11 a. m. service taxes the capacity of the church. As some of the seats at the 11 a. m. service are reserved, it has been difficult for visitors in Washington, or newcomers to St. John's, to find a place. All seats at the 9:30 a. m. service will, therefore, be unreserved and will give many who desire to worship in one of Washington's historic churches an opportunity to do so.

Church of the Epiphany. Dr. Z. B. Phillips, rector, will read the "memorial list" of names of all members who have died during the last year at the 11 a. m. services. This is an annual custom observed on All Saints' Day, but special effort has been made this year to have a "home-coming memorial service" at which all who have died during the last 12 years of Dr. Phillips' rectorship will be remembered.

There will be celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m., and the rector will preach on "The Living Dead."

There will be a corporate communion for members of the Girls Friendly Society at 8 a. m.

Rock Creek Parish, St. Paul's Church. A special memorial service for departed members, buried in Rock Creek Cemetery, will be conducted at 11 a. m. Also those whose names are given to the rector before the service will be mentioned before the altar.

The sermon, to be preached by the Rev. F. J. Bohanan, rector, will be appropriate to the occasion and the Sacrament will be celebrated.

All Saints' Episcopal Church. The Rev. Henry Teller Cooke, rector, will speak on "All Saints" in observance of the patronal feast day of the church at 11 a. m. There will be Holy Communion at this service.

St. Andrew's Church. The Rev. A. J. Wilder, rector, will lead observance of All Saints' Day at 11 a. m. services. The Church Service League will meet at the church Monday at 8 p. m.

St. David's Chapel. The Rev. Edward Slater Dunlap will be special preacher at the All Saints' Day festival service at 11 a. m.

Grace Episcopal Church. A special service to observe All Saints' Day and to mark the eighteenth anniversary of the rectorship of the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBride will be conducted at 11 a. m. The preacher for the occasion will be the Rev. Steward P. Ketling, D. D., former rector of St. Peter's Church, Germantown, Pa.

Dr. R. H. Miller To Talk Twice At National City

Rev. Bowers' Topic to Be on 'Throwing Away Valuables.'

Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller will preach to his congregation at National City Christian Church at both services tomorrow. His morning sermon topic will be "Using What You Have." At the evening service he will discuss "The Question of Guidance."

The Fifteenth Street Christian Church. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers will speak at 11 a. m. on "Throwing Away Valuables." The sermon topic at the 8 p. m. service will be "A Protestant Confessional."

The Columbia Heights Christian Church. The morning sermon topic will be "The Mystery of the Cross." At the evening service the Rev. A. P. Wilson will speak on "Jesus and Nicodemus," another in his series on "Great Preachers and Their Sermons."

The H Street Christian Church. The Rev. C. N. Williams will speak at 11 a. m. on "I Cast My Vote."

The Ninth Street Christian Church. Dr. Homer Sala, pastor of the First Christian Church of Decatur, Ill., will preach tomorrow morning on "The Aloneness of Jesus." His evening topic will be "The Unchanging Christ." Dr. Sala and his wife, who is also a minister, are conducting special evangelistic services at the Ninth Street Church this week.

and West Virginia. As it swung into West Virginia, the throngs increased in size and bands were blaring. At Clifton Forge, Va., and at Ronceverte and Hinton, W. Va., the Governor made platform talks, emphasizing the "nonpartisan" character of his campaign and appealing for Democratic support.

Landon spoke in politically hotly contested territory, where John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, has been bending every effort to swing the mine vote to Roosevelt, and West Virginia Republican leaders have been working overtime to return the State to the G. O. P. columns.

He drew a moral from the tangled European situation, and inferred once again that "it can happen here."

Loss of individual rights in Europe, he said, was preceded by developments "similar in many respects to the trends in government which we see in America today."

Goes Through Capital.

For the second time in a week, the Sunflower Special early this morning passed through the National Capital. But the dawn was just breaking as the train stopped in the yards at Virginia avenue and South Capitol street southeast for servicing, and only a few railroad men were present. A newspaper woman boarded the train.

Weary from his strenuous New York trip, the Governor was still asleep when a stop was made at Charlottesville, Va., nearly solid Democratic stronghold.

At Clifton Forge, Va., a town of railroad workers, a throng of 1,500 turned out, and the Governor dressed hurriedly to make a platform speech. Maj. T. L. Parsons, Republican candidate for the House seat of Representative Clifton Woodrum, introduced the Presidential nominee.

Here Landon paid tribute to Virginia hospitality, and told the throng that "many Democrats are either openly or silently lending their support to the Republican ticket as the best means of maintaining our form of government."

Crowd at Staunton.

Another throng gathered at Staunton, Va., birthplace of President Woodrow Wilson. Nearly 2,000 lined the tracks at Covington, Va., and sent up a cheer as the train moved by at a snail's pace, the Governor waving.

As the train entered West Virginia, virtually the entire population turned out at Ronceverte, with a band. Others had come 20 and 30 miles over the mountains to see the Governor, swelling the gathering to 5,000. Judge Summers Sharp, Republican candidate for Governor of West Virginia, boarded the train there.

West Virginia Republican leaders and Jeffersonian Democrats boarding the Landon Sunflower special at White Sulphur Springs and Ronceverte included a delegation of members of the Coalition of American Women headed by the chairman for West Virginia, Mrs. Agnes McDonald, of Lewisburg.

3 Are Injured Fatally In Light Plant Blast

Moberly, Mo., Oct. 30 (U.P.).—Three men were fatally injured tonight in an explosion which wrecked a Missouri Power & Light Co. substation. Four other persons suffered less serious injuries in the blast which was believed caused by an overheated steam boiler.

W. R. Brockman, 55, died almost immediately. Bert Bousman, 40, and B. R. Reynolds, 35, died of their injuries after emergency operations.

100 Ships Idle, Maritime Strike Threatens East

leum industry faced an uncertain situation, with relatively heavy business in prospect.

The big liner Virginia postponed departure from New York for California.

It was said 37,000 Eastern workers would be affected in any Atlantic Coast strike.

American Merchant Line officials announced in New York the crew of the American Trader had refused to work the ship when she was due to sail at 4 p. m. and that her 25 passengers would be transferred to the Cunard White Star liner Samaria.

The White House said President Roosevelt was watching the situation closely. Postal authorities made arrangements to put the mails on foreign ships, crews of which are not affected by the strike.

"We are going to settle this strike," said E. F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, who for weeks has been fostering negotiations.

The strike was called suddenly early yesterday in the middle of peace conversations which had shown prospects of producing results.

A group of 26 Eastern and foreign companies offered virtually everything demanded by the West Coast longshoremen, but the powerful union, central unit of the 1934 strike, declined to accept peace without assurance demands of other unions also would be met.

This "solid front" gave the unions a more compact strength but proved to be the stumbling block to peace. Operators of coastwise vessels offered sailors a pay increase, but their peace conversations went for nothing when four deep-sea West Coast lines held out against any concessions.

Both sides demanded new agreements when the old ones expired September 30. The Maritime Federation after repeated requests obtained general consent of a 15-day truce. It then asked for a one-year extension pending an exhaustive inquiry. The unions rejected this and demanded immediate action. They continued the truce briefly and took a referendum which resulted in the strike call.

The West Coast Lumbermen's Association, at Seattle, announced many of its 202 member mills in Washington and Oregon were closing down because of the strike.

The lumbermen's association said waterfront mills of the Douglas fir region from British Columbia to Coos Bay, Oreg., had been forced to curtail production because of the strike.

Meeting in Baltimore.

Baltimore, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Baltimore seamen will decide tonight whether to join a proposed general maritime strike on the East Coast. The vote will be taken at a mass meeting called by officials of the seamen's defense committee.

Mattingly Scores Officer in Arrest Of Legless Vendor

Police Court Judge Robert E. Mattingly upbraided a policeman in court yesterday for arresting Edward Bernstein, 35-year-old legless newspaper vendor.

"Why don't you go out and bring in the murderers, burglars, wife-beaters, pistol-toters, and thugs and leave these poor people alone?" Judge Mattingly inquired of J. E. Jones, the arresting policeman.

Bernstein told the court he had been supporting himself for the past 25 years ever since he lost his legs in a railroad accident near his home, Pensacola, Fla.

Jones testified that he arrested Bernstein after seeing passersby drop money into the man's hat without taking the papers he offered for sale, leaving them to be sold to someone else.

The crippled vendor said he had been selling papers in the 1200 block of F street northwest for four months prior to his arrest.

Father Confesses Killing Deaf Child

Grayson, Ky., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—County Attorney J. R. McGill, who said Everett Sparks, 44, had made a written confession that he killed his 4-year-old crippled daughter, Mildred, by giving her poisoned milk, was quoted by the officer tonight as saying his wife, Nellie, 30, was blameless and should not be held.

The father and stepmother were brought here from Olive Hill, Ky., to await examining trial Wednesday on charges of slaying the deaf-mute child.

The county attorney announced Sparks confessed poisoning the girl so that his second wife would not leave him.

Jesse Jones Sees No Cause for Fear

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 30.—Jesse H. Jones, head of the RFC, declared in an address tonight that "there is no occasion for fear or excitement about our future" irrespective of the outcome of the election.

"We are assured of freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of assembly and the right of petition, as well as the right to work and to hold property," he said.

He declared that "there has been as much done for business, banking and agriculture as for people out of work."

Roomer Death Holds Worker For Jury Action

Cerebral Hemorrhage Was Cause of Thomas' Death, Coroner Finds.

Charged with the murder of Lester C. Thomas, 40, found beaten to death Tuesday in his room in the 700 block of Sixth street northwest, Albert C. Johnson, 30-year-old bricklayer, yesterday was held for the grand jury.

Thomas, also a bricklayer, died of a cerebral hemorrhage, an autopsy performed by Assistant Deputy Coroner C. J. Murphy revealed.

Brought to the stand during a coroner's inquest, Johnson admitted having a fight with Thomas in the latter's room after an all-day drinking bout. He left the room, he said, without knowing his victim was dead. Detective Sergt. William Liverman, of the homicide squad, arrested him several hours later.

The victim's body was found by Garland Johnson, 34, his roommate, when he returned from work late Teusday. Thomas' face was beaten and bloody. The prisoner, however, said he only struck his erstwhile companion once.

Mrs. Lillian Louise Pauley, 29, and her uncle, Lewis N. Harris, a night watchman, of the Sixth street address, arrested at the time the body was discovered, were released Thursday after having been questioned by police.

Plot to Assassinate Nevada Attorney Fails

Ely, Nev., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—An apparent attempt to kill District Attorney Harry M. Watson, of White Pine County, failed here today when an improvised bomb attached to the motor of his automobile failed to explode because of faulty connections with the spark plugs.

The bomb was found when Watson stopped at a service station. A tire patch can six inches long containing nine dynamite caps about which was packed solidly a mixture of dynamite and nitro glycerin was attached to the motor.

Officers said the charge would have demolished the car and killed its occupants.

Two Children Die in Fire.

Athens, Ohio, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Two young children who had locked themselves in a wooden outbuilding burned to death late today at Glouster when the building caught fire.

The volunteer fire department of the village, located 15 miles northwest of here, responded to the call and after extinguishing the fire and tearing the ruins apart, found the bodies of Patty Ruth Bulloch, 7, and Phil Gamwell, 5.

carry forward this program of unity."

The President, in recounting the Administration's history, divided the achievements into three broad phases; giving of "aid to those overtaken by disaster," helping "our stalled economic engine to get under way again," and reform measures which "look to the future—to root out abuses—to establish every possible defense against a return of the evils which brought the crash."

Praises Gov. Lehman.

After his discussion of these "new stones in a foundation for a safe, happier, more American America" he paid an incidental tribute to Gov. Herbert Lehman, of New York.

His semifinal address, considerably more moderate than the vigorous blasts of his recent campaign swings, contained but a few heated references to the critics of the New Deal.

After naming the agencies which "furnished food relief, drought relief, flood relief, work relief," he said, "some people ridicule them as alphabetical agencies. But you and I know that they are the agencies that have substituted food for starvation; work for idleness; hope instead of dull despair."

The President, after his ride through Brooklyn to the Academy of Music, took to a motor car again for his return to his East Sixty-fifth street town house, where he was to remain tonight. Tomorrow morning he will visit Democratic National Headquarters at the Biltmore Hotel with prominent Democratic women leaders in the Bronx, and then will rest until time for his final major campaign speech at a mass rally in Madison Square Garden, the scene of a challenging speech by Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas last night.

Whether the President would answer the "gage" flung by the Republican nominee, remained to be seen, but most strategists held it more likely that he would attack Landon directly, instead of taking the defensive.

Freighter, on Fire, Races for San Pedro

San Pedro, Calif., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—The freighter Edward Luckenbach, a fire smoldering in its No. 1 hold, raced under full steam toward this port today. The 7,916-ton ship was off the coast of Lower California, expected to arrive here tomorrow morning.

Adoption Saves Dog.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Saved from a sentence of death by a woman's offer of a home on a farm, Jackie, 6-year-old German police dog, went into the country and freedom tonight.

City Judge Joseph J. Kelly sentenced Jackie to death earlier this week because he had killed a fox terrier and mauled a pomeranian. But today, prompted by the judge's announcement he would spare the dog if a home could be found for him where he would not menace dogs and children, Mrs. Catharlyn Kane came forward with an offer to adopt Jackie.

Father Burke, High Official In Church, Dies

Father Burke was invested by Archbishop Cicognani on September 21 at a ceremony at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University. Six bishops from various sections of the country attended.

Mgr. Burke was born in New York, June 1, 1875, the son of Patrick and Mary (Regan) Burke. He received his bachelor of arts degree from Francis Xavier College of New York in 1896. Then he attended Catholic University, where he received two more degrees—bachelor of sacred theology and licentiate of sacred theology. He was ordained in 1899, and at the outset served as a missioner in this country and Canada.

During the World War years he was named chairman of a committee of six that advised Secretary of War Newton D. Baker on religious and moral questions in connection with the troops. There were two Catholics on this committee, four Protestants and a Jew. For his work as chairman, Mgr. Burke was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

In 1917 he was elected president of the First National Catholic War Council. He also was founder of the Chaplains' Aid Society.

He was appointed assistant editor of the Catholic World in 1903 and promoted to editor a year later. He continued in this post until 1922, performing his editorial duties in addition to those as general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, to which he was appointed in 1919 by the American hierarchy.

Fordham University made Mgr. Burke a doctor of literature in 1915, and Notre Dame conferred a doctor of laws degree on him in 1930.

In 1928 the Holy See named him a doctor of sacred theology. The degree was presented to him at the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities in Rome by the then Archbishop Fumasoni-Biondi, apostolic delegate to the United States, who since has been elevated to cardinal.

Mgr. Burke was a student of the history of the Civil War, and a few months ago was a spectator at the re-enactment of the Battle of Manassas, or Bull Run.

He was the author of "Life and Literature," editor of "St. Teresa, an autobiography," and translator of "Christ in the Christian Life According to St. Paul," by Duperrayl, and "Stations of the Cross," by former French Ambassador Paul Claudel.

French Doctor's Term For Espionage Upheld

Paris, Oct. 30 (A.P.).—A court of appeals in closed session rejected today the appeal of Dr. Eugene Barre, convicted of delivering French military and diplomatic documents to Germany. His sentence of four years' imprisonment was upheld.

The court added 30 months each to the sentences of the physician's accomplices, Mrs. Isabelle Queyrel and her husband, who already had been ordered imprisoned for two years each.

Newspaper Bankrupt.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 30 (A.P.).—The Louisville Herald-Post, an afternoon newspaper, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy today and its attorneys said publication would be suspended after today. D. A. Sachs, attorney, representing major creditor interests, said it was hoped that publication would be resumed later.

Mr. Roosevelt On Waste.

Voters listening to President Roosevelt's Pittsburgh speech must have experienced a moment of real excitement. The President had subjected his eager followers to some rather dull figures on the cost of living. Then suddenly burst upon their ears an unbelievable declaration. "We are seeking," the President said, "new means to eliminate waste . . . "

Wild thoughts must have run through the minds of the audience. Some doubtless shook themselves and looked around to make certain they had not wandered into a Republican rally. Others must have had the momentary rapture of visualizing Harry Hopkins looking for a job. Business men doubtless began to jot down on their shirt cuffs a thousand and one suggestions by which the President could "eliminate waste." Spoilsmen present, and there were plenty at Pittsburgh, must have had a sickening sensation below the diaphragm.

All critical or realistic minds in the audience probably experienced an uncontrollable impulse to guffaw. Here was the man who who increased Federal expenditures by 72 per cent after promising to reduce them by 25 per cent, looking for "new ways to eliminate waste" four days before the election. Mr. Roosevelt had at last reached the ultimate height of comedy.

But in a flash it was all made clear. The President was still speaking: "We are seeking new means to eliminate waste and unnecessary duplication in distribution for the benefit of both producer and consumer." So after all, he was only talking about agricultural marketing. There was no justification in the hasty assumption that Mr. Roosevelt has any idea of eliminating waste in the places where its total runs both to billions and to votes.

Tax Suggestions.

In spite of optimistic assurances and promises from both Presidential candidates that the budget can be balanced without an increase in taxation, Mr. Stephen Duggan, in a letter on this page today, expresses strong dissent. His reasons are well taken, both candidates being committed to programs entailing large outlays for which new revenue must be found. And it seems unlikely that increased returns from existing taxes will suffice.

Regardless of the extent of the new revenue need, however, Mr. Duggan raises a different, although closely related, question in pointing to the possibility of drawing more heavily upon direct income taxes as a source of revenue. He notes that in the very highest brackets, incomes of $1,000,000 or more, our tax rate now exceeds that of Great Britain, whereas the combined State and Federal tax on incomes of $20,000 is only about half the rates applied by either Great Britain or Germany. Our correspondent concludes, therefore, that the resentment toward the President's plan for taxing incomes is unjustified; he should be praised rather than blamed for laudable efforts to substitute direct income taxes for indirect levies upon the consuming masses.

The main defect with this argument is that it overlooks the very significant fact that the Roosevelt policy does not contemplate imposing taxes upon the lower income classes at all comparable to the impositions laid upon the taxpayers of small means in Great Britain and Germany. It is estimated, for instance, that in 1933 over 7 per cent of the people of Great Britain paid income taxes as compared with only 1.5 per cent of the population of this country. And the rates in the lowest brackets are extraordinarily low in the United States. In short, our income tax is a class tax, par excellence, instead of being a well-distributed levy imposed with a view to making the public tax conscious as well as with intention to produce additional revenue.

Nevertheless the assumption that greater reliance upon direct taxation will relieve the people at large from paying heavier indirect taxes to support their Government simply does not hold water. There is a strong implication in Mr. Duggan's letter that such is the case. As a matter of fact, the scale of Government spending has reached a point where we must rely heavily upon indirect taxes, regardless of our preferences.

The burden of the indirect load can be somewhat lightened by a lowering of exemptions and a more vigorous taxation of the lower income classes. It certainly cannot be removed by simply raising the taxes on incomes of the rich and moderately well-to-do.

Gross Impropriety.

Recently Chairman Winant of the Social Security Board resigned his office in order to be free to defend it publicly against partisan attacks. "I do not feel that members of independent commissions or boards such as the Social Security Board should take an active part in politics," he explained, in tendering his resignation to the President.

Although Mr. Winant leaned over backward to avoid the appearance of evil, his attitude stands in refreshing contrast to the position taken by Chairman Jones of the RFC. Mr. Jones not only sees no impropriety in publicly defending the record of the agency he heads. He lauds it as a product of the Roosevelt Administration which got off to a slow and bad start under the preceding Administration. And he is very careful to suppress the fact that the original New Deal intention was to scrap the Hoover agency from which he now seeks to extract votes for Mr. Roosevelt.

Even if the charges of Mr. Jones could be substantiated, they would come with ill grace from the head of a governmental lending agency established to serve banking, business and industry without regard to party. In a recent address on "Roosevelt and Recovery," Mr. Jones conceded that the RFC was set in motion "under a bi-partisan movement," but added that under Republican leadership it was "too timid and too slow to save us from disaster." To President Roosevelt he assigns the credit for overhauling this creaking mechanism, and giving it "gas and acceleration."

The gross impropriety of this type of criticism, on the part of the responsible head of an organization whose effectiveness depends upon its freedom from political entanglements, is obvious. The dangerous precedent set by Mr. Jones is best realized by considering how demoralizing it would be if the members of all our so-called independent administrative bodies, such as the SEC, the ICC, and the Federal Reserve Board, were to plunge into the heat of political campaigns, giving the public partisan, incomplete and biased accounts of the performances of the agencies they represent.

Mr. Jones actually dares to assert that "five to seven billion dollars, judiciously lent in 1931 and '32," would have prevented the bank failures "and averted the complete breakdown in business, agriculture and industry." The chairman of the RFC complacently forgets the opposition which the Hoover Administration encountered from Democratic Congressmen when it asked for emergency lending powers. Some of its requests were denied. Indeed, it was not until the Roosevelt Administration came into office, and gradually awoke to the constructive possibilities of this Republican agency, that Congress consented to permit direct RFC loans to industry and advances to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

These obstacles were slight disabilities, however, compared to the damage done by Vice-President Garner in forcing publication of the names of credit institutions borrowing from the RFC, over the protests of the board and of every informed person who understood the danger of precipitating bank runs. His action has been described by one well-informed commentator as "premeditated political sabotage." Certainly whatever motives lay behind publication of the names of borrowing banks, the consequences justified the predictions of disaster.

RFC aid was widely interpreted as a sign of weakness, with the result that a new epidemic of bank runs and closings followed, while banks needing loans were afraid to apply for them. Thus the progress made toward restoring confidence in the banking system was undone by a mischievous publicity that served no good purpose since all needed safeguards against misuse of funds could have been provided by confidential reports to appropriate Congressional committees. The speedy repeal of the publicity provision after President Roosevelt took office is a significant indictment of the motives behind the Garner policy.

The surest way to destroy public confidence in the nonpolitical management of the RFC is to countenance political activity on the part of its official heads. Mr. Jones' partisan speeches, and his completely unjustified attempts to credit the New Deal with all the achievements of the great lending agency which he heads, are a debauchery of good administration. He has forfeited all right to be regarded as the independent administrator of a bi-partisan Federal board.

Man And Machine.

Curiously, the brunt of modern seafaring develops not on the high seas as in former days but within hail of shore. The strain of maneuvering a veritable island of steel in and out of harbor is tremendous. This is not to suggest that the remainder of a voyage on a vessel such as the Queen Mary is child's play. On the contrary, every minute that an 80,000-ton vessel is away from dock the responsibility for those in charge counts heavily.

That Sir Edgar was equal to the assignment and navigated the world's largest ship, as he did all his lesser commands, without accident of any kind is a mark of his caliber and a testimony to the merchant marine system which produced him. That his reliability took heavy toll on him it needs no autopsy to say.

An Evaded Issue.

It is difficult to see how President Roosevelt could give any really satisfactory answer now to those exceedingly general questions which demand a categorical statement on whether or not, in the event of re-election, he proposes to revive the NRA. Put without qualification such inquiries are virtually meaningless, which perhaps explains why they are brought forward so vociferously at this time.

In the first place it is well to remember that the Supreme Court in the Schechter case unanimously undermined the NRA at two distinct and sweeping points—illegal delegation of legislative powers and illegal regulation of intrastate transactions which affect interstate commerce only indirectly. It follows that, without constitutional amendment, no edict-issuing agency at all similar to that over which Gen. Johnson once presided can even be visualized. The President does not have to admit this publicly in order to make the fact entirely clear.

In the second place, any legislation attempting to re-establish the constructive cooperative principles which NRA sought to attain by impossible short cuts would have to be passed by Congress. If, as all but fanatical supporters of Mr. Roosevelt hope, the opposition in Congress is greatly strengthened next Tuesday, it will not be easy to sell the legislature anything even remotely resembling the old blue eagle. Those who have accepted a pig in a poke once are certainly going to examine at least the outlines of the bag next time.

These facts being as they are, it is well to remember that the problems which NRA tried blunderingly and ineffectually to meet are still in large degree with us. And if Mr. Roosevelt has utterly failed to say what he proposes to do about them, Mr. Landon has also side-stepped. The latter really sheds very little light on the actual picture when he says that if elected he intends to see that "the anti-trust laws are strengthened and enforced without fear or favor."

The trouble with that rousing slogan is its lack of realism. There is already on the statute books, entirely independent of NRA, a mass of contradictory regulatory legislation the aggregate meaning of which is clear to no man, and certainly not to the Federal authorities called upon to enforce it. It is unfortunate that during the campaign no thinking has been directed to the issue of whether business should remain at the mercy of the present anti-trust laws, or whether it is socially advisable to endeavor to recapture the possible benefits of associated activity under regularized agreements similar to the ill-fated codes.

The willingness with which many business men submitted to the restraints of NRA in the beginning is not to be forgotten. It was due to a reasonable hope that codes of trade practice, when fully established, would enable them to elevate competitive standards by curbing unfair practices. Many advocates of the experiment anticipated that it would help the little fellow to preserve his independence by protecting him from the competitive assaults of the more powerful. We would be a very short-sighted people if we recalled only the mistaken methods of NRA and not the desirability of some of the objectives it sought to attain.

Nobody with the slightest knowledge of the infinite complexity of our industrial structure wants to witness a revival of the scheme which was already moribund before the Supreme Court mercifully put it out of existence. On the other hand nobody with any knowledge of the facts, nobody who has read the Patman act, for instance, can believe that business is now enjoying a happy emancipation from bureaucratic rule.

Not a day passes without its requests for clarification of the Patman act in particular, and for official guidance from the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice on matters of trade policy in general. Mr. Landon, vigorously denouncing private monopoly and urging strengthening of the anti-trust laws, simultaneously praises "the American system of free competition." But even with the anti-trust laws as they are, to follow the principles of free competition is to run afoul of them.

These are important and pressing issues which President Roosevelt has ignored and which Gov. Landon has failed to meet. Obviously the solution does not lie in any attempted restoration of the old NRA. But it may well be that in the trade practice provisions of that defunct experiment will be found a clew to the ultimate solution.

A traveler who recently spent several months in the Arctic reports that the Eskimos are a happy and contented people. This most unusual situation is probably accounted for by the fact that Eskimos don't know about so many things they haven't got and can't get along without.

"Why is a man afraid of a woman who has more intelligence than he?" an editor asks. We don't know. Why is he also afraid of a woman equally intelligent, or one who is just a plain dumbbell?

We approve, to some extent at least, the Government's policy of soaking the rich, but we do think that when a man acquires a million dollars three times he should be allowed to keep it.

On Mirror-Reading.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the purpose of correcting an erroneous impression given in an article on mirror-reading in The Post of October 13, I would appreciate the publication of this letter which defines more correctly the situation as it is currently understood.

It has been found that there is but little relationship between left-handedness and left-eyedness with reading disabilities. However, where the child has been compelled to use his right hand, when he is naturally left-handed, there results a confusion in direction so that the reversal in the order of letters is a word or words as a whole, results.

It has been our experience that the child's emotional make-up and personality is more directly related to the problem than the question of handedness or eyedness. Moreover, parental attitudes toward the child and school figure largely in the difficulty. This removes the responsibility of the problem from the school or teaching methods to the child and home in question. It is clear that the great majority of children learn to read regardless of method used. Children who, for some reason, do not learn readily by methods that are successful with the large majority of children require a specialized approach which combines therapy, directed toward a change in the child's behavior patterns and parental attitudes and special reading helps adapted to their individual needs.

Agricultural Subsidies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not legitimate for the Government to subsidize any one industry. Both political parties favor subsidies to agriculture upon the excuse that Eastern manufacturers have received huge subsidies by means of the protectors tariff. But two wrongs do not make a right. Equal rights for all should be the rule and in accordance with this principle, tariff walls should be abolished in order to provide free trade. Subsidies to farmers should cease.

Just as water seeks its own level, so in like manner by the natural law of supply and demand men will change from one vocation to another when a better opportunity so inclines them to do. For the Government to interfere with subsidies for any industry puts the whole system out of order. It provides an artificial attraction to that industry and so creates a vicious circle. With agriculture it causes an increase in the artificial price of land with consequent artificially high prices for all agriculture products.

All industries, including agriculture, are overcrowded because of our monstrous system of taxation. By the use of labor-saving machinery only a fraction of the labor previously required on farms is now necessary. The 75,000 men who came to Kansas at harvest time 20 years ago are not now needed. Possibly 70 per cent of the present farm population could raise all the produce needed. To assume that the Government should guarantee the prosperity of all farmers is absurd. HENRY WARE ALLEN.

Symphony Ushers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Repercussions between the Summer Symphony Association and the National Symphony Orchestra having apparently spent themselves and passed on, the City of Washington again sits back and rejoices over its orchestral attractions. Thus it should be.

But one item has come to my attention that goes deeper under my skin than the disgust originally fermented by the symphony brawl.

The ushers for the National Symphony Orchestra are, in the main, music-loving college students and young men interested, to a degree, in the cultural. This past summer they migrated to the Water Gate, bent on ushering at the concerts in order to hear the music offered by the summer symphonies.

Summer having passed on and the National Symphony having pompously ushered in the new season, the young men returned to Constitution Hall, to their former haunts, seeking once again to resume their ushering at that place. But the door is not open to them, so the chief usher says, because, he explains, it would be inconsistent to hire ushers who worked for the summer symphonies.

Having been a slave to art and music, he finds that his devotion has cost him his pleasure. Someone, indeed, has suffered from all the noise and, as is usually the case, the little man, the lowly usher, is out in the cold. SORE.

Few Side-Wheelers In 1886.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your reporter in writing regarding the fiftieth anniversary of the unveiling of Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor says: "Those were the days of side-wheel steamers on the Atlantic." He refers to October 28, 1886.

He is mistaken—the screw-propeller that drove side-wheelers off the ocean was perfected by Ericsson, shortly after the Civil War, following approaches to the subject by John Stevens in 1802; Evans and Fitch in 1780-90; James Bushness during the American Revolution, and James Watt who sketched a propeller almost coincident with his invention of the steam engine. The Cunard and White Star Lines, the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., and Lamport and Holt were not using a single side-wheeler for transatlantic service in 1886, I am sure. KNOWLEDGE.

"An Increase In Taxation Is Inevitable."

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt stated at Pittsburgh that if the national income keeps on rising at the present rate, the budget can probably be balanced within a year or two without increase of taxation. I do not share Mr. Roosevelt's optimism. To me an increase in taxation is inevitable. If there is no increase next year, there will be in the following years. For purely partisan purposes the Republicans have promised that if they win the election there will be no increase in taxation, but they know better. They have assured the unemployed that relief will be continued; they have promised a subsidy to save the farmer, they are strong for the great increase in the cost of national defense. Where will all the money to meet these needs, additional to ordinary administrative expenditures, come from if not from increased taxes? From more bond issues? But such issues are the same thing under another name.

The economic depression has compelled every government to increase taxation in order to meet the emergency. The public debt of Great Britain is $40,000,000,000. As of August 31, 1936, our Federal public debt was $33,380,468,640, and the total debt of our States is estimated at $2,500,000,000. But whereas Great Britain has a population of 40,000,000 to bear its public debt, we have a population three times as great. And our resources and public revenue are greater. The income tax in the lower levels of income is much less in the United States than in Great Britain. It rises with the increase in income.

The Brookings Institution was good enough to provide me with some figures. The recipient of a personal income of $20,000 would pay a tax of 13.5 per cent of that amount (Federal and New York State combined). In Germany the tax on the same income would have been 26.9 per cent and in Great Britain 26.3 per cent. It is only when we reach the very high incomes that our combined Federal and New York State taxes compare with those of Great Britain For an income of $1,000,000 the tax in Great Britain would amount to 61.4 per cent, as compared with our 65.3 per cent. These figures do not seem to justify the noisy resentment that characterizes our tax discussion. It seems to me that Mr. Roosevelt should be applauded instead of blamed for his effort to substitute increases in the income taxes whose incidence can be seen rather than approve indirect taxes such as the sales tax, which is very difficult to trace and falls upon the poorer elements of the population with special severity. It is gratifying to learn that Mr. Landon also opposes the sales tax.

In the carrying out of his policies Mr. Roosevelt is accused of stimulating class hatreds. Early in his Administration he promised "to drive the money changers from the temple" and he has referred at other times in disparaging terms to financial and industrial manipulators, "economic royalists," who create no wealth but secure big profits. I doubt that the mass of his countrymen who suffered so much from the manipulations of some of these men condemn Mr. Roosevelt for his denunciations. Nothing that Mr. Roosevelt has said compares in bitterness with the attacks made by his enemies upon himself. Certainly his denunciations do not compare in violence with the diatribes of Theodore Roosevelt against the same gentry in his day. Those of us old enough to have lived through his Administration will not easily forget the manner in which he stigmatized "the malefactors of great wealth" as the real enemies of their country. I did not feel then that Theodore Roosevelt was inciting class hatred, and I do not feel now that Franklin Roosevelt is doing so. I believe both were stating facts.

Al Smith and others have expressed outraged indignation that many of the promises in the Democratic platform of 1932 should not have been fulfilled. It must be obvious to any thoughtful observer that as early as June, 1932, it would have been utterly impossible to foresee which promises could be realized in the crisis of March, 1933. But what shall we say of the Republican platform of June, 1936, which contains absolutely contradictory promises?

In one place the voter is assured that his welfare depends upon a high tariff levied upon foreign goods. In another place he is assured that it is dependent upon the foreign market being saved for his surplus goods. It also is interesting that the Republican platform of 1932 should have advocated our entrance into the World Court while the Republican platform of 1936 states that we must not enter it. Every Republican President since the war—Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, has urged us to join; so has every Republican Secretary of State—Hughes, Kellogg and Stimson. Mr. Landon has just denounced any thought of joining. Why are these men discredited now? Can it be that to discredit them was the price paid for Mr. Borah's hoped-for support? If so, the price was high for this support has not yet been forthcoming.

Finally, I advocate the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt for a very practical reason. Mr. Roosevelt is now completing his first term as President of the United States during one of the most crucial periods in our history. He has had an unusual experience. As the result of it he has learned a great deal and his objective and the ways of realizing it are becoming clearer to himself and his associates. That he should have made some mistakes during his first term is most natural. He is human, and the emergency was exigent. That he will make fewer mistakes during his second Administration is a reasonable expectation. The emergency is not over despite the fact that everything points to improvement; it is no time to swap horses.

Mr. Landon appears to be an honest, sincere and patriotic man. But apart from relative personal capacities it can hardly be assumed that his two years' experience as Governor of Kansas has fitted him better to guide the country in the difficult days ahead than the four years' experience of Mr. Roosevelt in carrying on one of the most difficult jobs that ever fell to the lot of a man.

Halloween Customs.

THERE is no night in the year which popular imagination has stamped with a more peculiar character than All Saints' Eve, or as it is called customarily, Halloween. Halloween observances originated in the British Isles whence they were brought to America by English, Scottish and Irish colonists, none of whom apparently were identified with the Massachusetts Bay Colony, where amusements of all sorts were anathema.

Many customs associated with Halloween made the night big with prophecy to the peasantry. Burns has embodied the best account of them in his poem and notes on Halloween, written, as he tells us, "because the passion of prying into the future makes a striking part of the history of human nature in its rude state, in all ages and nations."

* * *

The chief use to which the "charms" and spells of Halloween were put was the endeavor to discover the identity of partners in married life. The first method employed was that of going out blindfolded into the cabbage patch at night and pulling a cabbage. Burns describes this: "They must go out hand in hand, with eyes shut, and pull the first cabbage they meet with; its being big or little, straight or crooked, is prophetic of the size and shape of the grand object of all their spells—the husband or wife. If any yird, or earth, stick to the roots, that is tocher, or fortune, and the taste of the custoc, that is, the heart of the stem, is indicative of the natural temper and disposition. Lastly the stems are placed at the head of the door, and the Christian names of the people whom chance brings into the house are, according to the priority of placing, the names in question."

Another custom was the cracking of nuts. One method was this: Two nuts to which the names of a couple of lovers were given were put into the fire together. If they lay still and burned together it prognosticated a happy marriage or hopeful love; if, on the contrary, they bounced asunder, the sign was unpropitious.

Then there was the sowing of hempseed in the dark. In certain districts in Ireland it was thought that the maiden, while doing this, would see the apparition of her future husband if she looked back. Others thought that the man who reaped the hempseed would be the lucky one.

* * *

Burns describes another "charm" which consisted in going unperceived and alone to the barn, opening both doors and taking them off the hinges, if possible, for there was a danger that the "being" about to appear might shut the doors and do some mischief. With the instrument called a wecht used in winnowing corn, the attitudes of letting down the corn against the wind were assumed. This operation was repeated three times, and the third time an apparition passed through the doors, in at the windy door and out at the other, having both the figure in question and an appearance marking the employment or station in life.

In certain parts of Ireland one of the "charms" indulged in during Halloween was to fling a ball of yarn out of the window in the dark, wind it on another reel from inside, and at the same time say the Pater Noster backward (a somewhat difficult feat, by the way). While doing this the maiden was supposed to be able see the apparition of her future husband.

A ceremony formerly carried out in Scotland, but now fallen into desuetude, was that known as the "Three Dishes," or "Luggies." Two of the vessels were filled respectively with clean and dirty water, while one remained empty. The dishes were arranged on the hearth, and the interested parties, blindfolded, advanced in succession and dipped their fingers into one of them. If they dipped into the clean water, they were to wed a maiden; if into the dirty water, a widow; if into the empty dish, he was destined to be either a bachelor or an old maid.

In my early days, spent in a northern town where practically all the inhabitants were natives of the Emerald Isle, Halloween was known as "cauld-cannon night," and was usually gaily celebrated, by groups gathered at a neighbor's house for "cauld-cannon" supper.

This special dish was a decoction of white cabbage, young parsnips, potatoes and milk, and the ingredients were boiled for several hours before being served, usually from an immense skillet or an exaggerated earthen dish. A portion was first taken out for the children; in the remainder were put a ring, a piece of silver (customarily a shilling-piece), and a white horn-button.

Each of these had a special significance—the ring, if found by an unmarried person, meant a happy marriage; if found by a married person, it meant long years of wedded bliss; the shilling was an omen that whosoever found it would become prosperous; the unfortunate who "got the button" was doomed to a career of shreds and patches. From what I learn the younger folk in the old home town no longer know the recipe for making "cauld-cannon."

In earlier days among the Gaelic people some of these simple folk ascribed to children born on Halloween the possession of mysterious faculties, such as that of being able to hold converse with the spirits of relatives who had passed beyond. If I remember aright, Scott, in "The Monastery," makes allusion to this popular belief.

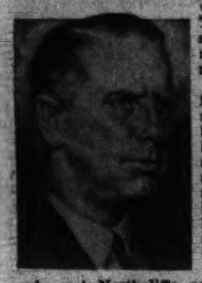
'Ot Stuff And 'Ot Stuff.

WE ARE TOLD that the law of the land rather than a self-imposed bashfulness, prevents mention of the Simpson divorce case in the English papers, and that we should envy their respect for the privacy of the individual. That is a handsome old superstition about lift in the mother country which does not stand close inspection.



They do have their laws in England, and, generally speaking, they obey them better than we observe ours, but if a story is big enough an English paper can go ahead and print it—and get away with it, as the late Lord Northcliffe proved in his historic expose of the shell shortage in the early days of the World War.

Under the defense of the realm act Northcliffe could have been locked up in the Tower and hanged with a rope of theoretical silk for revealing the desperate plight of the E. E. F. in France, for he thus gave aid and comfort to the enemy. Alarm spread in the homeland and shook the people's confidence in their government and their high command. In that case, however, violation of law was deemed to be in the public interest, and there is no record of Northcliffe's ever being "had up," as they say, although the law was explicit and so was he.

IN VIEW OF the information which Americans received about the Simpson case it might be argued that here, again, the welfare of the empire is involved through a situation affecting the dignity of the crown. But Northcliffe didn't criticize or defy the King; he merely exposed the blundering complacency of the politicians in the government, and that was a different matter, although the legal and ethical principles were the same. He broke the law deliberately and for a patriotic purpose and made the law like it, and his ethics were indorsed with tremendous circulation figures by a grateful nation.

The present case is the greatest divorce story in the history of journalism. History books will be telling it 100 years from now, and actors will portray it on the stage, though the English papers ignore it while it is news. It contains romanticelements which reduce to tawdry counterfeit the risy Hollywood and Reno actions which constantly excite the English press, and the political and historical possibilities are such that the case of Manuel ind Galby may be made to seem distinctly bush leame.

Moreover, the English are thorough masters if not the inventors of the "I hear" and "they say" schol of journalism, the questioning innuendo and he sly hint which get the story across without laying it on the line, and they could handle this one in that familiar technique if they were not restrained by a special consideration for royalty. Those who belie that the keyhole and backstairs style of reportin is an invention of Broadway simply happen not to know that they were doing it a long time in Englan before it became an American vice.

• • • •

BUT THE TRADITION that the English press s uncommonly sentitive about the privacy of the individual dies harder than the equally stubborn legent about the Englishman's bath. The Englishman gd his reputation as a bather by sloshing himself wit a bucket in the far countries where the natives ge wet only if caught in the rain. When modern plumbing was invented the Americans became the bathing est race of all, and those who went to England were unable to reconcile the old joke-book tradition with the lead and tin tub and the penny geyser concealed in a converted broom closet somewhere under the stairs.

The tradition about individual privacy comes fro such stogy institutions as the Times and Guardiann complete disregard of the popular English pres, which outsells the venerable blankets 50 to 1 and lo revels in the private affairs of individuals, especia Americans.

But knowing their avidity for 'ot stuff, as they c it, under American date lines, their appetite for pe sonal scandals occurring over here, one can only d cide that in the present case the press of Englan has lifted its cap to a fast grounder and let it ro to the outfield to cool off.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

It Won't Be Long Now.

I.
How good it will seem in a very few days
To sit by the window once more
As neighborhood microphones roar!
How nice it will be to tune in on the mike
And turn all the air stations loose
Without being sprayed with invective and bilge

II.
How sweet it will seem to hear singing again
With lines about love and romance,
And never a trace of those ponderous guys
Who always had ants in their pants!
How soothing to pick up a paper at will
And get back to holdups and wars—
To kidnapings, fires and murders and such
Instead of these microphone bores!

III.
How blissful to meet at the corner a man
Who simply observes "Lovely day!"
Who talks of the weather and asks of my health,
Ignoring the whole U. S. A.!
Who talks about football and hockey results
Who never once says, "You're a Communist dog!"
Or punches me smack on the nose!

IV.
How restful to sit in the office all day
And never hear sound trucks below
That bellow canned warnings of chaos ahead
And shatter my nerves as they go!
How blessed to know my stenographer's well
And able to sit up and work,
Unbruised by a fight over politics that
She had with the front office clerk!

V.
How sweet just to feel that election is o'er,
No matter who lost or who won—
To know the result is official and that
There's nothing just now to be done!
To know that the country is still on the map—
To feel that the sun can still rise—

L'Envoi.

How soothing to tell all the shouting is done,
That from all the bunk we are free!
Whenever elections are over I find
I even get on well with me!

New York Report

Empire State Observer Predicts Landon Will Carry State And Lehman Be Re-elected With Sharply Reduced Plurality.

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

NEW YORK CITY is a fair-sized place, and the 24 per cent increase in registration to 2,900,000 is either phenomenal or phony. Undoubtedly the Democrats have had the best of the rush for enrollment, for, while there has been an increase of 15 per cent in the registration of the State generally, the rural regions, where the Republicans are strongest, have lagged and the gains are chiefly in the up-State cities, in many of which Farley and the Labor Party expect to muster considerable strength.

Nevertheless, if New York City is a teeming metropolis, New York State is quite a populous area, too. The 2,900,000 potential votes in the city have to be matched against 3,300,000 more in the rest of the State. If the trend of the voting as reported in the Literary Digest is accepted, the city will vote for Roosevelt somewhat better than 2 to 1 and the rest of the State will line up against him somewhat less than 3 to 1.

But the situation is admittedly more confused and troubled with cross currents than these figures indicate. Any good Roosevelt man will gladly point out to you that the Bronx is straw-balloting for the President in a ratio of 4 to 1 and any sound Republican will come right back to oblige with the Buffalo poll, which shows 4 to 1 against him.

Frauds Charged In Heavy Registration.

AND NOW comes the Honest Ballot Association with an explanation of the heavy metropolitan registration which sends cold shivers up the backs of the Republicans. They say they already have uncovered fraudulent registrations at a rate which, if continued, would total approximately 240,000 ringers and phoneys in New York City alone. Republican leaders in Brooklyn assert that alien WPA workers are being forced to register as citizens and that thousands and thousands have registered from parks, garages and boarded-up lofts.

This, of course, is an old Tammany custom which the New Dealers may have improved upon. The police, responsible to LaGuardia, who is trailing with the pro-Roosevelt Labor Party, are checking up, as the law compels them to do. They say it isn't so. So does the Democratic State Attorney General—even before he has investigated. But it is an interesting coincidence that 240,000 votes beyond their normal excess in the city is just about what the Democrats think they need to offset the Republican plurality up-State. Still and all, as the old saying goes, the Republicans may have salted down a few beyond the Bronx, too.

Even though Farley may have collected some extra votes "in the bag" to pour out at a late hour if returns from other and earlier States look gloomy, his confident voice seems to be developing a certain edginess. Annoyed at the number of Democrats who have flocked to Bleakley in Westchester, he has described their preambulation as a "betrayal." And, indeed, his relations with Tammany are not as pleasant as they might be. To be brutally frank, they are rotten.

Labor Party Perhaps Too Well Established.

IT WAS Jim Farley, that dauntless radical, who, with David Dubinsky, Sidney Hillman, John M. Lewis and other radicals, established the Labor Party in New York. And it looks now as though they established it just too darned well. The Labor Party is organizing on a permanent basis in every assembly district of the city. This seems an odd thing to be doing if they are merely allied together to elect Roosevelt and Lehman, for they forgot to indorse all the rest of the candidates on the Democratic ticket. It looks as though the local Democratic Party would derive no benefit whatever from the Labor Party and is merely going to suffer by subtraction.

Does Tammany intend to suffer in silence? Will the Democratic Party of New York City behave like the Democratic Party of Minnesota and meekly commit suicide? Not by jugfull, even though LaGuardia and Roosevelt would love it. Farley knows that Tammany will strain every nerve to register its full Democratic strength so that it won't be crowded out of its dominant position by the Laborites when the noses are counted. But what Farley does not know is whether or not the disgruntled braves are going to jiggle the little triggers on the voting machines so that Roosevelt's name won't show on their Democratic ballot. This is what is known as a "knifing." It has been done before, and the Tammany mood this fall is not exactly bland. As somebody put it, now that Tammany is in a wrestling match with the Labor Party, "the only way they can win is to lose." This merely means to lose Roosevelt.

However, the best prediction at this stage of the game is merely guessing. The nearest thing we have to prophecy in this faithless age is the straw polls. The Literary Digest poll, which is a secret ballot, indicates Landon carrying New York by a not too comfortable plurality. The Daily News poll, which is more or less of an open vote openly arrived at, is overwhelmingly Roosevelt. The betting odds are all Roosevelt. My opinion is that Landon will carry the State, but that Lehman will be re-elected by a much reduced plurality.

Indeed, I suspect that opinions reached a month ago are much sounder than those formed on today's outlook. It was possible then to feel the deep tides that were running, while there is so much froth on the surface today and such frantic agitation of the waves that the best judgment is obscured.

The only certainty, as I see it, is that the American people, on November 3, will elect at least one more President.

Clarke Out as Head Of Chicago Utility

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Harley L. Clarke today retired as president of the $400,000,000 Utilities Power & Light Corporation, huge international concern he founded more than two decades ago.

The action, however, was assumed by observers in the financial district to be the outgrowth of a battle for domination of the company that has been going on between Clarke and the Atlas Corporation, New York investment company, for more than a year.

The announcement, barely 50 words in length, came from directors, and was issued from the office of R. R. Monroe, executive vice president, who, it was believed, would be in charge of the company's operations until a new president is named. Clarke retains his directorship.

Defense for China Stressed by Chiang

Nanking, Oct. 30 (AP).—China's necessity for national defense was emphasized tonight in a nation-wide message from Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, military overlord of the Nanking government, who will celebrate his fiftieth birthday tomorrow.

"No nation can ruin us unless we first ruin ourselves," the president of the Chinese executive council declared. "The worse our domestic disaster, the stronger we must make our will. If we continue struggling with a single purpose, ultimate triumph over our difficulties is certain."

Chiang was not expected to be present at the capital's birthday celebration in his honor, as he is in Sianfu conferring with Northern Chinese leaders.

Clazencio, 46-year-old laborer, clipped the locks of a neighbor in Lockport, Ill., on July 17, 1934. He was charged with cutting hair without a State license. Police Magistrate Robert Dunn fixed his fine at $25 and costs but did not collect the $27.25 because the defendant was jobless at the time.

Recently, officials learned Clazencio was working at an oil plant. When he objected to paying the fine this morning, he was put into the Will County Jail to serve it out.

For Allah, For Spain And For Loot!

PERHAPS the victories claimed by the Spanish government in the fighting taking place in the Toledo-Madrid sector will prove to be like earlier reports of the capture of Oviedo, Huesca, Granada and other strategic points long held by the rebels, only a flash in the pan. It may also be that, even if this report is correct, it is too late for the loyalists to stem the tide that set in weeks ago with the capture by Gen. Franco of Badajoz, and which has been followed by a succession of rebel victories bringing the insurgent armies to the very gates of the capital.

Yet, if Premier Largo Caballero's confident statement is true that the government is now "in possession of formidable mechanized equipment" including tanks and a powerful air force, a sudden and radical change in the present balance of power in Spain can by no means be ruled out.

Certainly if the government has at last succeeded in securing equipment to match the equipment long possessed by its enemies, the optimistic belief in rebel quarters that the week-end will find Gen. Franco in the capital may be belied by events, as have been so many previous statements of the sort.

The Spanish civil war is now in its sixteenth week. Yet the rebel leaders were certain, when they raised the banner of revolt, that the Popular Front government would disappear with one whiff of grapeshot. But they have found it necessary steadily to push forward the date of entry into Madrid. And even now, with rebel outposts almost within gun range of the capital, one really decisive victory by the loyalists might completely turn the tide of battle.

MR. FRANK L. KLUCKHORN of the New York Times, after spending many weeks in the various fighting zones in Spain, and in neighboring Portugal, cables from London the significant fact that, "so violent has been the sniping and guerrilla warfare back of Gen. Franco's lines that in the last ten days he has opened a reign of terror along the whole rebel line from Maqueda, near Madrid, through Talavera de la Reina to Badajoz."

This throws a curious light on the claims made by the rebel supporters that, in the words of the statement recently issued in the name of those ardent democrats, Mussolini and Hitler, Gen. Franco commands the "support of the Spanish people." Indeed, in view of the enormous superiority of equipment, organization, training and discipline which the rebels have enjoyed over the government from the very beginning of the uprising, the surprising thing is not that the rebels have advanced as far as they have.

The surprising thing is that, since the fall of Toledo over four weeks ago, their progress toward Madrid has been so slow. This creates the suspicion that while they may have the planes and tanks and heavy artillery in abundance they are short of civilian support. In consequence Gen. Franco has been compelled to consolidate his advance point by point, while carrying out, as Mr. Kluckhorn reports, mopping operations in regions already conquered. It has been impossible for him, therefore, to strike a sudden blow at Madrid.

THE SAME WRITER blandly ignores the diplomatically convenient assumption of the so-called committee of neutrals at London that the charges made against Italy and Portugal of having aided the rebels despite their pledge of non-intervention do not hold water.

Having himself seen the Italian and German equipment possessed by the rebels and the Italian and German personnel aiding Gen. Franco, he refuses to be taken in. Gen. Franco's army, he says, is not what it was originally. He still has his Moors and his Foreign Legionnaires. But he is also in possession, Mr. Kluckhorn asseverates, of Italian and German planes numbering more than 100, of 40 Italian tanks and of other equipment supplied by the Fascist powers. "The backbone of Gen. Franco's army," it is his opinion, "is now Italian, German and Moorish."

It is this army, some would have the world believe, which is fighting for traditional Spain against alien elements accused of having taken over the direction of affairs at Madrid.

That army may win. There is no denying that possibility, although even now all is not lost for the government. But if the rebels do win it will be no victory of right over wrong; it will only be a victory of superior equipment over inferior equipment; of mercenaries fighting for so much per day plus the prospect of loot over ill-trained levies fighting for ideals that may be wrong but which they believe in. It will, in the last analysis, be a triumph of brute force.

God, said Napoleon cynically, is always on the side of the heaviest battalions. It does not follow that the heaviest battalions are necessarily on the side of God.

Hundredth Novel

By William Lyon Phelps

E. Phillips Oppenheim.

The new book by E. Phillips Oppenheim, published this summer by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, under the title "The Magnificent Hoax," is his one hundredth novel, and there ought to be some kind of a celebration, for in the annals of book-making this is an extraordinary event. Many persons have written 100 novels, but not many have succeeded in getting that number published.

How long has it taken him to write 100 novels, remembering also that he produced a good many other volumes? Well, Edward Phillips Oppenheim was born in 1866, was educated in a grammar school in the county of Leicester, England, married an American, and has spent his life writing books indoors and playing games outdoors.

Although he is one of the best-known and most widely read of living British authors, his name does not appear in the 1921 edition of Manly & Rickert's "Contemporary British Literature," and he is not mentioned in the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica or in Everyman's Encyclopedia. Such is the fate of one who has entertained and delighted millions of readers. "He does not belong."

The picture of him on the jacket of this latest book can hardly be accurate. Now, he was obliged to give up writing because he could dictate so much faster. And he was obliged to give up composition in any form at what had been his favorite time for such work.

You see, it had been his custom to dictate his novels in the morning, but when he went to live in the south of France, where he is now, he found that interfered with golf, for there everybody plays in the morning. The afternoons after 3 o'clock are generally visited by detestable weather. Thus he had to change his habits; and now he composes and dictates these delectable mystery stories between tea and dinner. William De Morgan told me that was his favorite time for writing, although he wrote with pen and ink.

It seems to me astonishing that a man can dictate novels with such complicated plots; but then it is astonishing that out of 100 published, nearly all are good.

Harris & Ewing.

REAR ADMIRAL HARRY E. YARNELL.

Murfin Trades Posts in Navy With Yarnell

Exchange of command took place aboard the flagship of the fleet, the U. S. S. Augusta, at Shanghai, China. Admiral Murfin, it was revealed, will sail immediately for Honolulu and assume duty about November 13 as commandant of the Fourteenth Naval District and of the Navy Yard in Pearl Harbor, succeeding Admiral Yarnell in that command.

Born in Independence, Iowa, October 18, 1875, Admiral Yarnell was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1892, and graduated in the class of 1896. He completed the Naval War College course in 1914.

At the outset of the World War he was in command of the U. S. S. Nashville, and from December, 1917, until August, 1918, he served as aid on the staff of the commander of the United States naval forces operating in European waters. In this capacity he won high praise from the late Admiral Sims.

Served Here Two Years.

He served in the office of Naval Operations, Navy Department, from September, 1918, until September, 1920, when he assumed command of destroyer flotilla 1, with additional duty in command of destroyer flotilla 9, squadron 1, of the Atlantic Fleet.

For his service in the World War he was awarded the Navy Cross.

Admiral Yarnell also was decorated by the British government as companion of the Order of the British Empire, and awarded the diploma of the Grant of Dignity of the Order of the British Empire.

In 1921 he became commander of destroyer squadron 1 of the Atlantic Fleet, and from 1922 until 1924 he saw service as chief of staff, commander destroyer squadrons, Atlantic Fleet, and commandant of the Naval Air Station, Hampton Roads, Va.

He was in command of the aircraft squadrons of the scouting fleet from June, 1924, until September, 1926, and subsequently was named to the staff of the Naval War College, at Newport, R. I.

Commanded Saratoga.

In 1927 he commanded the U. S. S. Saratoga, and in September, 1928, was commissioned engineer in chief and chief of the Bureau of Engineering of the Navy Department.

He served as naval adviser at the London Naval Conference in 1930, and was in command of the Aircraft Battle Force, with additional duty as commander, aircraft, U. S. Fleet, from June, 1931, until June, 1933.

Prior to his appointment as chief of the Asiatic Fleet he served as commandant of the Navy Yard at Honolulu. His home is in Le Mars, Iowa.

A native of Furnace, Ohio, Admiral Murfin was born April 13, 1876. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1897, and for his services in charge of the U. S. mine bases in Scotland during the World War, he won the Distinguished Service Medal.

From August 1, 1931, until June 1, 1934, he served as Judge Advocate General of the Navy. On October 4, 1935, he assumed his duties as commander in chief of the U. S. Asiatic Fleet.

Roosevelt Backed By Edison's Son

Emphasizing that he did not wish to influence the vote of any of his employes, Edison said his statement was issued because he could "no longer remain silent in view of the tactics employed in this campaign during the past week."

The inventor's son, who is resting at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., said he belied the "great issue" of the campaign was based "on the conflict of two fundamentally different beliefs."

On one hand, he said, there were people who believed in survival of the strongest while on the other hand there were those who "agree with the President, who said that we must 'wage warfare against the grim tradition that every man must look out for himself.'"

Text of Roosevelt's Address

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 30.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address tonight at a Democratic rally in the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

During the last month I have seen a great deal of our country and a great many of our people. Both the America and the Americans I have seen look very different from three and a half years ago.

Many important things have happened to them in these three and a half years. I could talk to you for hours about this better, happier America. What I am going to talk to you about for a few minutes, however, is some of the things that have brought that better, happier America to pass. I want to tell you in terms of actual achievement what we in Washington have done—what we have done to restore prosperity—what we have done to end abuses.

The first thing was to give aid to those overtaken by disaster. We did that, and we are not ashamed of giving to those who needed help. We furnished food relief, drought relief, flood relief, work relief. We established the Federal Emergency Relief Administration; the Public Works Administration; the Civilian Conservation Corps; the Works Progress Administration. Some people ridicule them as alphabetical agencies. But you and I know that they are the agencies that have substituted food for starvation; work for idleness; hope instead of dull despair.

And on November 3 America will say that that was a job well done!

Got All Wheels Going.

The second thing we did was to help our stalled economic engine to get under way again. We knew enough about the mechanism of our economic order to know that we could not do that one wheel at a time. We had had enough of one-wheel economics. We proposed to get all four wheels started at once. We knew that it was no good to try to start only the wheel of finance. At the same time we had to start the wheels of agriculture, of workers of all classes, of business and industry.

By demoralizing the work of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and redirecting it into more practical and helpful channels we furnished fuel for the machine.

We primed the pump by spending government money in direct relief, in work relief, in public works.

We established the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; the National Recovery Administration; the Farm Credit Administration; the soil conservation program; the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; the Federal Housing Administration; the Tennessee Valley Authority; we set up a sound monetary policy; a sound banking structure; reciprocal trade agreements; foreign exchange accords.

We set up a National Labor Relations Board to improve working conditions and seek industrial peace. We brought the business men of the nation together to encourage them to increase wages, to shorten working hours, to abolish child labor.

Took Step for Security.

With labor's aid and backing, we took the first great step for workers' security by the Social Security Act—an act which is now being misrepresented to the workers in a pay-envelope propaganda by a few employers whom you will easily recognize as old time exploiters of labor who have always fought against contributing anything themselves to a sound security for the laboring man and his wife and children.

That act is a new Magna Charta for those who work. In its preparation and in its enactment, it was supported not only by organized labor, but by those other liberal groups—workers, employers, churches, private charities, educators who for many years have believed that modern government can make provision against the hardship of unemployment and the terrors of old age.

On the passage of this law, in addition to overwhelming support on the part of Democrats in both the House and Senate, the country should note that 77 Republican Representatives voted for it and only 18 against it, and that in the Senate 15 Republican Senators voted for it and only 5 against it.

This fact is perhaps illustrative of the paradox that in the closing days of the campaign, Republican leadership driven to desperation and urged on by the same sinister forces which generation after generation have opposed all social legislation, now repudiate their own Representatives and Senators in the halls of Congress and leave them looking positively silly.

Had Liberal Government.

The people of the State of New York recognize in this issue in a national campaign only another form of the struggle to which we have become accustomed in this State for many years past. Every man and woman here knows that we have been blessed with these great social reforms because we have had liberal government in Albany. We know that we would not have had them if the old guard Republican leadership had been in power.

Gov. Lehman has not merely exemplified in his splendid objectives this spirit of far-sighted progress, but he has practiced what he has preached, and thereby has continued to strengthen the civic conscience of the people of this State. There are none among you who believe that on Tuesday next there is one chance in a thousand that New York State will turn its government back to the old guard.

To go back to what the Federal Government has done in the past three and one-half years, some people call these things waste. You and I know that they are the means by which our stalled machine was started again.

And on November 3 America will say that that was a job well done!

The third thing we did was to look to the future—to root out abuses—to establish every possible defense against a return of the evils which brought the crash. We established the Securities Exchange Commission; banking reforms; a sound monetary policy; deposit insurance for 50,000,000 bank accounts—all aimed to safeguard the thrift of our citizens.

Loosened Monopolies' Grip.

By our tax policy and by regulating financial markets, we loosened the grip which monopolies had fastened upon independent American business. We have begun also to free American business and American labor from the unfair competition of a small unscrupulous minority. We established by statute a curb upon the overweening power and unholy practices of some utility holding companies.

By the rural electrification act, by the Tennessee Valley Authority and similar projects we set up yardsticks to bring electricity at cheaper rates to the average American farm and the average American home. Through loans to private enterprise we promoted slum-clearance and low-cost modern housing. We set up a National Youth Administration to keep our youth in school and to hold open for them the door of opportunity. By a successful war on crime we have made America's homes and places of business safer against the gangster, the kidnaper and the racketeer.

Some people call these things meddling and interference. You and I know them to be new stones in a foundation—a foundation on which we can, and are determined to, build a structure of economic security for all our people—a safer, happier, more American America.

On November 3, the American people will say that that is a job well begun!

These are the things we have done. They are a record of three and a half years crowded with achievements—significant of better life for all the people. Every group in our national life has benefited, because what we have done for each group has produced benefits for every other group. In our policies there are no distinctions between them. There will be none. If we are in trouble we are all of us in trouble together. If we are to be prosperous, if we are to be secure, we must all be prosperous and secure together.

Fostered Classes.

Unfortunately, those who now raise the cry of class distinctions are the very leaders whose policies in the past have fostered such distinctions. When they were in power, they were content in the belief that the chief function of government was to help only those at the top in the pious hope that the few at the top would in their benevolence or generosity pass that help on.

That theory of government has been banished from Washington. It did not work. It was not and cannot be the answer to our problem. We have united all classes in the Nation in a program for the Nation. In doing that, we have bridged the gulf of antagonism which 12 years of neglect had opened up between them.

An equally important task remains: to go forward, to consolidate and to strengthen these gains—to close the gap by destroying the glaring inequalities of opportunity and of security which, in the recent past, have set group against group and region against region.

By our policies for the future we will carry forward this program of unity. We will not be content until all our people fairly share in the ever-increasing capacity of America to provide a high standard of living for all its citizens.

On November third, the American people will say that our policy for the future is their policy for the future.

President Urges Nov. 11 Observance

President Roosevelt, in a proclamation released at the White House yesterday, called on the people of the United States to set aside November 11 for a celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice.

The President asked that the day commemorating the end of World War hostilities be the occasion for displaying the flag on all Government buildings. The observance, he said, should be marked by "appropriate ceremonies in schools and churches, or other suitable places."

The proclamation was issued in accordance with a resolution passed by Congress in 1926, requesting the President to invite general participation in the holiday.

Half-Million in Milan Give Mussolini Welcome

Milan, Oct. 30 (AP).—Half a million citizens of this great industrial center swung into the streets in cheering gala groups today to welcome Benito Mussolini, the one-time Milanese editor.

RA Drought Relief Cost $8,378,735

By the Associated Press.

Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement Administration, announced yesterday his agency had expended $8,378,735 up to October 24 to aid 256,955 farm families in drought areas. He added the figures indicated the climax of the drought relief program "is fast approaching."

"These figures are practically double those of a month ago," Tugwell said. He added that Resettlement was "now the only Federal agency giving direct relief in the form of emergency grants."

Tugwell said the drought-relief proram was being financed "from a $20,000,000 allotment."

Tugwell said the agency will continue its work "through the winter, or as long as the emergency exists, assisting through loans and grants those families whose feed and food supplies have been destroyed by the drought."

Mr. Roosevelt On Waste.

Voters listening to President Roosevelt's Pittsburgh speech must have experienced a moment of real excitement. The President had subjected his eager followers to some rather dull figures on the cost of living. Then suddenly burst upon their ears an unbelievable declaration. "We are seeking," the President said, "new means to eliminate waste . . . "

Wild thoughts must have run through the minds of the audience. Some doubtless shook themselves and looked around to make certain they had not wandered into a Republican rally. Others must have had the momentary rapture of visualizing Harry Hopkins looking for a job. Business men doubtless began to jot down on their shirt cuffs a thousand and one suggestions by which the President could "eliminate waste." Spoilsmen present, and there were plenty at Pittsburgh, must have had a sickening sensation below the diaphragm.

All critical or realistic minds in the audience probably experienced an uncontrollable impulse to guffaw. Here was the man who who increased Federal expenditures by 72 per cent after promising to reduce them by 25 per cent, looking for "new ways to eliminate waste" four days before the election. Mr. Roosevelt had at last reached the ultimate height of comedy.

But in a flash it was all made clear. The President was still speaking: "We are seeking new means to eliminate waste and unnecessary duplication in distribution for the benefit of both producer and consumer." So after all, he was only talking about agricultural marketing. There was no justification in the hasty assumption that Mr. Roosevelt has any idea of eliminating waste in the places where its total runs both to billions and to votes.

Tax Suggestions.

In spite of optimistic assurances and promises from both Presidential candidates that the budget can be balanced without an increase in taxation, Mr. Stephen Duggan, in a letter on this page today, expresses strong dissent. His reasons are well taken, both candidates being committed to programs entailing large outlays for which new revenue must be found. And it seems unlikely that increased returns from existing taxes will suffice.

Regardless of the extent of the new revenue need, however, Mr. Duggan raises a different, although closely related, question in pointing to the possibility of drawing more heavily upon direct income taxes as a source of revenue. He notes that in the very highest brackets, incomes of $1,000,000 or more, our tax rate now exceeds that of Great Britain, whereas the combined State and Federal tax on incomes of $20,000 is only about half the rates applied by either Great Britain or Germany. Our correspondent concludes, therefore, that the resentment toward the President's plan for taxing incomes is unjustified; he should be praised rather than blamed for laudable efforts to substitute direct income taxes for indirect levies upon the consuming masses.

The main defect with this argument is that it overlooks the very significant fact that the Roosevelt policy does not contemplate imposing taxes upon the lower income classes at all comparable to the impositions laid upon the taxpayers of small means in Great Britain and Germany. It is estimated, for instance, that in 1933 over 7 per cent of the people of Great Britain paid income taxes as compared with only 1.5 per cent of the population of this country. And the rates in the lowest brackets are extraordinarily low in the United States. In short, our income tax is a class tax, par excellence, instead of being a well-distributed levy imposed with a view to making the public tax conscious as well as with intention to produce additional revenue.

Nevertheless the assumption that greater reliance upon direct taxation will relieve the people at large from paying heavier indirect taxes to support their Government simply does not hold water. There is a strong implication in Mr. Duggan's letter that such is the case. As a matter of fact, the scale of Government spending has reached a point where we must rely heavily upon indirect taxes, regardless of our preferences.

The burden of the indirect load can be somewhat lightened by a lowering of exemptions and a more vigorous taxation of the lower income classes. It certainly cannot be removed by simply raising the taxes on incomes of the rich and moderately well-to-do.

Gross Impropriety.

Recently Chairman Winant of the Social Security Board resigned his office in order to be free to defend it publicly against partisan attacks. "I do not feel that members of independent commissions or boards such as the Social Security Board should take an active part in politics," he explained, in tendering his resignation to the President.

Although Mr. Winant leaned over backward to avoid the appearance of evil, his attitude stands in refreshing contrast to the position taken by Chairman Jones of the RFC. Mr. Jones not only sees no impropriety in publicly defending the record of the agency he heads. He lauds it as a product of the Roosevelt Administration which got off to a slow and bad start under the preceding Administration. And he is very careful to suppress the fact that the original New Deal intention was to scrap the Hoover agency from which he now seeks to extract votes for Mr. Roosevelt.

Even if the charges of Mr. Jones could be substantiated, they would come with ill grace from the head of a governmental lending agency established to serve banking, business and industry without regard to party. In a recent address on "Roosevelt and Recovery," Mr. Jones conceded that the RFC was set in motion "under a bi-partisan movement," but added that under Republican leadership it was "too timid and too slow to save us from disaster." To President Roosevelt he assigns the credit for overhauling this creaking mechanism, and giving it "gas and acceleration."

The gross impropriety of this type of criticism, on the part of the responsible head of an organization whose effectiveness depends upon its freedom from political entanglements, is obvious. The dangerous precedent set by Mr. Jones is best realized by considering how demoralizing it would be if the members of all our so-called independent administrative bodies, such as the SEC, the ICC, and the Federal Reserve Board, were to plunge into the heat of political campaigns, giving the public partisan, incomplete and biased accounts of the performances of the agencies they represent.

Mr. Jones actually dares to assert that "five to seven billion dollars, judiciously lent in 1931 and '32," would have prevented the bank failures "and averted the complete breakdown in business, agriculture and industry." The chairman of the RFC complacently forgets the opposition which the Hoover Administration encountered from Democratic Congressmen when it asked for emergency lending powers. Some of its requests were denied. Indeed, it was not until the Roosevelt Administration came into office, and gradually awoke to the constructive possibilities of this Republican agency, that Congress consented to permit direct RFC loans to industry and advances to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

These obstacles were slight disabilities, however, compared to the damage done by Vice-President Garner in forcing publication of the names of credit institutions borrowing from the RFC, over the protests of the board and of every informed person who understood the danger of precipitating bank runs. His action has been described by one well-informed commentator as "premeditated political sabotage." Certainly whatever motives lay behind publication of the names of borrowing banks, the consequences justified the predictions of disaster.

RFC aid was widely interpreted as a sign of weakness, with the result that a new epidemic of bank runs and closings followed, while banks needing loans were afraid to apply for them. Thus the progress made toward restoring confidence in the banking system was undone by a mischievous publicity that served no good purpose since all needed safeguards against misuse of funds could have been provided by confidential reports to appropriate Congressional committees. The speedy repeal of the publicity provision after President Roosevelt took office is a significant indictment of the motives behind the Garner policy.

The surest way to destroy public confidence in the nonpolitical management of the RFC is to countenance political activity on the part of its official heads. Mr. Jones' partisan speeches, and his completely unjustified attempts to credit the New Deal with all the achievements of the great lending agency which he heads, are a debauchery of good administration. He has forfeited all right to be regarded as the independent administrator of a bi-partisan Federal board.

Man And Machine.

Curiously, the brunt of modern seafaring develops not on the high seas as in former days but within hail of shore. The strain of maneuvering a veritable island of steel in and out of harbor is tremendous. This is not to suggest that the remainder of a voyage on a vessel such as the Queen Mary is child's play. On the contrary, every minute that an 80,000-ton vessel is away from dock the responsibility for those in charge counts heavily.

That Sir Edgar was equal to the assignment and navigated the world's largest ship, as he did all his lesser commands, without accident of any kind is a mark of his caliber and a testimony to the merchant marine system which produced him. That his reliability took heavy toll on him it needs no autopsy to say.

An Evaded Issue.

It is difficult to see how President Roosevelt could give any really satisfactory answer now to those exceedingly general questions which demand a categorical statement on whether or not, in the event of re-election, he proposes to revive the NRA. Put without qualification such inquiries are virtually meaningless, which perhaps explains why they are brought forward so vociferously at this time.

In the first place it is well to remember that the Supreme Court in the Schechter case unanimously undermined the NRA at two distinct and sweeping points—illegal delegation of legislative powers and illegal regulation of intrastate transactions which affect interstate commerce only indirectly. It follows that, without constitutional amendment, no edict-issuing agency at all similar to that over which Gen. Johnson once presided can even be visualized. The President does not have to admit this publicly in order to make the fact entirely clear.

In the second place, any legislation attempting to re-establish the constructive cooperative principles which NRA sought to attain by impossible short cuts would have to be passed by Congress. If, as all but fanatical supporters of Mr. Roosevelt hope, the opposition in Congress is greatly strengthened next Tuesday, it will not be easy to sell the legislature anything even remotely resembling the old blue eagle. Those who have accepted a pig in a poke once are certainly going to examine at least the outlines of the bag next time.

These facts being as they are, it is well to remember that the problems which NRA tried blunderingly and ineffectually to meet are still in large degree with us. And if Mr. Roosevelt has utterly failed to say what he proposes to do about them, Mr. Landon has also side-stepped. The latter really sheds very little light on the actual picture when he says that if elected he intends to see that "the anti-trust laws are strengthened and enforced without fear or favor."

The trouble with that rousing slogan is its lack of realism. There is already on the statute books, entirely independent of NRA, a mass of contradictory regulatory legislation the aggregate meaning of which is clear to no man, and certainly not to the Federal authorities called upon to enforce it. It is unfortunate that during the campaign no thinking has been directed to the issue of whether business should remain at the mercy of the present anti-trust laws, or whether it is socially advisable to endeavor to recapture the possible benefits of associated activity under regularized agreements similar to the ill-fated codes.

The willingness with which many business men submitted to the restraints of NRA in the beginning is not to be forgotten. It was due to a reasonable hope that codes of trade practice, when fully established, would enable them to elevate competitive standards by curbing unfair practices. Many advocates of the experiment anticipated that it would help the little fellow to preserve his independence by protecting him from the competitive assaults of the more powerful. We would be a very short-sighted people if we recalled only the mistaken methods of NRA and not the desirability of some of the objectives it sought to attain.

Nobody with the slightest knowledge of the infinite complexity of our industrial structure wants to witness a revival of the scheme which was already moribund before the Supreme Court mercifully put it out of existence. On the other hand nobody with any knowledge of the facts, nobody who has read the Patman act, for instance, can believe that business is now enjoying a happy emancipation from bureaucratic rule.

Not a day passes without its requests for clarification of the Patman act in particular, and for official guidance from the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice on matters of trade policy in general. Mr. Landon, vigorously denouncing private monopoly and urging strengthening of the anti-trust laws, simultaneously praises "the American system of free competition." But even with the anti-trust laws as they are, to follow the principles of free competition is to run afoul of them.

These are important and pressing issues which President Roosevelt has ignored and which Gov. Landon has failed to meet. Obviously the solution does not lie in any attempted restoration of the old NRA. But it may well be that in the trade practice provisions of that defunct experiment will be found a clew to the ultimate solution.

A traveler who recently spent several months in the Arctic reports that the Eskimos are a happy and contented people. This most unusual situation is probably accounted for by the fact that Eskimos don't know about so many things they haven't got and can't get along without.

"Why is a man afraid of a woman who has more intelligence than he?" an editor asks. We don't know. Why is he also afraid of a woman equally intelligent, or one who is just a plain dumbbell?

We approve, to some extent at least, the Government's policy of soaking the rich, but we do think that when a man acquires a million dollars three times he should be allowed to keep it.

On Mirror-Reading.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For the purpose of correcting an erroneous impression given in an article on mirror-reading in The Post of October 13, I would appreciate the publication of this letter which defines more correctly the situation as it is currently understood.

It has been found that there is but little relationship between left-handedness and left-eyedness with reading disabilities. However, where the child has been compelled to use his right hand, when he is naturally left-handed, there results a confusion in direction so that the reversal in the order of letters is a word or words as a whole, results.

It has been our experience that the child's emotional make-up and personality is more directly related to the problem than the question of handedness or eyedness. Moreover, parental attitudes toward the child and school figure largely in the difficulty. This removes the responsibility of the problem from the school or teaching methods to the child and home in question. It is clear that the great majority of children learn to read regardless of method used. Children who, for some reason, do not learn readily by methods that are successful with the large majority of children require a specialized approach which combines therapy, directed toward a change in the child's behavior patterns and parental attitudes and special reading helps adapted to their individual needs.

"An Increase In Taxation Is Inevitable."

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt stated at Pittsburgh that if the national income keeps on rising at the present rate, the budget can probably be balanced within a year or two without increase of taxation. I do not share Mr. Roosevelt's optimism. To me an increase in taxation is inevitable. If there is no increase next year, there will be in the following years. For purely partisan purposes the Republicans have promised that if they win the election there will be no increase in taxation, but they know better. They have assured the unemployed that relief will be continued; they have promised a subsidy to save the farmer, they are strong for the great increase in the cost of national defense. Where will all the money to meet these needs, additional to ordinary administrative expenditures, come from if not from increased taxes? From more bond issues? But such issues are the same thing under another name.

The economic depression has compelled every government to increase taxation in order to meet the emergency. The public debt of Great Britain is $40,000,000,000. As of August 31, 1936, our Federal public debt was $33,380,468,640, and the total debt of our States is estimated at $2,500,000,000. But whereas Great Britain has a population of 40,000,000 to bear its public debt, we have a population three times as great. And our resources and public revenue are greater. The income tax in the lower levels of income is much less in the United States than in Great Britain. It rises with the increase in income.

The Brookings Institution was good enough to provide me with some figures. The recipient of a personal income of $20,000 would pay a tax of 13.5 per cent of that amount (Federal and New York State combined). In Germany the tax on the same income would have been 26.9 per cent and in Great Britain 26.3 per cent. It is only when we reach the very high incomes that our combined Federal and New York State taxes compare with those of Great Britain. For an income of $1,000,000 the tax in Great Britain would amount to 61.4 per cent, as compared with our 65.3 per cent. These figures do not seem to justify the noisy resentment that characterizes our tax discussion. It seems to me that Mr. Roosevelt should be applauded instead of blamed for his effort to substitute increases in the income taxes whose incidence can be seen rather than approve indirect taxes such as the sales tax, which is very difficult to trace and falls upon the poorer elements of the population with special severity. It is gratifying to learn that Mr. Landon also opposes the sales tax.

In the carrying out of his policies Mr. Roosevelt is accused of stimulating class hatreds. Early in his Administration he promised "to drive the money changers from the temple" and he has referred at other times in disparaging terms to financial and industrial manipulators, "economic royalists," who create no wealth but secure big profits. I doubt that the mass of his countrymen who suffered so much from the manipulations of some of these men condemn Mr. Roosevelt for his denunciations. Nothing that Mr. Roosevelt has said compares in bitterness with the attacks made by his enemies upon himself. Certainly his denunciations do not compare in violence with the diatribes of Theodore Roosevelt against the same gentry in his day. Those of us old enough to have lived through his Administration will not easily forget the manner in which he stigmatized "the malefactors of great wealth" as the real enemies of their country. I did not feel then that Theodore Roosevelt was inciting class hatred, and I do not feel now that Franklin Roosevelt is doing so. I believe both were stating facts.

Al Smith and others have expressed outraged indignation that many of the promises in the Democratic platform of 1932 should not have been fulfilled. It must be obvious to any thoughtful observer that as early as June, 1932, it would have been utterly impossible to foresee which promises could be realized in the crisis of March, 1933. But what shall we say of the Republican platform of June, 1936, which contains absolutely contradictory promises?

In one place the voter is assured that his welfare depends upon a high tariff levied upon foreign goods. In another place he is assured that it is dependent upon the foreign market being saved for his surplus goods. It also is interesting that the Republican platform of 1932 should have advocated our entrance into the World Court while the Republican platform of 1936 states that we must not enter it. Every Republican President since the war—Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, has urged us to join; so has every Republican Secretary of State—Hughes, Kellogg and Stimson. Mr. Landon has just denounced any thought of joining. Why are these men discredited now? Can it be that to discredit them was the price paid for Mr. Borah's hoped-for support? If so, the price was high for this support has not yet been forthcoming.

Finally, I advocate the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt for a very practical reason. Mr. Roosevelt is now completing his first term as President of the United States during one of the most crucial periods in our history. He has had an unusual experience. As the result of it he has learned a great deal and his objective and the ways of realizing it are becoming clearer to himself and his associates. That he should have made some mistakes during his first term is most natural. He is human, and the emergency was exigent. That he will make fewer mistakes during his second Administration is a reasonable expectation. The emergency is not over despite the fact that everything points to improvement; it is no time to swap horses.

Mr. Landon appears to be an honest, sincere and patriotic man. But apart from relative personal capacities it can hardly be assumed that his two years' experience as Governor of Kansas has fitted him better to guide the country in the difficult days ahead than the four years' experience of Mr. Roosevelt in carrying on one of the most difficult jobs that ever fell to the lot of a man.

STEPHEN DUGGAN.

Agricultural Subsidies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not legitimate for the Government to subsidize any one industry. Both political parties favor subsidies to agriculture upon the excuse that Eastern manufacturers have received huge subsidies by means of the protectors tariff. But two wrongs do not make a right. Equal rights for all should be the rule and in accordance with this principle, tariff walls should be abolished in order to provide free trade. Subsidies to farmers should cease.

Just as water seeks its own level, so in like manner by the natural law of supply and demand men will change from one vocation to another when a better opportunity so inclines them to do. For the Government to interfere with subsidies for any industry puts the whole system out of order. It provides an artificial attraction to that industry and so creates a vicious circle. With agriculture it causes an increase in the artificial price of land with consequent artificially high prices for all agriculture products.

All industries, including agriculture, are overcrowded because of our monstrous system of taxation. By the use of labor-saving machinery only a fraction of the labor previously required on farms is now necessary. The 75,000 men who came to Kansas at harvest time 20 years ago are not now needed. Possibly 70 per cent of the present farm population could raise all the produce needed. To assume that the Government should guarantee the prosperity of all farmers is absurd. HENRY WARE ALLEN.

Symphony Ushers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Repercussions between the Summer Symphony Association and the National Symphony Orchestra having apparently spent themselves and passed on, the City of Washington again sits back and rejoices over its orchestral attractions. Thus it should be.

But one item has come to my attention that goes deeper under my skin than the disgust originally fermented by the symphony brawl.

The ushers for the National Symphony Orchestra are, in the main, music-loving college students and young men interested, to a degree, in the cultural. This past summer they migrated to the Water Gate, bent on ushering at the concerts in order to hear the music offered by the summer symphonies.

Summer having passed on and the National Symphony having pompously ushered in the new season, the young men returned to Constitution Hall, to their former haunts, seeking once again to resume their ushering at that place. But the door is not open to them, so the chief usher says, because, he explains, it would be inconsistent to hire ushers who worked for the summer symphonies.

Having been a slave to art and music, he finds that his devotion has cost him his pleasure. Someone, indeed, has suffered from all the noise and, as is usually the case, the little man, the lowly usher, is out in the cold. SORE.

Few Side-Wheelers In 1886.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your reporter in writing regarding the fiftieth anniversary of the unveiling of Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor says: "Those were the days of side-wheel steamers on the Atlantic." He refers to October 28, 1886.

He is mistaken—the screw-propeller that drove side-wheelers off the ocean was perfected by Ericsson, shortly after the Civil War, following approaches to the subject by John Stevens in 1802; Evans and Fitch in 1780-90; James Bushness during the American Revolution, and James Watt who sketched a propellier almost coincident with his invention of the steam engine. The Cunard and White Star Lines, the Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., and Lamport and Holt were not using a single side-wheeler for transatlantic service in 1886, I am sure. KNOWLEDGE.

Halloween Customs.

THERE is no night in the year which popular imagination has stamped with a more peculiar character than All Saints' Eve, or as it is called customarily, Halloween. Halloween observances originated in the British Isles whence they were brought to America by English, Scottish and Irish colonists, none of whom apparently were identified with the Massachusetts Bay Colony, where amusements of all sorts were anathema.

Many customs associated with Halloween made the night big with prophecy to the peasantry. Burns has embodied the best account of them in his poem and notes on Halloween, written, as he tells us, "because the passion of prying into the future makes a striking part of the history of human nature in its rude state, in all ages and nations."

The chief use to which the "charms" and spells of Halloween were put was the endeavor to discover the identity of partners in married life. The first method employed was that of going out blindfolded into the cabbage patch at night and pulling a cabbage. Burns describes this: "They must go out hand in hand, with eyes shut, and pull the first cabbage they meet with; its being big or little, straight or crooked, is prophetic of the size and shape of the grand object of all their spells—the husband or wife. If any yird, or earth, stick to the roots, that is tocher, or fortune, and the taste of the custoc, that is, the heart of the stem, is indicative of the natural temper and disposition. Lastly the stems are placed at the head of the door, and the Christian names of the people whom chance brings into the house are, according to the priority of placing, the names in question."

Another custom was the cracking of nuts. One method was this: Two nuts to which the names of a couple of lovers were given were put into the fire together. If they lay still and burned together it prognosticated a happy marriage or hopeful love; if, on the contrary, they bounced asunder, the sign was unpropitious.

Then there was the sowing of hempseed in the dark. In certain districts in Ireland it was thought that the maiden, while doing this, would see the apparition of her future husband if she looked back. Others thought that the man who reaped the hempseed would be the lucky one.

Burns describes another "charm" which consisted in going unperceived and alone to the barn, opening both doors and taking them off the hinges, if possible, for there was a danger that the "being" about to appear might shut the doors and do some mischief. With the instrument called a wecht used in winnowing corn, the attitudes of letting down the corn against the wind were assumed. This operation was repeated three times, and the third time an apparition passed through the doors, in at the windy door and out at the other, having both the figure in question and an appearance marking the employment or station in life.

In certain parts of Ireland one of the "charms" indulged in during Halloween was to fling a ball of yarn out of the window in the dark, wind it on another reel from inside, and at the same time say the Pater Noster backward (a somewhat difficult feat, by the way). While doing this the maiden was supposed to be able see the apparition of her future husband.

A ceremony formerly carried out in Scotland, but now fallen into desuetude, was that known as the "Three Dishes," or "Luggies." Two of the vessels were filled respectively with clean and dirty water, while one remained empty. The dishes were arranged on the hearth, and the interested parties, blindfolded, advanced in succession and dipped their fingers into one of them. If they dipped into the clean water, they were to wed a maiden; if into the dirty water, a widow; if into the empty dish, he was destined to be either a bachelor or an old maid.

In my early days, spent in a northern town where practically all the inhabitants were natives of the Emerald Isle, Halloween was known as "cauld-cannon night," and was usually gaily celebrated, by groups gathered at a neighbor's house for "cauld-cannon" supper.

This special dish was a decoction of white cabbage, young parsnips, potatoes and milk, and the ingredients were boiled for several hours before being served, usually from an immense skillet or an exaggerated earthen dish. A portion was first taken out for the children; in the remainder were put a ring, a piece of silver (customarily a shilling-piece), and a white horn-button.

Each of these had a special significance—the ring, if found by an unmarried person, meant a happy marriage; if found by a married person, it meant long years of wedded bliss; the shilling was an omen that whosoever found it would become prosperous; the unfortunate who "got the button" was doomed to a career of shreds and patches. From what I learn the younger folk in the old home town no longer know the recipe for making "cauld-cannon."

In earlier days among the Gaelic people some of these simple folk ascribed to children born on Halloween the possession of mysterious faculties, such as that of being able to hold converse with the spirits of relatives who had passed beyond. If I remember aright, Scott, in "The Monastery," makes allusion to this popular belief.

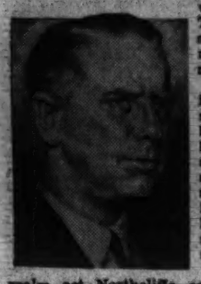
'Ot Stuff And 'Ot Stuff.



WE ARE TOLD that the law of the land, rather than a self-imposed bashfulness, prevents mention of the Simpson divorce case in the English papers, and that we should envy their respect for the privacy of the individual. That is a handsome old superstition about life in the mother country which does not stand close inspection.

They do have their laws in England, and, generally speaking, they obey them better than we observe ours, but if a story is big enough an English paper can go ahead and print it—and get away with it, as the late Lord Northcliffe proved in his historic expose of the shell shortage in the early days of the World War.

Under the defense of the realm act Northcliffe could have been locked up in the Tower and hanged with a rope of theoretical silk for revealing the desperate plight of the B. E. F. in France, for he thus gave aid and comfort to the enemy. Alarm spread in the homeland and shook the people's confidence in their government and their high command. In that case, however, violation of law was deemed to be in the public interest, and there is no record of Northcliffe's ever being "had up," as they say, although the law was explicit and so was he.

IN VIEW OF the information which Americans received about the Simpson case it might be argued that here, again, the welfare of the empire is involved through a situation affecting the dignity of the crown. But Northcliffe didn't criticize or defy the King; he merely exposed the blundering complacency of the politicians in the government, and that was a different matter, although the legal and ethical principles were the same. He broke the law deliberately and for a patriotic purpose and made the law like it, and his ethics were indorsed with tremendous circulation figures by a grateful nation.

The present case is the greatest divorce story in the history of journalism. History books will be telling it 100 years from now, and actors will portray it on the stage, though the English papers ignore it while it is news. It contains romantic elements which reduce to tawdry counterfeit the noisy Hollywood and Reno actions which constantly excite the English press, and the political and historical possibilities are such that the case of Manuel and Galby may be made to seem distinctly bush league.

Moreover, the English are thorough masters if not the inventors of the "I hear" and "they say" school of journalism, the questioning innuendo and the sly hint which get the story across without laying it on the line, and they could handle this one in that familiar technique if they were not restrained by a special consideration for royalty. Those who believe that the keyhole and backstairs style of reporting is an invention of Broadway simply happen not to know that they were doing it a long time in England before it became an American vice.

BUT THE TRADITION that the English press is uncommonly sentitive about the privacy of the individual dies harder than the equally stubborn legend about the Englishman's bath. The Englishman got his reputation as a bather by sloshing himself with a bucket in the far countries where the natives got wet only if caught in the rain. When modern plumbing was invented the Americans became the bathingest race of all, and those who went to England were unable to reconcile the old joke-book tradition with the lead and tin tub and the penny geyser concealed in a converted broom closet somewhere under the stairs.

The tradition about individual privacy comes from such stogy institutions as the Times and Guardian in complete disregard of the popular English press, which outsells the venerable blankets 50 to 1 and that revels in the private affairs of individuals, especially Americans.

But knowing their avidity for 'ot stuff, as they call it, under American date lines, their appetite for personal scandals occurring over here, one can only decide that in the present case the press of England has lifted its cap to a fast grounder and let it roll to the outfield to cool off.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

I.
How good it will seem in a very few days
To sit by the window once more
As neighborhood microphones roar!
How nice it will be to tune in on the mike
And turn all the air stations loose
Without being sprayed with invective and bilge

II.
How sweet it will seem to hear singing again
With lines about love and romance,
And never a trace of those ponderous guys
Who always had ants in their pants!
How soothing to pick up a paper at will
And get back to holdups and wars—
To kidnapings, fires and murders and such

III.
How blissful to meet at the corner a man
Ignoring the whole U. S. A.!
Who talks about football and hockey results
Who never once says, "You're a Communist dog!"
Or punches me smack on the nose!

IV.
How restful to sit in the office all day
And never hear sound trucks below
That bellow canned warnings of chaos ahead
And shatter my nerves as they go!
How blessed to know my stenographer's well
And able to sit up and work,
Unbruised by a fight over politics that

V.
How sweet just to feel that election is o'er,
No matter who lost or who won—
To know the result is official and that
There's nothing just now to be done!
To know that the country is still on the map—
To feel that the sun can still rise—

L'Envoi.

How soothing to tell all the shouting is done,
That from all the bunk we are free!
Whenever elections are over I find
I even get on well with me!

New York Report

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

NEW YORK CITY is a fair-sized place, and the 24 per cent increase in registration to 2,900,000 is either phenomenal or phony. Undoubtedly the Democrats have had the best of the rush for enrollment, for, while there has been an increase of 15 per cent in the registration of the State generally, the rural regions, where the Republicans are strongest, have lagged and the gains are chiefly in the up-State cities, in many of which Farley and the Labor Party expect to muster considerable strength.

Nevertheless, if New York City is a teeming metropolis, New York State is quite a populous area, too. The 2,900,000 potential votes in the city have to be matched against 3,300,000 more in the rest of the State. If the trend of the voting as reported in the Literary Digest is accepted, the city will vote for Roosevelt somewhat better than 2 to 1 and the rest of the State will line up against him somewhat less than 3 to 1.

But the situation is admittedly more confused and troubled with cross currents than these figures indicate. Any good Roosevelt man will gladly point out to you that the Bronx is straw-balloting for the President in a ratio of 4 to 1 and any sound Republican will come right back to oblige with the Buffalo poll, which shows 4 to 1 against him.

Frauds Charged In Heavy Registration.

AND NOW comes the Honest Ballot Association with an explanation of the heavy metropolitan registration which sends cold shivers up the backs of the Republicans. They say they already have uncovered fraudulent registrations at a rate which, if continued, would total approximately 240,000 ringers and phoneys in New York City alone. Republican leaders in Brooklyn assert that alien WPA workers are being forced to register as citizens and that thousands and thousands have registered from parks, garages and boarded-up lofts.

This, of course, is an old Tammany custom which the New Dealers may have improved upon. The police, responsible to LaGuardia, who is trailing with the pro-Roosevelt Labor Party, are checking up, as the law compels them to do. They say it isn't so. So does the Democratic State Attorney General—even before he has investigated. But it is an interesting coincidence that 240,000 votes beyond their normal excess in the city is just about what the Democrats think they need to offset the Republican plurality up-State. Still and all, as the old saying goes, the Republicans may have salted down a few beyond the Bronx, too.

Even though Farley may have collected some extra votes "in the bag" to pour out at a late hour if returns from other and earlier States look gloomy, his confident voice seems to be developing a certain edginess. Annoyed at the number of Democrats who have flocked to Bleakley in Westchester, he has described their preambulation as a "betrayal." And, indeed, his relations with Tammany are not as pleasant as they might be. To be brutally frank, they are rotten.

Labor Party Perhaps Too Well Established.

IT WAS Jim Farley, that dauntless radical, who, with David Dubinsky, Sidney Hillman, John M. Lewis and other radicals, established the Labor Party in New York. And it looks now as though they established it just too darned well. The Labor Party is organizing on a permenent basis in every assembly district of the city. This seems an odd thing to be doing if they are merely called together to elect Roosevelt and Lehman, for they forgot to indorse all the rest of the candidates on the Democratic ticket. It looks as though the local Democratic Party would derive no benefit whatever from the Labor Party and is merely going to suffer by subtraction.

Does Tammany intend to suffer in silence? Will the Democratic Party of New York City behave like the Democratic Party of Minnesota and meekly commit suicide? Not by a jugfull, even though LaGuardia and Roosevelt would love it. Farley knows that Tammany will strain every nerve to register its full Democratic strength so that it won't be crowded out of its dominant position by the Laborites when the noses are counted. But what Farley does not know is whether or not the disgruntled braves are going to jiggle the little triggers on the voting machines so that Roosevelt's name won't show on their Democratic ballot. This is what is known as "knifing." It has been done before, and the Tammany mood this fall is not exactly bland. As somebody put it, now that Tammany is in a wrestling match with the Labor Party, "the only way they can win is to lose." This merely means to lose Roosevelt.

However, the best prediction at this stage of the game is merely guessing. The nearest thing we have to prophecy in this faithless age is the straw polls. The Literary Digest poll, which is a secret ballot, indicates Landon carrying New York by a not too comfortable plurality. The Daily News poll, which is more or less of an open vote openly arrived at, is overwhelmingly Roosevelt. The betting odds are all Roosevelt. My opinion is that Landon will carry the State, but that Lehman will be re-elected by a much reduced plurality.

Indeed, I suspect that opinions reached a month ago are much sounder than those formed on today's outlook. It was possible then to feel the deep tides that were running, while there is so much froth on the surface today and such frantic agitation of the waves that the best judgment is obscured.

The only certainty, as I see it, is that the American people, on November 3, will elect at least one more President.

Clarke Out as Head Of Chicago Utility

Chicago, Oct. 30 (AP).—Harley L. Clarke today retired as president of the $400,000,000 Utilities Power & Light Corporation, huge international concern he founded more than two decades ago.

The action, however, was assumed by observers in the financial district to be the outgrowth of a battle for domination of the company that has been going on between Clarke and the Atlas Corporation, New York investment company, for more than a year.

The announcement, barely 50 words in length, came from directors, and was issued from the office of R. R. Monroe, executive vice president, who, it was believed, would be in charge of the company's operations until a new president is named. Clarke retains his directorship.

Defense for China Stressed by Chiang

Nanking, Oct. 30 (AP).—China's necessity for national defense was emphasized tonight in a nation-wide message from Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, military overlord of the Nanking government, who will celebrate his fiftieth birthday tomorrow.

"No nation can ruin us unless we first ruin ourselves," the president of the Chinese executive council declared. "The worse our domestic disaster, the stronger we must make our will. If we continue struggling with a single purpose, ultimate triumph over our difficulties is certain."

Chiang was not expected to be present at the capital's birthday celebration in his honor, as he is in Sianfu conferring with Northern Chinese leaders.

Clazencio, 46-year-old laborer, clipped the locks of a neighbor in Lockport, Ill., on July 17, 1934. He was charged with cutting hair without a State license. Police Magistrate Robert Dunn fixed his fine at $25 and costs but did not collect the $27.25 because the defendant was jobless at the time.

Recently, officials learned Clazencio was working at an oil plant. When he objected to paying the fine this morning, he was put into the Will County Jail to serve it out.

For Allah, For Spain And For Loot!

PERHAPS the victories claimed by the Spanish government, in the fighting taking place in the Toledo-Madrid sector will prove to be like earlier reports of the capture of Ovieda, Huesca, Granada and other strategic points long held by the rebels, only a flash in the pan. It may also be that, even if this report is correct, it is too late for the loyalists to stem the tide that set in weeks ago with the capture by Gen. Franco of Badajoz, and which has been followed by a succession of rebel victories bringing the insurgent armies to the very gates of the capital.

Yet, if Premier Largo Caballero's confident statement is true that the government is now "in possession of formidable mechanized equipment" including tanks and a powerful air force, a sudden and radical change in the present balance of power in Spain can by no means be ruled out.

Certainly if the government has at last succeeded in securing equipment to match the equipment long possessed by its enemies, the optimistic belief in rebel quarters that the week-end will find Gen. Franco in the capital may be belied by events, as have been so many previous statements of the sort.

The Spanish civil war is now in its sixteenth week. Yet the rebel leaders were certain, when they raised the banner of revolt, that the Popular Front government would disappear with one whiff of grapeshot. But they have found it necessary steadily to push forward the date of entry into Madrid. And even now, with rebel outposts almost within gun range of the capital, one really decisive victory by the loyalists might completely turn the tide of battle.

MR. FRANK L. KLUCKHORN of the New York Times, after spending many weeks in the various fighting zones in Spain, and in neighboring Portugal, cables from London the significant fact that, "so violent has been the sniping and guerrilla warfare back of Gen. Franco's lines that in the last ten days he has opened a reign of terror along the whole rebel line from Maqueda, near Madrid, through Talavera de la Reina to Badajoz."

This throws a curious light on the claims made by the rebel supporters that, in the words of the statement recently issued in the name of those ardent democrats, Mussolini and Hitler, Gen. Franco commands the "support of the Spanish people." Indeed, in view of the enormous superiority of equipment, organization, training and discipline which the rebels have enjoyed over the government from the very beginning of the uprising, the surprising thing is not that the rebels have advanced as far as they have.

The surprising thing is that, since the fall of Toledo over four weeks ago, their progress toward Madrid has been so slow. This creates the suspicion that while they may have the planes and tanks and heavy artillery in abundance they are short of civilian support. In consequence Gen. Franco has been compelled to consolidate his advance point by point, while carrying out, as Mr. Kluckhorn reports, mopping operations in regions already conquered. It has been impossible for him, therefore, to strike a sudden blow at Madrid.

THE SAME WRITER blandly ignores the diplomatically convenient assumption of the so-called committee of neutrals at London that the charges made against Italy and Portugal of having aided the rebels despite their pledge of non-intervention do not hold water.

Having himself seen the Italian and German equipment possessed by the rebels and the Italian and German personnel aiding Gen. Franco, he refuses to be taken in. Gen. Franco's army, he says, is not what it was originally. He still has his Moors and his Foreign Legionnaires. But he is also in possession, Mr. Kluckhorn asseverates, of Italian and German planes numbering more than 100, of 40 Italian tanks and of other equipment supplied by the Fascist powers. "The backbone of Gen. Franco's army," it is his opinion, "is now Italian, German and Moorish."

It is this army, some would have the world believe, which is fighting for traditional Spain against alien elements accused of having taken over the direction of affairs at Madrid.

That army may win. There is no denying that possibility, although even now all is not lost for the government. But if the rebels do win it will be no victory of right over wrong; it will only be a victory of superior equipment over inferior equipment; of mercenaries fighting for so much per day plus the prospect of loot over ill-trained levies fighting for ideals that may be wrong but which they believe in. It will, in the last analysis, be a triumph of brute force.

God, said Napoleon cynically, is always on the side of the heaviest battalions. It does not follow that the heaviest battalions are necessarily on the side of God.

Hundredth Novel

By William Lyon Phelps

E. Phillips Oppenheim.

The new book by E. Phillips Oppenheim, published this summer by Little, Brown & Co., Boston, under the title "The Magnificent Hoax," is his one hundredth novel, and there ought to be some kind of a celebration, for in the annals of book-making this is an extraordinary event. Many persons have written 100 novels, but not many have succeeded in getting that number published.

How long has it taken him to write 100 novels, remembering also that he produced a good many other volumes? Well, Edward Phillips Oppenheim was born in 1866, was educated in a grammar school in the county of Leicester, England, married an American, and has spent his life writing books indoors and playing games outdoors.

Although he is one of the best-known and most widely read of living British authors, his name does not appear in the 1921 edition of Manly & Rickert's "Contemporary British Literature," and he is not mentioned in the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica or in Everyman's Encyclopedia. Such is the fate of one who has entertained and delighted millions of readers. "He does not belong."

The picture of him on the jacket of this latest book can hardly be accurate. Now, he was obliged to give up writing, because he could dictate so much faster. And he was obliged to give up composition in any form at what had been his favorite time for such work.

You see, it had been his custom to dictate his novels in the morning, but when he went to live in the south of France, where he is now, he found that interfered with golf, for there everybody plays in the morning. The afternoons after 3 o'clock are generally visited by detestable weather. Thus he had to change his habits; and now he composes and dictates these delectable mystery stories between tea and dinner. William De Morgan told me that was his favorite time for writing, although he wrote with pen and ink.

It seems to me astonishing that a man can dictate novels with such complicated plots; but then it is astonishing that out of 100 published, nearly all are good.

Harris & Ewing.

REAR ADMIRAL HARRY E. YARNELL.

Exchange of command took place aboard the flagship of the fleet, the U. S. S. Augusta, at Shanghai, China. Admiral Murfin, it was revealed, will sail immediately for Honolulu and assume duty about November 13 as commandant of the Fourteenth Naval District and of the Navy Yard in Pearl Harbor, succeeding Admiral Yarnell in that command.

Born in Independence, Iowa, October 18, 1875, Admiral Yarnell was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1892, and graduated in the class of 1896. He completed the Naval War College course in 1914.

At the outset of the World War he was in command of the U. S. S. Nashville, and from December, 1917, until August, 1918, he served as aid on the staff of the commander of the United States naval forces operating in European waters. In this capacity he won high praise from the late Admiral Sims.

Served Here Two Years.

He served in the office of Naval Operations, Navy Department, from September, 1918, until September, 1920, when he assumed command of destroyer flotilla 1, with additional duty in command of destroyer flotilla 9, squadron 1, of the Atlantic Fleet.

For his service in the World War he was awarded the Navy Cross.

Admiral Yarnell also was decorated by the British government as companion of the Order of the British Empire, and awarded the diploma of the Grant of Dignity of the Order of the British Empire.

In 1921 he became commander of destroyer squadron 1 of the Atlantic Fleet, and from 1922 until 1924 he saw service as chief of staff, commander destroyer squadrons, Atlantic Fleet, and commandant of the Naval Air Station, Hampton Roads, Va.

He was in command of the aircraft squadrons of the scouting fleet from June, 1924, until September, 1926, and subsequently was named to the staff of the Naval War College, at Newport, R. I.

Commanded Saratoga.

In 1927 he commanded the U. S. S. Saratoga, and in September, 1928, was commissioned engineer in chief and chief of the Bureau of Engineering of the Navy Department.

He served as naval adviser at the London Naval Conference in 1930, and was in command of the Aircraft Battle Force, with additional duty as commander, aircraft, U. S. Fleet, from June, 1931, until June, 1933.

Prior to his appointment as chief of the Asiatic Fleet he served as commandant of the Navy Yard at Honolulu. His home is in Le Mars, Iowa.

A native of Furnace, Ohio, Admiral Murfin was born April 13, 1876. He was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1897, and for his services in charge of the U. S. mine bases in Scotland during the World War, he won the Distinguished Service Medal.

From August 1, 1931, until June 1, 1934, he served as Judge Advocate General of the Navy. On October 4, 1935, he assumed his duties as commander in chief of the U. S. Asiatic Fleet.

Roosevelt Backed By Edison's Son

Emphasizing that he did not wish to influence the vote of any of his employes, Edison said his statement was issued because he could "no longer remain silent in view of the tactics employed in this campaign during the past week."

The inventor's son, who is resting at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., said he belied the "great issue" of the campaign was based "on the conflict of two fundamentally different beliefs."

On one hand, he said, there were people who believed in survival of the strongest while on the other hand there were those who "agree with the President, who said that we must 'wage warfare against the grim tradition that every man must look out for himself.'"

Text of Roosevelt's Address

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 30.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's address tonight at a Democratic rally in the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

During the last month I have seen a great deal of our country and a great many of our people. Both the America and the Americans I have seen look very different from three and a half years ago.

Many important things have happened to them in these three and a half years. I could talk to you for hours about this better, happier America. What I am going to talk to you about for a few minutes, however, is some of the things that have brought that better, happier America to pass. I want to tell you in terms of actual achievement what we in Washington have done—what we have done to restore prosperity—what we have done to end abuses.

The first thing was to give aid to those overtaken by disaster. We did that, and we are not ashamed of giving to those who needed help. We furnished food relief, drought relief, flood relief, work relief. We established the Federal Emergency Relief Administration; the Public Works Administration; the Civilian Conservation Corps; the Works Progress Administration. Some people ridicule them as alphabetical agencies. But you and I know that they are the agencies that have substituted food for starvation; work for idleness; hope instead of dull despair.

And on November 3 America will say that that was a job well done!

Got All Wheels Going.

The second thing we did was to help our stalled economic engine to get under way again. We knew enough about the mechanism of our economic order to know that we could not do that one wheel at a time. We had had enough of one-wheel economics. We proposed to get all four wheels started at once. We knew that it was no good to try to start only the wheel of finance. At the same time we had to start the wheels of agriculture, of workers of all classes, of business and industry.

By demoralizing the work of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and redirecting it into more practical and helpful channels we furnished fuel for the machine.

We primed the pump by spending government money in direct relief, in work relief, in public works.

We established the Agricultural Adjustment Administration; the National Recovery Administration; the Farm Credit Administration; the soil conservation program; the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; the Federal Housing Administration; the Tennessee Valley Authority; we set up a sound monetary policy; a sound banking structure; reciprocal trade agreements; foreign exchange accords.

We set up a National Labor Relations Board to improve working conditions and seek industrial peace. We brought the business men of the nation together to encourage them to increase wages, to shorten working hours, to abolish child labor.

Took Step for Security.

With labor's aid and backing, we took the first great step for workers' security by the Social Security Act—an act which is now being misrepresented to the workers in a pay-envelope propaganda by a few employers whom you will easily recognize as old time exploiters of labor who have always fought against contributing anything themselves to a sound security for the laboring man and his wife and children.

That act is a new Magna Charta for those who work. In its preparation and in its enactment, it was supported not only by organized labor, but by those other liberal groups—workers, employers, churches, private charities, educators who for many years have believed that modern government can make provision against the hardship of unemployment and the terrors of old age.

On the passage of this law, in addition to overwhelming support on the part of Democrats in both the House and Senate, the country should note that 77 Republican Representatives voted for it and only 18 against it, and that in the Senate 15 Republican Senators voted for it and only 5 against it.

This fact is perhaps illustrative of the paradox that in the closing days of the campaign, Republican leadership driven to desperation and urged on by the same sinister forces which generation after generation have opposed all social legislation, now repudiate their own Representatives and Senators in the halls of Congress and leave them looking positively silly.

Had Liberal Government.

The people of the State of New York recognize in this issue in a national campaign only another form of the struggle to which we have become accustomed in this State for many years past. Every man and woman here knows that we have been blessed with these great social reforms because we have had liberal government in Albany. We know that we would not have had them if the old guard Republican leadership had been in power.

Gov. Lehman has not merely exemplified in his splendid objectives this spirit of far-sighted progress, but he has practiced what he has preached, and thereby has continued to strengthen the civic conscience of the people of this State. There are none among you who believe that on Tuesday next there is one chance in a thousand that New York State will turn its government back to the old guard.

To go back to what the Federal Government has done in the past three and one-half years, some people call these things waste. You and I know that they are the means by which our stalled machine was started again.

And on November 3 America will say that that was a job well done!

The third thing we did was to look to the future—to root out abuses—to establish every possible defense against a return of the evils which brought the crash. We established the Securities Exchange Commission; banking reforms; a sound monetary policy; deposit insurance for 50,000,000 bank accounts—all aimed to safeguard the thrift of our citizens.

Loosened Monopolies' Grip.

By our tax policy and by regulating financial markets, we loosened the grip which monopolies had fastened upon independent American business. We have begun also to free American business and American labor from the unfair competition of a small unscrupulous minority. We established by statute a curb upon the overweening power and unholy practices of some utility holding companies.

By the rural electrification act, by the Tennessee Valley Authority and similar projects we set up yardsticks to bring electricity at cheaper rates to the average American farm and the average American home. Through loans to private enterprise we promoted slum-clearance and low-cost modern housing. We set up a National Youth Administration to keep our youth in school and to hold open for them the door of opportunity. By a successful war on crime we have made America's homes and places of business safer against the gangster, the kidnaper and the racketeer.

Some people call these things meddling and interference. You and I know them to be new stones in a foundation—a foundation on which we can, and are determined to, build a structure of economic security for all our people—a safer, happier, more American America.

On November 3, the American people will say that that is a job well begun!

These are the things we have done. They are a record of three and a half years crowded with achievements—significant of better life for all the people. Every group in our national life has benefited, because what we have done for each group has produced benefits for every other group. In our policies there are no distinctions between them. There will be none. If we are in trouble we are all of us in trouble together. If we are to be prosperous, if we are to be secure, we must all be prosperous and secure together.

Fostered Classes.

Unfortunately, those who now raise the cry of class distinctions are the very leaders whose policies of the past have fostered such distinctions. When they were in power, they were content in the belief that the chief function of government was to help only those at the top in the pious hope that the few at the top would in their benevolence or generosity pass that help on.

That theory of government has been banished from Washington. It did not work. It was not and cannot be the answer to our problem. We have united all classes in the Nation in a program for the Nation. In doing that, we have bridged the gulf of antagonism which 12 years of neglect had opened up between them.

An equally important task remains: to go forward, to consolidate and to strengthen these gains—to close the gap by destroying the glaring inequalities of opportunity and of security which, in the recent past, have set group against group and region against region.

By our policies for the future we will carry forward this program of unity. We will not be content until all our people fairly share in the ever-increasing capacity of America to provide a high standard of living for all its citizens.

On November third, the American people will say that our policy for the future is their policy for the future.

President Urges Nov. 11 Observance

President Roosevelt, in a proclamation released at the White House yesterday, called on the people of the United States to set aside November 11 for a celebration of the eighteenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice.

The President asked that the day commemorating the end of World War hostilities be the occasion for displaying the flag on all Government buildings. The observance, he said, should be marked by "appropriate ceremonies in schools and churches, or other suitable places."

The proclamation was issued in accordance with a resolution passed by Congress in 1926, requesting the President to invite general participation in the holiday.

Half-Million in Milan Give Mussolini Welcome

Milan, Oct. 30 (AP).—Half a million citizens of this great industrial center swung into the streets in cheering gala groups today to welcome Benito Mussolini, the one-time Milanese editor.

RA Drought Relief Cost $8,378,735

By the Associated Press.

Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement Administration, announced yesterday his agency had expended $8,378,735 up to October 24 to aid 256,955 farm families in drought areas. He added the figures indicated the climax of the drought relief program "is fast approaching."

"These figures are practically double those of a month ago," Tugwell said. He added that Resettlement was "now the only Federal agency giving direct relief in the form of emergency grants."

Tugwell said the drought-relief proram was being financed "from a $20,000,000 allotment."

Tugwell said the agency will continue its work "through the winter, or as long as the emergency exists, assisting through loans and grants those families whose feed and food supplies have been destroyed by the drought."

13 Injured, 4 Missing As Tankers Sink Ship

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Thirteen workmen were injured when two oil tankers struck and sank the vessel in Rockaway Inlet late today.

An unestimated number of workmen who went overboard when the trawler sank were picked up by the oil tanker and small boats.

Early police reports said four workmen said to have been on the trawler were unaccounted for.

Chrysanthemum Display Attracts Capital Society

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace Receives at Annual Agriculture Department Show; Diplomatic and Official Set Views Exhibits.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Many prominent members of diplomatic and official society yesterday morning attended the preview of the Department of Agriculture's annual fall chrysanthemum show, at which Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, received.

Mrs. Wallace, one of the most gracious of the Cabinet ladies, was reluctant to point out to friends the large flower of orchid shade which she had been asked to name for herself, Ilo. Each year there are newly developed specimens for which names are required. Among the other flower "personages" were the Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, a yellow bloom, and the Rexford G. Tugwell, a flower with petals of dubonnet and cream color.

Politics came in for its share of comment with the inevitable exclamations of delight over the beauty of the flowers. Many of the guests had listened Thursday night to Secretary Wallace's speech over the radio and were remarking to Mrs. Wallace and to each other on how they had enjoyed it.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, was among the guests as was Mme. Saito, wife of the Ambassador of Japan, who was accompanied by Count Soyeshima, who left late yesterday on his return to Japan after a five-day visit in the Capital. He was impressed with the beauty of the display of Japan's national flower, and told Mrs. Wallace he had never expected to see so fine a collection of chrysanthemums in this country. Others from the Japanese Embassy who attended were Mme. Yoshizawa, wife of the Counselor, and Mme. Yamamoto, who came together.

Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, was also there, wearing a black dress, moleskin cape and black velvet hat. One of the earlier arrivals was Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, wife of the Ambassador of Belgium, who wore a blue coat with fox collar and blue hat of the same shade. Among others were Mme. Peter, wife of the Minister of Switzerland; Mrs. Close, wife of the Minister of the Union of South Africa; Mrs. Stanley A. Reed, wife of the Solicitor General, who was accompanied by her nephew, Mr. Clement French, of Maysville, Ky., who is spending a few days here.

Mme. Wijkman, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Legation, a sister of Secretary Wallace, was also among the guests and wore a suit and Robin Hood hat of green, striking with her auburn hair. Mrs. Wallace wore a black coat and small peaked black hat, both trimmed with Persian lamb.

Among others enjoying the exhibition were Mrs. Marriner S. Eccles, who came with Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Harper Sibley, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. M. L. Wilson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Howard R. Tolley, Mrs. Chester Davis, Mrs. Corin Strong, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Trowbridge; Mrs. Herbert Feis and Mrs. David Wing of Madeira School.

T. Moorman, Miss Gullion Are Married

Bishop Freeman Officiates At Ceremony Uniting Two Army Families.

St. Mary's Chapel of the National Cathedral was the setting for the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Miss-Atha Gullion, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Allen Gullion and Lieut. Thomas Samuel Moorman, son of Mrs. Moorman and the late Col. Thomas S. Moorman, which took place at 5 o'clock, with the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James Freeman, officiating.

Flickering candles on the altar and in the tall standards along the wall lent a mellow warmth. Among the guests, uniforms were prevalent, the polished belts and insignia gleaming in the soft light as the sun filtered through the famous stained glass windows. The only floral decorations were clusters of Easter lilies simply arranged on the altar.

The first of the bridal party to go up the aisle to the strains of Lohengrin were the ushers, attired in O. D. uniforms, mirror-like Sam Brown belts and boots and jingling chains and spurs. They included Capt. A. J. Grimes, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Lieut. Burton Armstrong, Lieut. Joseph Stanley, Lieut. Joseph Williams, Lieut. Karl Truesdell and Lieut. Harrison King.

They were followed by Mrs. William Holbrook and Mrs. Andrew Parker, who wore quaint frocks of pale-blue satin damask brocade with tiny scattered roses shading from deep rose to rust. They wore pearl Juliet caps, and carried double spray bouquets of button pompoms of maroon and rust.

Miss Virginia Huspvedt, maid of honor, wore a gown of the same style of pale gold satin damask. Her Juliet cap was of gold, and she, too, carried the small pompoms in rich autumn shades.

The bride entered on the arm of her father and they were met at the altar by Lieut. Moorman and his best man, Lieut. Eugene Musset. Miss Gullion's gown of white chiffon was fashioned with a V-neck and the sleeves, made with narrow tucks at the shoulders flared out and were caught in at the wrists. A braid of the chiffon marked the high waist. The full train billowed out from a straight skirt designed with narrow tucks as the back. A wide band of net with orange blossoms fastened in symmetrical design held the tulle veil to her blonde head. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations.

After the ceremony there was a large reception in the Officers' Club at the Army War College. Lieut. Moorman and his bride with her mother and brother, Mr. Edmund Gullion, received the guests before a screen of palms, ferns and white chrysanthemums. Col. Gullion had a reception of his own, going down the line of guests waiting to greet the young bridal couple, and pausing to speak and shake hands with everyone. Mrs. Gullion wore a gown of black velvet trimmed with net insertions beaded in silver, with a black velvet hat and gardenias. The bridegroom's mother was unable to be present. His sisters assisted in serving. Mrs. Grimes wore a black velvet gown with scarlet crepe sleeves and Miss Betty Moorman was in Mediterranean blue crepe.

Following the age old Army custom the bride cut the first piece of the wedding cake with her husband's saber. Later in the evening they left by motor for the South. The new Mrs. Moorman wore a becoming costume of gray, the frock was tailored and the short jacket of kid caracul had facings and a short peplum of the woolen crepe. Her antelope hat was trimmed with a bright cockade of feathers.

After December 1 Lieut. and Mrs. Moorman will be at home at Mitchell Field, Long Island.

Agnes Sholes To Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Sholes announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Agnes Nicholas Sholes, to Mr. Aaron Ireland Sanson 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Sanson, of Philadelphia.

Miss Sholes attended schools in Sweden, Germany, Italy and Belgium. Mr. Sanson is a graduate of Yale, and is now studying law at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Sholes is the United States Consul to Brussels. Miss Agnes Sholes and his other daughter, Miss Janie Bell Sholes, came to Washington to reside last season after spending many years in Europe.

The wedding will take place in the early summer, but it has not yet been decided whether the ceremony will be performed in this country or abroad. Mr. and Mrs. Sholes are at present in Washington, but will return soon to Brussels.

Miss Stearns, Mr. Aires Wed

Miss Sallie-Belle Stearns and Mr. Gregory J. Aires were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, 3121 Thirty-eighth street, the Rev. J. M. Moran officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Clifford Heald Stearns and the late Dr. Stearns. Mr. Aires is the son of Mr. Clifton Aires.

The bride had as her matron of honor her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jack C. H. Stearns, and little Margaret Elizabeth Riley, a cousin of the bride, attended as flower girl. The bridegroom's brother, Mr. Thomas Leroy Aires, was his best man.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Now, with election practically upon us, Washingtonians are more and more champing at the bit because they cannot vote. One person who is terribly disappointed that the District has no vote is Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce.

Both of them being such ardent Democrats, it must be quite a trial to be unable to have a hand in this election. But, that is the case. Having lived here for the past 35 years, they naturally have lost their legal residence in South Carolina, although they still own land and pay taxes there.

Either Washingtonians are suddenly turning their energy toward writing or else New York is losing its fatal fascination to those inclined along artistic or creative lines, because certainly no one year before this has found so many books about to arrive from the publishers or in the midst of being compiled. Mrs. Theodore Teller, who knows Washington through and through is about to present us with one, so we hear, and it is to be about the interesting people she has met here. From that we guess that it will be another of those huge, thousand-page affairs.

• • • •

Teenie Ekengren is due back from Kentucky after a visit which has something (we don't know just what) to do with the frontier Nurses of the State. Teenie will join her family here probably Sunday or Monday.

• • • •

Is is small wonder that Olga Patterson and her sister, Mme. Ernest Schlatter are so famous for their dancing—they come by it naturally, and one would be tremendously surprised if they didn't excell in grace on the ballroom floor. Their father, the Cuban Ambassador, Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, whose blue eyes are ever a-twinkle, is just as fond of dancing as he is proficient in it.

• • • •

Gwen Brownlee Maginnis has another new hat. It is a most unusual affair of green, twisted and turned to a startling height. Then, on the front, there is a bird of orange, gold and shades of blue, that peers out at the world with interest and whose gorgeously plumed tail sticks way up in the air, higher than the already towering crown.

• • • •

Ellen Bryden and her mother, Mrs. William Bryden, were hat shopping yesterday morning and were deciding between two little fetching models in bright blue when we passed by them. Mrs. Bryden had on a gunmetal-colored woolen suit with flecks of red through it and a black linen blouse with a bright red collar. Ellen had on a trim little belted suit of grayish tones.

• • • •

Mrs. Jean de Sibour—Valerie Prochnik to most of us still—snugly wrapped in a good-looking beige wool coat, and her cute black cocker spaniel, with his collar and leash of braided red and blue leather, were stepping briskly along Connecticut avenue when we saw them.

Japan's Envoy Fetes Visitors From Homeland

Ambassador Entertains Novelist, Wife and Painter.

The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito entertained last night at dinner in the embassy in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Toson Shimasaki and Mr. Ikuma Arishima, who are in Washington for a short stay. The guests were all Japanese.

Mr. Shimasaki is one of the noted novelists of Japan and is on his way there from Argentina to attend the national penmen's convention. Mr. Arishima, a famous modern painter of Japan, is on his way to Rome, where he will lecture at the University of Rome.

The Ambassador entertained at luncheon Thursday afternoon for another distinguished visitor from his country, Count Michimasa Soyeshima, who is on his way to Japan from the Olympics in Germany and is a member of the Japanese committee for the Olympiad in Japan in 1940. He left yesterday afternoon for Chicago on his way West to sail for the Orient.

Mrs. John Foote Becomes Bride of A. H. McConville

In the presence of members of the two families, Mrs. John Foote and Mr. Arthur H. McConville were married yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The Rev. Cornelius J. Dacey performed the ceremony, which took place in the rectory of St. Paul's Catholic Church.

After a wedding trip in the North, Mr. McConville and and his bride will reside in Washington. She is the widow of the late Dr. John Foote of Washington. Her daughter, the former Miss Polly Foote, was married during the summer to Mr. Daniel O'Donoghue jr., son of Justice and Mrs. Daniel O'Donoghue.

Society Notes

Mrs. Roosevelt, who is in Hyde Park, is expected to return to Washington on Friday.

Mme. de Laboulaye, wife of the French Ambassador, entertained at luncheon yesterday in honor of Mme. Jules Jusserand, who has come to Washington for the unveiling next week of a memorial to her late husband, former Ambassador from France to this country.

Mme. de Laboulaye will entertain at a tea in honor of Mme. Jusserand before the latter leaves the embassy on Friday to stay at the White House.

Pan-American Officials Sail for Bunos Aires.

The Director General of the Pan-American Union, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, will sail today from New York on the liner Eastern Prince to attend the Peace Conference at Buenos Aires. He is accompanied by the Counselor of the Pan-American Union, Dr. William Manger. They will return after the conference adjourns in January.

Gen. John J. Pershing, wartime commander-in-chief of the United States Army, arrived in New York from Europe yesterday on the liner Manhattan.

Mrs. George H. Dern, widow of the late Secretary of War, is in Baltimore and is expected to come to Washington the first of next week to join her daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter, at Highwood, their home here.

Miss Adlumia Sterrett Visits in Hartford.

Miss Adlumia Sterrett, a debutante of last year, is in Hartford, Conn., where she attended the coming-out party of Miss Winifred Garvan, who was presented to society last evening at a dance given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Garvan.

Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, of Washington, entertained at a supper at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, recently.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 30.

IT MAY NOT be necessary for Elsa Maxwell, international party-planner, to come over from Paris this year to save bored Park avenue from itself. Our own Katrinka Roelker, a socialite who also makes money by her imagination, is doing very much all right along the same lines.

ALICE HUGHES.

It was Katrinka who thought up a "hunt breakfast" at a midtown hotel at Sunday noon, without a horse within miles. The other day she put the younger crowd into a fast gallop with her own new variation of the scavenger hunt, the treasure hunt and all those silly didoes which may turn the center of a town into a shambles. Katrinka came up with a night picture hunt, the idea being for a boy and a girl to rush about the place flashing photographs of set subjects.

Forty kids took part in the camera orgy. They bolted from the Hotel Pierre at 7, with a three-hour allowance in which to snap away. At 10 they came back with their negatives, and while the pictures were being developed everybody danced, popped corn and cracked jokes. First prize, no less than $150, went to Constance Thurlow and Russell Pierce for their camera study of "An Interesting Pair of Feet"—the subjects being those of a tired and elderly laundry horse which they overtook near Radio City. Everybody applauded and had ice cream and angel food, and it was all such fun!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Being All-Hallows' Eve, it is time to reveal that this screaming bailiwick produces a charge of witchcraft now and then! The latest alleged "witch," however, is not only a man, but a landlord. Lena Dechent went to law about it, charging that the fellow operated against her mother with "witchcraft prayers," which made all the Denchents feel a bit creepy and uncomfortable. The judge threw the case out of court, remarking that all the witches died 250 years ago. However, there is always the chance that the landlord was merely trying to bewitch a little rent out of the family.

Fame perches on the brow of yet another local woman, but she isn't pleased. Mrs. Frank Leonardi received the 100,000th traffic summons of the year here the other day. She paid her dollar and got her picture in the paper . . .

• • • •

The uppity Colony Club was thrown into a small dither the other day when Will Rhinelander Stewart turned up for lunch toting Charlie Chaplin's girl friend, Paulette Goddard—while at the very next table sat Janet Newbold Ryan, top-flight blonde, with whom Will has been keeping company. Ten years ago Paulette was a Ziegfeld chorus girl, and now look!

• • • •

Fredric March is around town giving the girls a treat. Margaret Pemberton flang a great cocktail party for the Marches the other day, and everybody that was anybody came for the Marches are nice folks. I saw Irene Dunne, Anita Louise, Helen Gahagan, Miriam Hopkins, Rosamond Pinchot and dozens of others there, eating and drinking and gabbing away just like mortals. Every week Freddy spends away from Hollywood costs him plenty, for he now rates the appalling sum of $125,000 a movie. But bless his little heart, he probably doesn't want to make any more this year, on account of the demon income tax!

• • • •

Up pop the local girls with a new coat trick! Those who have half or three-quarter length fur coats are spelling them off as capes, now and then, by just tucking in the sleeves! . . . Now sequins appear on the cuffs of gloves. Everybody sparkles! . . . Fur is everywhere—not only on hats and handbags, but even on gloves! Some wear a band of it up the middle finger and then around the edge of the cuff. All of which makes gloves run into important money!

Salad Menus For Reducing

MANY of the popular movie stars have as great difficulty holding the princess line as you. Many insist that the most pleasant and easiest way to reduce is by eating delicious salads because they can keep a sharp check on those tricky little heat units called calories. Yet there is no loss of energy or vitality which so often accompanies other forms of weight control.

A woman requires only 1,800 to 2,000 calories daily. While reducing, the daily caloric amount can be safely cut to between 1,200 and 1,000 calories.

It's easy to reduce with crisp appetizing salads. They're rich in vitamins for vigor, toothsome to taste, and, oh, how kind to the figure! Because they're low in calory count.

It's no hardship at all to pass up a fattening 200-calory cream soup for an attractive 85-calory tomato and cheese salad. Make it by slicing a tomato and putting it together, sandwich fashion, with 2 tablespoons of cottage cheese. Set it in a nest of 1 cup of shredded cabbage moistened with mineral oil dressing.

You'll find the recipe for this unusual dressing in our new booklet of salads for all occasions, "Salad, the Beauty Course"—it counts the calories for you.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Salad, the Beauty Course," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and name of booklet.

Elsie Hill, Noted American Feminist, Tells of Distressing Plight Of Virgin Islands Women and Sees Hope for Them in New Law

"The problem of the Virgin Islands, and it has been a problem for 30 years, is how to bring the property owners under the law, for the well being of those who are obliged to live there," says Elsie Hill, who claims this will be accomplished when its women start voting.

Wife of Jurist 'Amazed' by Women's Failure to Claim Vote.

By Elizabeth Young.

THE VIRGIN Islands—St. Thomas, St. Croix and St. John—look like heaven on earth. Located 40 miles east of Puerto Rico in the Caribbean Sea, they offer a scene of magic beauty.

Suppose you live on St. Thomas. You can climb precipitous heights just back of your house and look straight down to the bottom of the Caribbean, watching the sea take on marvelous colors; purple, red, orange, blue, green, vivid lapis lazuli, agate jade, from its tropical growth. You can see its snow white beaches—beaches more exquisite than you have dreamed of—where you can stand in water up to your neck and see every detail of your toes on the bottom. Or you can turn your gaze another way and watch the great Atlantic Ocean rolling and tossing in restless majesty.

And then dear ladies, you can climb down again from your precipitous heights and tackle a housekeeping problem to break your heart. For behind that magic beauty lurk desperately difficult housekeeping problems that only the tropical housewife—native or imported—knows about.

Milk Must Be Boiled.

You can wrestle with the milk problem, for the milk, not inspected, is so poor, so dirty, that it has to be boiled immediately it is received. Or you can wrestle with the alternative of buying, instead, dried or powdered milk at $1.87 a can, $1.12 higher than it is in America.

You can lock horns with the water problem, boiling every drop that is used for washing food or dishes, for cooking and for drinking. All water used is caught in cisterns. You can buy your water from Danish water barges and watch the natives rioting around the public pumps during the seasons of the drought. Yes, you may even have to buy the water with which you wash your clothes.

You can ponder the problem of inadequate or non-existent plumbing in your home, and, if you are among the privileged few who do have plumbing, you can adjust yourself to the utilities regulation which prevents flushing off of sewage during the afternoon and after-midnight hours.

You can scheme ways and means of cutting down your light bill, which runs into money at the rate of 17 cents a kilowatt hour.

And in your leisure hours, if any, you can go out and fight the good fight for woman suffrage in the Virgin Islands. For the right to vote, according to Elsie Hill, famous American feminist, who paints this picture of life in the Virgin Islands, is the island woman's only way out from a life of incessant household drudgery, economic exploitation and fear of infection, want and death for her loved ones.

From October, 1935, until August, 1936, Miss Hill—who is "a Lucy Stoner" and keeps her own name, although she is a married woman and a mother—lived in a picturesque white house with a red gambrel roof on St. Thomas Island, keeping house for her schoolgirl daughter, Elsie Hill-Levitt, and for her husband, Judge Albert Levitt, who sat on the bench of the United States District Court of the islands during that period.

Miss Hill dealt first-hand with all the problems told above and often sat as a spectator in her husband's court—tongue-tied by her very position as his wife—helplessly watching the women of the islands fight organized interests for the American citizen's constitutional right to vote. "I was not even free to suggest what might have been helpful tactics," she says.

Presumably Entitled.

"I was reminded of a leaflet we distributed in the old suffragist-fight days in the United States," she said, "a leaflet entitled 'Madame, Who Keeps Your House?' It showed a woman tied by long strings to the City Hall, indicating the source of control of her daily life. In those days our women didn't have the political power to control the social life of which they were an integral part. The same situation prevails in the Virgin Islands today. Women there are struggling along with no control over their lawmaking bodies."

No control over their lawmaking bodies? But are these women not citizens of the United States? And did not the nineteenth constitutional amendment, adopted in 1920 by the Congress of the United States—investing its women with the right of franchise—apply equally to the women of its island possessions? Miss Hill was asked.

Question Not Raised.

"Presumably, yes," she replied. "But actually, so far as the Virgin Islands are concerned, the right of its women to vote remains in insular dispute to this day. I know it sounds unbelievable. I've tried several times to explain the ramifications of the situation to my most intelligent friends and even they can scarcely comprehend. The story leaves them completely bewildered."

Title to the Virgin Islands passed from Denmark to the United States in 1916, and on March 31, 1917, this Government took over Government House on the islands. On March 3 of that year, the Congress of the United States had passed a law saying that laws then in force on the islands would be continued insofar as compatible with changed sovereignty.

Under existing Danish law only men could vote, and, moreover, only those men who could meet certain property, residence and citizenship qualifications. When the Congress of the United States adopted the nineteenth constitutional amendment in 1920, "it was assumed," said Miss Hill, "that this amendment did not apply to the Virgin Islands. And so, from 1920 until 1935, the women did not vote, because the question of their right to vote simply was not raised in court in a way to cause settlement."

Last year, however, women who could meet the property, citizenship and residence qualifications—thoroughly aroused by desperate living conditions on the islands—organized and demanded that their names be put on the electoral lists, recognizing the fact that under the nineteenth amendment they were on an equal footing with men. Their request was refused on the grounds that they had no authority to vote under the old Danish law, still in force and effect. They carried their fight to court and won a favorable decision.

"But," says Miss Hill, "the parties in power are stalling in order to be able to control the coming November election, for they well know that the women, if given the vote, will defeat the undesirable element in the Colonial Council, the lawmaking body. I don't believe they will vote this year."

See Hope for Women.

She sees hope for women of the islands in the new organic act passed by Congress last June, which will become effective on and after January 1, 1937. This act expressly states that no discrimination based on property ownership, race, religion or sex is to be allowed in the islands—thus wiping out the existing property qualifications and confirming the court's decision that sex discrimination in the islands is not legal.

But the salutary effects of this democratic social ruling may not, probably will not, be felt in the islands until after the election of November, 1938, according to Miss Hill. And militant feminist and good housekeeper that she is, she finds that prospect hard to face.

"The situation," says Miss Hill, "is a challenge to any American woman free to go down there and see the feminist fight through. The Virgin Islands can be made into a Paradise when women have the vote. The problem of the Virgin Islands—and it has been a problem for 300 years—is how to bring the property owners under the law, for the well being of the people who are obliged to live there."

All property on the islands, including public utilities, is concentrated in the hands of a few—and these few, Miss Hill declares, control the Colonial Council.

Daily Strolling Made Pleasant By Observation

Mother and Child May Avoid Boredom by Interest in Many Hobbies.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THE DAILY airing which is usually such a burden to both mother and child might with no real effort for either be made a very genuine pleasure. To most mothers (and fathers, too, when they can be persuaded to undertake the job) walking with the children is an unmitigated bore. The children reflect their parents' feeling and, unless they have scooters or skates, wander along looking dull and uninterested.

Yet all about them on the sidewalks, the roads, and even in the shops and empty lots, the most interesting things are going on. The parents have seen most of these many times, but paid no real attention to them. To little children they are all quite new.

If parents would look upon themselves as guides and take the trouble to point out and explain to the children some of the interesting places and activities which they were passing thy would soon find out that they themselves were looking at the world about them with new eyes. The children, once their interest was roused, would tell their parents even more than the parents told them.

A steam-shovel working in an excavation, a steam roller or an asphalt scraper, a riveting machine, a cement mixer, are of absorbing interest. Most parents hurry by and drag their protesting children with them. If mother does not like such things father can take over the machinery end of sight-seeing. Surely mother can point out and explain trees, flowers, animals, buildings and the contents of shop windows.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

The Victory Over Diphtheria.

There are few localities in the land where wild animals roam at large and constitute a menace to human life. Our frontier has been pushed backward until it is difficult to find a lair where vicious beasts prey upon childhood.

But there are figurative ogres of great ferocity which lie in wait for young lives. They are the bacteria and the viruses which cause scarlet fever, measles, whooping cough, smallpox, diphtheria, and many other diseases. They are not found in the woods or in desert wastes only, but may live comfortably in our most populous cities, in schoolrooms, and in ostensibly clean homes. Certain youngsters may become carriers unwittingly; that is, after recovery from an infection the minute organisms may lurk in the nasal passages or in the throat, ready to attack another victim, although the "carrier" has become immune to their poison.

Throat Infection.

Diphtheria is a dreadful affliction, but it has been robbed of much of its terror because of the defenses which medical science has been able to build about its potential host. It is caused by a rod shaped bacillus which grows rapidly under favorable conditions on the mucous lining of the throat, frequently in the vicinity of or on the tonsils, forming a whitish or grayish looking membrane. This would not be especially harmful were it not for the fact that the microbes manufacture a powerful poison (toxin) which, if not neutralized, will affect the nervous system, causing paralysis of the muscles or of the heart.

Of course the body fights valliantly to produce its own antitoxin—a substance that will render the poison harmless. But the sufferer may be unable to make this material fast enough (as rapidly as the bacilli can produce toxin), hence the need for antitoxin prepared from an outside source.

Just 45 years ago a German scientist, Von Behring, discovered that by administering small doses of diphtheria poison to horses these animals would form in their own blood large amounts of anti-toxin (neutralizing substance). He then proved that serum from these immune animals could conquer the disease. The temperature would fall, delirium disappear, breathing become easy, and recovery ensue.

Prevention Paramount.

The disease can be cured if anti-toxin is given early enough and in sufficient dosage; but more essential than cure is prevention. A method of vacination has been found which uses toxin antitoxin or toxoid, which can be given to anyone who is not immune. No youngster should attend school without the protection afforded by these injections. A small amount is given, usually in the arm, in three doses just a week apart. It leaves no scar and, as a rule, does not cause any difficulty, even for a few hours.

But here is an important point: The boy or girl is not protected immediately. It requires from three to six months before the full force of the injections becomes manifest. Thereafter the vaccinated individual is in no danger whatsoever. In fact, the protection lasts for many years, if not for life. The vaccine can be given when a baby is 6 months old, and certainly it should be used before school age.

Sometimes children will require a second series because they did not react fully to the first. Every one can be tested to determine whether he is completely resistant and it is wise to do this occasionally with what is known as the Schick test, which was devised by Dr. Bela Schick in 1913.

This death-dealing infection can be stamped out if, for a period of a few years, every child over 6 months of age could be vacinated. It is just as necessary as the use of vaccine matter against smallpox, or security against bad weather by means of adequate clothing.

Of course the physician who gives the injections must do so in a clean, sterile manner and with proper technique.

Beauty Baths Valuable Aids To Film Stars

Among the famous trick baths of history were Cleopatra's immersions in milk and Ninon de Lenclos' reveling in crushed rose petals, but in the twentieth century girls blend their delicate tastes with common sense.

Marion Talley likes a medium hot bath with loads and loads of of pine-scented bath tablets and sweet-smelling pine soap. She likes to work up a veritable sea of foam and loll in it for as long as 20 minutes. Her first rinse is luke warm and her second is so icy cold that no sissy would dare inundate herself in same.

Athletic girls like June Travis go in for showers. She likes quantities of sweet-scented soap and starts the shower out so hot it tingles, gradually cooling it off until she ends up with zero temperature.

Glenda Farrell likes showers in the morning and a relaxing tub bath at night after a hard day's work. Her showers are a quick dash of hot and cold, but her tub baths are luxurious. She feels that the massage she gives herself while bathing is important and she briskly rubs her skin with bright sponges. Her favorite bath oil is heliotrope scented.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Husband No Longer Loves Wife, Should She Agree to His Having Other Heart Interests?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Please advise me if an agreement of the kind I am about to outline is wise between husband and wife. We have been married 12 years, and for the past five years have been buying our home. We have two childrn, aged 6 and 9 years. My husband never speaks to me unless I first address a remark to him. He has told me he doesn't love me the way a man should love his wife.

• • • •

Last year he started spending much time in the company of a married woman, in the late afternoons after working hours. He has never left the children and me to go out nights, but he has asked me to consent to his having his friends of both sexes and me having mine. I would hate to give him up on account of the children; and I would hate to have them see either of us going out with someone else.

• • • • •

I want my husband to be happy doing what he wants to do, but we haven't enough money for him to take out other women. He gives me $1 a week for spending money. The children get nothing and I feel very sorry for them. As they get older they are sure to notice it. I was very ill last winter and my husband wasn't a bit nice to me.

• • • •

He was seeing the other woman then, and I asked him to let me take the children and live apart from him, so that he could do as he pleased. He refused, saying there wasn't enough money for that. He said if I wasn't satisfied I could leave and he would get a housekeeper to look after the children.

• • • •

Even if I should agree to his proposition, I couldn't live a life under cover. If I had other friends, I would want to have them come to our home. And I feel that wouldn't be right. My husband has no love or even friendship for me.

Besides the woman mentioned, he also spent some time with another girl, going swimming and to the movies with her. He never takes the children any place. Please tell me what you think of the situation, and advise me what to do.

UNDECIDED.

The Wiser Course.

DEAR UNDECIDED: It may be you have no choice but to let your husband go his own way; but in my opinion it would be most unwise and inadvisable to enter into any verbal agrement condoning actions unworthy of married persons and parents. Two wrongs have never yet made a right, and the fact that your husband goes out with other women does not invest you with the moral right to seek the companionship of other men, even though he may encourage you to do so.

• • • •

Don't let him tar you with the same feather that soils his own hands. For if you do, and the time should come that separation and divorce are unavoidable, you may be represented as having offended against the marriage as much as he, and your fitness to have custody of the children will be open to serious question. If your children cannot have the blessing of two responsible-minded, self-sacrificing parents, at least it is within your individual power to give them one such parent—namely, yourself.

• • • •

In taking the children and leaving your husband's home, as you offered to do last winter, you might find yourself out on the end of a limb. For then you would be in the position of having deserted the partnership, if your husband chose to avail himself of that technicality. My advice to you is to stay where you are, conduct yourself with complete propriety, and refuse to commit yourself to any such agreement as your husband suggests. If you can make friends to fill in the gap of his neglect, by all means do so. But seek companionship in groups, with married couples, and with other women, and not with isolated men.

Pork Dishes Take Lead This Season

Ham and Egg Luncheon Also Suggested as Autumnal Menu.

PORK in many varieties becomes a favorite dish at this season. If you have kept ham and eggs in your mind as only a breakfast dish, you've missed some really good meals. This combination may be just as appetizing and look just as well in the evening as it does in the crisp early hours.

A mild sugar-cured ham with its tantalizing odor of hickory smoke gives just the flavor that you are looking for. You may buy this ham in a smoked condition ready to slice and grill or already cooked ham which looks like regular smoked ham, but needs only a quick heating before serving. There are boneless cooked hams which may be sliced, canned boneless hams and even canned ham loafs in various sizes. If you are preparing sandwiches or canapes, use deviled ham spreads that are nippy in flavor.

"Daisies" or boned shoulder butts are smaller cuts which have been cured the same as hams and should be prepared as hams, but are more economical to buy. They are good baked whole.

If you are serving eggs with the ham, fry them in the ham fat left from pan frying the meat. If you are serving poached eggs on toast, spread the toast liberally with deviled ham spread.

For lunch serve creamed eggs on toast with thin frizzled slices of smoked or cooked ham or tasty scrambled eggs and ham sandwiches.

A ham loaf or slice of ham baked in the casserole are delicious dinner dishes. They may be served with stuffed hard cooked eggs or an egg sauce. Fluffy ham and cheese omelet is delicious, especially when a bit of pimiento or green pepper is included for an extra flavor.

Ham and Egg Luncheon.

12 thin slices cooked boneless ham
6 hard-cooked eggs
6 slices toast
1 can green asparagus tips
2 cups white sauce

Prepare sauce by melting ¼ cup butter or ham fat, adding ¼ cup flour and stirring in 2 cups milk. When thickened and smooth season to taste with salt and pepper. Let eggs simmer in water to cover for 20 minutes. Peel and cut in quarters and add to sauce. Let wafer-thin slices of cooked boneless ham fry slowly until curled and hot. Serve asparagus on toast with a liberal helping of creamed eggs and two slices of frizzled ham to each serving. Serves 6.

Baked Ham Slice With Stuffed Eggs.

1 slice ham, ¾-inch thick
¼ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon mustard
Milk to cover ham
4 hard-cooked eggs
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon soft butter
3 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon choped green pepper

Place ham slice in casserole or covered baking dish, rub with mustard and brown sugar. Then pour milk over to just cover ham. Bake in a moderate oven 350 Fahrenheit for 1 hour. Serve with eggs which have been simmered for 20 minutes in water to cover, then peeled and stuffed as follows: Cut eggs in half lengthwise and remove yolks. Mash yolks and add mustard, soft butter, mayonnaise, chopped parsley and chopped green pepper. Add a little vinegar if a more distinct flavor is desired. Heap filling in eggs and use around the ham slice on the platter. Garnish with parsley. Serve ½ egg with each serving of ham.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

CONNIE'S great aunt has given her the sweetest old pieces of Victorian furniture you ever saw. But Connie's in a dither trying to get it into a very sleek little newly married home.

"I think its as smart as anything," said Connie, "but I can't decide about the rugs, walls, and curtains. And I'm worried about what or what not to put in the what-not. Besides none of the chairs are comfortable and I want to buy some upholstered pieces, maybe a sofa. What type and color would you advise?"

We'd have a flowered broadloom rug with that furniture, then walls in old pink, draperies in mauve, chair coverings in dull blues and in mauve colorings. As for the seating arrangements, by all means add modern upholstered furniture, simple in line and covered in smooth textured materials. Why not have modern bibelots instead of old-fashioned things in your what-not? We think they'd be fun.

Another idea would be to have the walls done in that washable gold wall paper, then have a plain blue broadloom rug and furniture coverings of a Victorian floral pattern on a white ground. In this case, have the draperies and curtains in a sheer scintillating gold material—possibly something shot through with threads of cellophane. Then use white accessories throughout the room—white lamps, white pieces of porcelain, a white tea set, and some large white vases filled with dramatic big white flowers. And in such a room, wouldn't Connie herself look scrumptious in a hostess gown of red velvet or in something white and sheer and floaty.

Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Sew Yourself a Family History." Wouldn't a needlepoint sampler be perfect in Connie's Victorian living room?

Newest Galoshes Simulate Leathers

New Lightweight Galoshes Look Like Leather, Fit Like Gloves

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

GALOSHES have gone elusive! Fashioned of a new rubber fabric which looks like leather and fits like your gloves, it is just about impossible to tell, these days, when a smart woman is really wearing galoshes. This should be good news, after all these years of wearing ungainly rubber boots which were heavy to carry around and made the feet look like gunboats.

This revolutionary change in stormy weather footwear is one of the high lights in the winter fashion scene. They are appearing in the regulatoin high-topped galosh with zipper fastening and in low-cut models simulating shoes. The new rubber is either shiny, to simulate glazed kid, or dull, to give the appearance of suede. In either case they are trimmed in shoe fashion with contrasting rubber, which also looks like leather.

Alligator-Appearing Rubber.

Besides the suede rubber and glazed kid rubber, one of the most startling ideas in the new galosh mode is the reptile-rubber decoration. The suede-appearing galoshes have toes and back trim of alligator rubber which almost defies detection. Lizard rubber also is used extensively for decorating purposes.

If the galosh heel doesn't fit properly, it follows that the ankle is not correctly fitted; the result being an ungainly and sloppy-looking galosh. To remedy this there are now five different heel heights: Cuban, military, low Cuban, high Cuban and high heels, one to harmonize with each type of shoe.

The new galoshes are not only extremely smart but are warmly lined. There is absolutely no bulk to the linings—they are of flexible woolens, light in weight, the same color as the galosh, and so treated they have the same elasticity as the rubber topping.

"Dressmaker" Trimming.

Stitching, lacings and appliques of contrasting rubber aid in transforming a homely rubber shoe or boot into something even the most fastidious will not object to wearing. One novel galosh of suede-like rubber, trimmed with glazed kid rubber, is made in shoe step-in style, with tongue effect and flat bow, a grand acquisition on a snowy or rainy day when one is wearing an afternoon costume.

All of the new shoe-simulated galoshes come in black and brown rubbers—tailored or dress-up styles, to complement the ensemble. They should prove a boon to feminine football spectators; cozy and warm and at the same time the epitome of chic.

Plane Pilot's Diet An Exacting One, Says Miss Earhart

According to Amelia Earhart, one of America's foremost woman aviators, it is easier to properly feed opera singers, football players or Olympic champions than airplane pilots.

"A pilot's food must be nourishing, but it mustn't make you drowsy," said Miss Earhart, who is making a study of aerial dietetics.

Since pilots have only two hands and dozens of things to do, meal-time technique has to be simple.

Bookcase in Door.

Sometimes one has use for a large living room closet, but also needs the wall space the door occupies. The door itself may be turned into a bookcase by removing the center panel, installing shelves with backs, and rehanging the door with heavy butts.

Lowly Prune Made Tidbit When Stuffed

Prunes are much better and more appetizing today than they used to be. They are more delicate, lucious, firm and versatile. If you have always felt that you didn't ever want to see another prune you will be glad to hear of the many ways that you may dress them up by stuffing them. After they have been stuffed in one of these interesting ways you will be glad to serve them at any meal or party or with toothpicks as tidbits at cocktail time.

Perhaps the new taste for prunes is because more cooks have learned to treat them intelligently; they have learned that prunes never should be boiled but cooked just below boiling heat. This takes less time if they have first been soaked a few hours, then cooked in the same water.

Oven cooking is very good for them provided the fruit is well covered with water. But don't simmer or bake the prunes until they are mushy. That destroys the aromatic flavor and the texture that patient fruit growers have for years been putting into the plump plums.

Use cooked prunes, plain or pickled for stuffing. Slit down one side, remove, pit, and fill with any of the following stuffings: Orange sections with slivers of green onion; grapefruit sections dipped in chopped nuts, sieved American cheese, combined with chopped chili pepper and broiled in a wrapper of bacon; apple slivers dipped in mayonnaise and crumbled cheese; shredded raw carrot seasoned with mayonnaise and tabasco; pickled onions; wedges of salted crisp cucumber; stuffed green olives; chopped dried beef; deviled ham and chopped green pepper; lengths of Vienna sausage; chopped boiled ham, and chopped sour pickle or nut kernels, fresh or roasted.

By Pattie Ellicott.

AMID the heat of election battles the wife of one of the candidates for the high office of President has kept well out of the limelight, content with homemaking. This is Mrs. William Lemke, wife of Representative Lemke, of North Dakota, who is bearing the banner of one of the minor political groups.

MRS. WILLIAM LEMKE.

Friends of Mrs. Lemke are always enthusiastic about the menus at her dinners and other entertainments. And the hard-working Presidential candidate is pleased when caramel nut pie is the end of a perfect dinner when he reaches home after a week of campaigning.

In Mrs. Lemke's household caramel nut pie is made as follows:

Separate four eggs, take 2 cups milk, two cups sugar, five rounding tablespoons flour, one tablespoon butter, one scant cup nut meats and chop them.

Then beat the yolks of the eggs until they are thick, add milk and one cup sugar with flour and butter added; cook in double boiler until thick; put other cup sugar in frying pan and stir continually until melted and browned; mix with custard until smooth; add milk.

5 Prizes Offered For Best Recipes About Nut Dishes

AUTUMN is the unquestioned season for nuts in all forms and uses. Of course, we all use nuts in the raw and roasted state and many of us combine them in cooking a few of our savory dishes. But do you realize just how many appetizing foods have nuts in their make-up? We find ways to use nuts in candy, vegetables, soups, stuffing and even flavor them with spices as an unusual delicacy.

Have you a favorite recipe using nuts? If you have, neatly copy it and send it in to The Washington Post Foods Editor so that it will reach her by Saturday morning. It will be entered in our recipe contest.

Coronation Influences Make-up Tint

Traditional Ceremonial Colors Demand New Jewel Shades.

London Beauty Experts Devise Cosmetics Suited to Older Women.

By Carolyn Abbott.

LONDON BEAUTY experts have found perfect make-up shades to go with the coronation colors of the year.

It seems that the coming winter and spring are designed for the older woman, since the rich jewel color in fabric, stone and make-up are particularly becoming to the clear-skinned, white-haired feminine type.

Shades of purple and red are naturally the most important since they are the traditional colors for the royal robes. The purples range from the palest orchid to a deep royal purple. These shades are being shown in evening clothes and one would have to wear exactly the right make-up to look well in a gown of such a regal hue.

During the few weeks before the coronation of the King of England in May, peeresses and commoners alike will be wearing their best jewels at innumerable functions. Make-up will tone in with the individual jewels of the wearer and will be much lighter and brighter in key than before.

With emeralds, a light blur of blue or green eyelashes will be good—gold with rubies and diamonds. Lipstick and rouge will have more of a blue than a yellow cast, or it will be a clear carmine red.

The new make-up tones make it possible for any woman to wear any color with complete success.

The new completions can be achieved with much the same technique that an artist uses in painting a woman's portrait. Flesh tints can be brightened or softened to assure perfect harmony with the costume. The new greens, containing much yellow, call for warmer shades of powder. Any woman with the slightest tendency toward sallowness should accent the rose tone in her make-up of cheeks and lips. Powder should be considerably pinker in tint to harmonize with shades of purple.

The new, deeper than ice blue shade, which is called snow shadow, is becoming, especially to blondes, but calls for more rosiness in the make-up of brunettes.

In line with the jewel trend are two new iridescent eye-shadows. They are goldstone, a warm, live, coppery shade, which make a luminous, faint brownish setting for the eyes, and aquamarine, which gives a transparency to the lids, making blue eyes look blue, and gives gray or green eyes a blue appearance. Soft blue eyelash coloring is especially good with this sapphire mascara.

Vitamin A Food Held Investment In Good Health

Christmas funds are started months in advance by many folks. We all should start an anti-cold fund in the summer and every day in every way eat just a few more vitamin A foods and let our livers do the banking. A good start is a glass of chilled prune juice now, a prune salad for lunch, or prune pie at dinner.

From a business standpoint, eating vitamin A foods is an especially good investment in health. These foods are valuable at the time they are taken and any additional vitamin A which the body does not then need is stored away for future use.

Storing up vitamin A is much like putting money in the bank except the amount of goods you can buy with your money may fluctuate, while the stored vitamin has a fixed value. This value is a protection against the common cold germ. Vitamin A promotes an active, positive state of good health which delays the approach of old age.

The outstanding vitamin A foods are liver, spinach, carrots, butter, escarole, egg yolk, dried apricots, dried peaches, prunes, and many of the green leafy and deep yellow vegetables. Most of these foods are readily perishable except the dried fruits. Prunes are particularly noteworthy because they are available everywhere and are reasonably priced and are generally well liked.

Puritan Invention for Modern Cooks

A truly American delicacy originated by puritan cooks to take the place of old English foods, this delicious new version of rich, fruity brown bread is a boon companion to baked beans. Mince meat is used in the bread.

Beans and Brown Bread Find Welcome in All American Homes

Coarse Loaves of Pioneers, Refined for Modern Tastes, Make Ideal Cold Weather Meal; Stuffed Peppers, Eggplant Added Attraction.

OUR EARLY AMERICAN mothers found foods to take the place of the ones they were accustomed to back in old England. If they had been able to obtain the ones they had before, we might never have found many of our famous American delicacies. Baked beans and brown bread were among the inventions of the colonial cook.

Because the Puritans lacked the break-making ovens of the Old World and had to use rye, buckwheat and cornmeal grains, they developed a genius for steamed brown bread. We have acquired the habit of serving this bread with baked beans and don't they do well together? We can hardly imagine one without the other.

Brown bread and baked beans would find welcome in anyone's home for a Saturday night family dinner. Start your meal with spiced apple juice which is plentiful just now in this bountiful apple season. Fresh pork steamed in cream is a nice change from the bacon or frankfurters which you usually find accompanying baked beans. Green tomato pickles will furnish the bit of tang needed in the meal, and peppers, stuffed with eggplant constitute another vegetable and add color to the meal. Gingerbread and cheese are served as dessert, as well they should at this time of year. Of course you will serve coffee, and milk for the children is appropriate.

Nowadays instead of the coarse bread, we have rich fruity brown bread which qualifies for a place on the housewife's easy-to-make list. These breads are economical too though cake-like, containing mince meat.

Steamed Brown Bread.

1 (9-ounce) package dry mince meat and one-half cup water boiled almost dry
½ cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
2 cups cornmeal
½ cup molasses
1 pint milk

Break mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to brisk boil; continue boiling for 3 minutes or until mixture is practically dry. Allow to cool. Sift flour once, measure, add salt and soda and sift again. Add cornmeal and mix thoroughly. Add molasses and milk gradually to dry ingredients. Blend thoroughly. Fold in prepared mince meat. Pour into greased molds or baking powder cans, filling two-thirds full. Cover tightly and steam 2 hours having boiling water half way up on molds. If additional water is needed during steaming, it must be boiling when added. Makes three small loves.

Baked Fruit Brown Bread.

1 (9 oz.) package dry mince meat
½ cup water boiled almost dry
1 cup cornmeal
½ cup graham flour
1 cup white flour
1½ teaspoons soda
¾ cup molasses
1¾ cups milk
¾ teaspoon salt

Break the mince meat into pieces. Add cold water. Place over heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken up. Bring to brisk boil; continue boiling for 3 minutes, or until mixture is practically dry. Allow to cool. Sift cornmeal, graham flour and flour, measure. Add soda and salt and sift again. Mix molasses and milk and add gradually to dry ingredients, blending thoroughly. Fold in cooled mince meat. Pour into greased loaf pan (4x8.3 inches). Bake 1 hour in moderate oven (350 F.) Makes 1 loaf.

Young Film Stars' Meals Give Mothers Menu Appeal Hints

Mothers who are at loss to think of a "different" dish to feed their children might get a suggestion from the favorite meals of three young screen favorites, Freddie Bartholemew, Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney.

Freddie still prefers his English style dinner and likes prime roast rib of beef and mashed potatoes with Yorkshire pudding. Black Byng cherries and orangeade put the finishing touch to his meal. He also likes calves' liver and bacon, or spaghetti.

END THE FEEL-PUNK, DRAG-FOOT DAYS

Dull headaches, poor appetite, sleeplessness are warning signs. You feel low—hate to work. These symptoms may point to constipation due to "low-bulk" meals.

Why throw these days out of your life—particularly when regular habits make you feel so good. Get "bulk" by eating a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

There's nothing experimental about ALL-BRAN. Millions of people have used it successfully. Scientific tests prove it is safe and effective. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. Serve as a cereal, or cook into delicious recipes.

By Margaret Wallace.

WHAT TO GIVE the bride is often a matter perplexity. Gifts would fit in with the future plans of the bride and with her desires.

It is entirely proper for close friends of a prospective bride to determine from her relatives what she needs and wants, what colors will be used in her trousseau or her new home, or to obtain any other information that will help them in selecting gifts.

The mother of a prospective bride has written the following letter relative to a shower planned for her daughter:

"DEAR MISS WALLACE—My daughter who is to be married very soon will return home next week. The day after she returns her friends intend to give her a shower at the home of one of the girls. I know just what color will be used in each room of my daughter's new home in a distant city. I also know the color of her trousseau clothes. The girls have not asked my advice, but do you think it would be proper for me to tell them the colors she is using? They have been very nice about consulting me about refreshments and arrangements for the luncheon and so forth but have said nothing about the color of gifts they will bring to the shower."

By all means tell the girls. They will be delighted to know just what colors your daughter will want when they go shopping. Nothing is so harassing to a bride as to find that the articles she prizes most because of the giver do not fit in with her new home.

It is not unusual in these days for the bride to pick the pattern of silver she likes best and to be frank in telling her preference if any of her close friends ask which pattern she likes. This frankness, of course, is only permissible between close friends and members of the family. Even an acquaintance may make tactful inquiries and choose her gifts from the pattern of silver the bride likes, if silver is to be the gift. This also applies to other articles, such as china and glassware.

The custom usual among many groups of girls of giving engagement presents when one of their group becomes engaged is a very pleasant one. It is not necessary to have a shower or a party and the gift, which should not be expensive, could be sent with a message of congratulations. No engaged girl really expects such an attention from friends who will soon be called on to give her wedding presents, but they are very acceptable and quite proper. Intimate girl friends usually select some article that can be added to the store of linen and laces in the hope chest or to the trousseau.

It is quite proper for the fiance of a young girl to give her a present which can be used in the future home they are planning, such as a small table, or a chair or a picture. Very often a gracious gesture from the family of the man to whom a girl is engaged is to send something for their future home.

Judgment Needed To Fit Apartment

If you furnish your apartment on a budget—and who doesn't—don't think that means economizing on a lampshade that comes apart the first time it is dusted, or going without comfortable chairs. The trick is to decorate with distinction and charm for exactly what you spend. Here is some advice on the subject from House Beautiful:

Use natural colors where there is a lot of space and save your bright colors for accent. Use enough patterned fabrics to give life to your rooms, but not enough to make them "busy." Don't ever try to economize on rugs; you can't. Only the best is good enough, and only the best will last through time and good taste. Buy furniture of good design, and don't be carried away by an astonishingly low price, if the piece itself isn't exactly what you want. Be sure to save enough out for those little touches that make the difference between a nice apartment and a charming one. And finally, use your imagination.

Edith Maxwell Returns Home From Capital

Edith Maxwell, after a visit to Washington and Alexandria, was back at her new home yesterday—the farm near Richmond which she and her family are working as tenants.

She will remain there until it is time for her to go to Wise, Va., where on November 16 she will be called to trial a second time for the "slipper murder" of Trigg Maxwell, her blacksmith father.

During her visit to Washington, the erstwhile school teacher of the Lonesome Pine country went to a movie, accompanied by a representative of The Post. To the horror of the latter, the first thing thrown on the screen was a short feature of the "Crime Does Not Pay" type. It was pretty grim "entertainment," especially for a 22-year-old girl who faces trial for the murder of her father.

Companion Apologizes.

After the show, the companion apologized to Edith for the blunder. Edith made it plain that the apologies were not necessary, since she had been able to view the crime picture much like anybody else in the theater.

Her conscience, she said, does not bother her.

"If I believed I murdered my father," she said, "I would want to be in prison. I wouldn't want to be outside. I couldn't stand to face people."

Readers Give to Fund.

A jury of mountaineers found her guilty of first-degree murder and she was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary. Readers of The Washington Post subscribed to a fund to finance a fight for a new trial. Charles Henry Smith, prominent Alexandria attorney, led this fight.

Now, thanks to the decision of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, the girl has another chance to plead her case.

Mrs. I. M. Scott	$5.00
Eleanor N. Darby	2.00
A Service Man, Naval Hosp.	1.00
Miss Mary Ann Davis	5.00
Yesterday's total	$13.00
Previously reported	$274.50

McKee Re-elected Yale Club's Head

Oliver McKee, jr., Washington newspaper correspondent, will serve the Yale Club of Washington another year as president, it was announced yesterday following annual elections of the club.

All other officers also were re-elected, and two members were retained on the board of directors. Eugene Meyer is first vice president; Edward Burling, jr., second vice president; D. D. Lambert, secretary, and Charles G. Cooper, treasurer.

Elected for another term on the board of directors are Herbert A. Smith and Edgar K. Legg 3d. New directors include William S. Culbertson, Bowen Fairfax, Waldron Faulkner, Richard W. Griswold, Leroy E. Peabody and Charles R. M. Tuttle.

Berwyn Boy Dies From Cold Tablets

David Jenkins, jr., 4, of Berwyn Md., died yesterday at Children's Hospital from an overdose of cold tablets, which he accidentally took at his home the night before.

The boy was found by his mother, Mrs. David Jenkins, with the bottle of tablets in his hand. He suffered no ill effects, until yesterday morning when his father rushed him to the hospital. He died three hours later.

Schrom Back at Desk After 2-Month Leave

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom was back at his desk yesterday after a two-month sick leave suggested by the District Commissioners.

He indicated that he has abandoned temporarily an idea of applying for retirement because of his improvement in health.

Fanciers Revert to Jungle Law As Cats' Cages; Funds Vanish

Meow!

A bitter cat fight rocked Washton last night as two factions in the Columbia Cat Fanciers, Inc., battled in court for possession of 207 cat cages and a fat cat bank account at the Riggs National Bank.

As a result of the civil war, two sets of officers of the club each claims power and denounces the other as a "rump" outfit, and a cat show scheduled for Dec. 6 is in grave jeopardy.

The 207 cat cages have vanished from sight and ken. Even experienced deputy marshals have been unable to find them. What's just as important, the bank account has disappeared, too.

Justice Joseph W. Cox in District Court, will try to untangle the cat fight next Friday, but he will have two uncaged lawyers fortified with laws, documents, petitions, counter-petitions, and outspoken witnesses to contend with. They are Ira Chase Koehne, Navy department attorney and president of one faction, and Herbert S. Ward, retained by the other faction. Koehne owns 150 cats, Ward—none.

The scrap started last July, when a member moved that six others be expelled for non-attendance at meetings and delinquency in dues. Those up for expulsion were Koehne, his wife, Katherine, his daughter, Helen; Mrs. Edward Martin, whose husband manages the Lee House; Ann Hocher Wilkes, of Woodley Towers; Frances Marshall, of the Kennedy-Warren, and Annette H. McCarthy, of the Kennedy-Warren.

According to Koehne yesterday, they were expelled without notice. He protested attendance at meetings in a cat society should not be compulsory, "that members should not be slaves," and demanded reinstatement. This the society refused but did offer the expelled member a chance to be heard at an open trial.

According to Ward, they refused to be tried, and instead called a meeting of their own and elected new officers. Three former members joined them, making nine present, four more than necessary for a quorum. The club has 39 members, but since attendance is irregular the by-laws provide that five is a quorum. Koehne said all members were summoned, but Ward said the summonses did not give "the time, date, or place" of the election.

The new officers, joined by Mabel E. Hitchcock, secretary, of 1761 Massachusetts avenue northwest, notified the Riggs Bank by letter not to release any funds unless countersigned by the new officers.

By a twist of fate, Miss Mary Foley, treasurer of the original group, happened to walk into the bank at noon one day while the cashier possessing the letter was out to lunch. She cashed a check for the entire funds of the club and walked out with it. Oh no! She did leave $4 behind.

Yeow!

The new officers began to claw the bank. Bank officials tried to get Miss Foley to give back the money, but she said she had given it to Mary E. Hantzmon, president of her group, and Mrs. Hantzmon said she wouldn't give it up unless ordered to do so by a court.

Shortly thereafter a replevin suit was filed by the original group to recover possession of their, or what they said was their, cages. Also the books, papers, records, and other assets of the club, all in possession of the rebel secretary. A marshal called upon Mabel Hitchcock to get the cages but she said she didn't have them. She intimated President Koehne might have them at his home at 8801 Georgia avenue, which is across the District line, out of jurisdiction of District courts.

Asked if he had them yesterday, Koehne declared, "Now look here! I'm not saying where they are. I'm not going to let that pack of women get any information that'll be of use to them."

The cages are vitally necessary for the cat show, all parties are agreed. The Koehne faction is opposed to a show, fearing it would lose money, while the Hantzmon faction insists on a show for fear the Columbia Cat Fanciers, Inc., will be expelled from the Cat Fanciers' Association of America if they don't hold one. They've skipped two years now, and one is supposed to be fatal.

Both groups have laid their problem before Miss Elsie Hydon, of Bogota, N. J., president of the national organization, but she, unfortunately, is in Europe, where she has been of no service.

Latest development in the affairs of the Columbia Cat Fanciers, Inc., "a corporation formed for the purpose of properly breeding both long-haired and short-haired cats," was the filing yesterday of a mandamus action on the new officers by the old officers, seeking to compel them to disclose the whereabouts of the cages and books.

This will be followed immediately by a cross-action to compel the former officers "who are pretending to be officers and unauthorizedly are attempting to wreck the club"—according to Koehne—to disclose to him the whereabouts of the bank account.

Meanwhile, Koehne said he and his group are going ahead with plans to establish "an international cat week," with him as general chairman, for the second week in December.

Stroke Is Fatal To Lorado Taft, Noted Sculptor

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—Lorado Taft, 76, world-famous sculptor, who devoted his great artistic gifts toward spreading beauty among the commonplaces of everyday life, died at his home here today.

Stricken with a paralytic stroke a week ago Taft appeared to be gaining strength and asked to be taken among his works of art only a short time before he passed away.

His works of art are known from coast to coast. As a member of the Fine Arts Commission he guarded the artistic development of Washington, D. C. The Columbus Statue in the Union Station Plaza was designed by Taft.

Outstanding among Taft's other works are the heroic figure of Blackhawk, the Indian, above the Rock River, in Illinois, and "The Fountain of Time" on the midway of the University of Chicago.

Active Three Weeks Ago.

Less than three weeks ago Taft journey to Quincy, Ill., to join in the dedication of a monument on the spot where Judge Stephen A. Douglas and Abraham Lincoln held one of their famous debates.

Taft designed the plaque, a graphic representation of Lincoln standing at a table, with Douglas seated, head bowed, at his right.

The sculptor never grew old in his art, years after he had passed from the influences of Parisian art circles and struggled through financial difficulties and reverses to achieve recognition in his native land, Taft's skillful hands fashioned work that was a continual expression of the buoyancy and beauty of youth.

Taft was born at Elmwood, Ill., April 29, 1860. His father, Don Carlos Taft was a professor in the University of Illinois. During his boyhood Taft was permitted to help a Belgian sculptor repair a collection of casts. There he first bent his skill to works of statuary.

Abroad Five Years.

After receiving his master's degree from the University of Illinois in 1880, young Taft set out for France with only $250. He studied abroad for five years and returned to Chicago to seek his fortune.

He taught in the Art Institute to bolster his meager resources and was given his first important commission for work at the World's Fair. A fortunate turn of events induced a special commission to engage Taft to fashion the first of a series of statuaries to beautify Chicago. "The Great Lakes," won instant popularity and his unique conception in the creation of "The Fountain of Time" produced a work recognized as the most elaborate example of purely ideal sculpture in America.

As his face grew, Taft began to devote more and more of his time toward beautifying the small communities of the midwest. He frequently sketched improvements for small municipalities, after making mental notes while passing through them.

Noted as Lecturer

With this in mind he went on the lecture platform and wrote several theses on art. His "History of American Sculpture" is a standard volume in many art schools. Taft was non-resident professor on art in his alma mater, a professorial lecturer in the University of Chicago and retained an active interest in his studio group in the heart of Chicago.

In the winter of 1925 Taft fashioned a group called "The Pioneers" to be placed at Elmwood, his boyhood home. The statuary represents a pioneer behind his crude plow. An attack by Indians is indicated by the fear on the face of the wife who fled to his side, carrying a baby.

With the sculptor when he succumbed were his wife, Mrs. Ada Bartlett Taft, and his three daughters, Mrs. Paul H. Douglas, of Chicago; Mrs. Raymond Smith, Greensboro, N. C., and Mrs. Roger Crane, of Groton-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Five Out on Bond After Gaming Raid

Four men and an attractive brunette, arrested Thursday by the vice squad, were released on bond when arraigned before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on gaming charges yesterday.

The men gave their names as William Reavis, 31, of the 400 block of Second street northwest; Calvin Cheeks, colored, 20, of the 600 block of Second street northwest; Nicholas James Sakell, 30, 1500 block of Rhode Island avenue northeast, and Joseph B. McCaffery, 34, of the 400 block of Maryland avenue southwest. All except Reavis were released in $2,000 bail. His bond was fixed at $1,500. All pleaded not guilty.

Police arrested the men after following Sarah Ehrlich, 28, as she visited nearly 20 gambling establishments. She also was released on $2,000 bail.

A hearing was set for November 20.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Dr. Albert F. Woods, director of the Graduate School of the Department of Agriculture, writes today's Diary for Samuel Lubell, The Post's Federal Diaryist, who will be absent from the city for a few days.

By Dr. Albert F. Woods.

Increasing Efficiency

Few people in Washington realize that nearly 3,000 employes in the Civil Service in the various Government departments are at their own expense taking advanced studies in the graduate school of the Department of Agriculture with a view to increasing their efficiency and interest in their work. On April 12, 1892, Congress passed a joint resolution making it possible for the various departments of the Federal Government to make any special facilities that they possessed that were valuable for educational purposes available to qualified students coming from colleges in the District of Columbia for advanced work. By act of March 3, 1901, this privilege was extended to include all States and territories.

Under the general provisions of this act the Bureau of Standards and the Department of Agriculture have organized special courses of study, given after office hours or in the morning before official hours commence.

The work in the Department of Agriculture was organized in 1920. It began as strictly graduate courses open to those who had completed collegiate work for a bachelor's or master's degree and was presented according to the best approved collegiate plan, so that the credits earned might be used in securing advanced degrees in the various colleges and universities.

The work not only met the approval of the civil service employes and others taking it, but it found hearty co-operation on the part of the colleges of the country. Credits earned in the school were accepted by these colleges, including most of the best known institutions of the country. Naturally more have registered in the local colleges than in those at a distance. The graduate school does not itself grant degrees and it is not believed desirable that it should do so.

In the past two years arrangements have been made with American University, to develop co-operatively, special courses in their schools of public affairs. Registration in these co-operative courses has been very heavy and the results have been highly satisfactory. It seems likely that the plan will not only be extended in connection with American University, but may be expanded to include special fields of co-operation with other local institutions.

Fifty Courses

About 50 courses are in operation in the school at the present time, covering a very wide field. These include various courses in economics, statistics, history of agriculture, agricultural chemistry and soils, mathematics, especially mathematics required for use in statistical analysis and other scientific procedures, organic chemistry, chemistry of foods and nutrition, diseases of plants, breeding plants for disease resistance, micro-biology of diseases of animals, landscape architecture, soil morphology and classification, architectural drawing, high-speed stenography and reporting, English, grammar and composition, editing, agricultural writing, administrative law, judicial procedure, law and economis and a great variety of other subjects required in the technical work in the Department of Agriculture or other departments.

The instructional staff is selected from the best qualified Government experts and teachers from nearby colleges. They are paid a small fee which is provided by a sufficient tuition charge to cover the cost of operating the school. All expenses of operation are paid from the funds secured in this way. Most of the work is centered in the buildings of the Department of Agriculture. Some of it, however, is conducted in the Smithsonian Institution and American University.

As the work has developed, it has become necessary to include considerable undergraduate instruction in subjects which are necessary to complete preparation for advanced degrees. This is especially true in languages.

In addition to the regular class work, series of lectures have been given from time to time covering such fields as personnel administration, current economic problems and new developments in various fields. Washington offers excellent opportunities to secure such lecturers frequently at small expense. But where it is necessary the school has paid the traveling expenses and an honorarium to lecturers from different parts of the country.

Several hundred of these lectures have been provided in the past two years and have been very largely attended. More than half of the students in the school come from other departments than agriculture. During the last school year every Federal department in Washington was represented by one or more students. There were also students taking special courses from all of the local colleges and from many colleges at a distance.

Senator Smith's Son to Marry Laura Douglas

Couple Met Two Years Ago at Gingham Ball; May Wed Next Week.

Charles Saxon Farley Smith, husky 6-foot son of United States Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, yesterday took out a license to marry a girl he met when he wore overalls and she a gingham dress.

The girl is Laura Maxim Douglas, 20, of 1785 Massachusetts avenue northwest, the palatial apartment house that has sheltered Andrew Mellon and other multimillionaires.

Smith, who gave his age to the marriage license clerk as 21, met Miss Douglas two years ago at the Gingham Ball, a gay make-believe party in which the young men wore overalls and the girls gingham dresses.

Phillips to Wed Couple.

The name of the Rev. Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, chaplain of the United States Senate, appears on the license as the clergyman who will marry the couple.

Dr. Phillips said last night that Smith and Miss Douglas had not yet called on him. A friend, he said, communicated with him Thursday to ask him to perform the ceremony. In the Episcopal church, Dr. Phillips explained, a three-day interval must elapse before the marriage can place, so he assumed they would be married next week.

Friends Call Him Farley.

Friends of the prospective bridegroom, who lives at Wardman Park Hotel, skip his first two given names—Charles Saxon—and call him Farley, his third given name. This is the surname of his mother, who was Anne Farley.

He was born on the 1,000-acre plantation of Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith, his father, at Lynchburg, S. C. He attended Wofford College at Spartanburg, S. C., and played on the football team there.

He has been employed as assistant clerk of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, of which his father is chairman.

Colored Voters Held Misled by New Deal

That the colored voter, because of racial sentimentality, has been taken advantage of, and is being led back into slavery by "witch doctors," creatures of the New Deal, was the sentiment expressed last night at a Republican rally held in the auditorium of the John Wesley Church by Edgar C. Snyder, former marshal of the District.

Speaking in place of National Committeeman Edward F. Colladay, who was in Pittsburgh, Snyder drew a picture of the colored voter, at present in a precarious position under New Deal manipulation of relief funrs, and predicted the complete loss of his freedom should the New Deal continue in power. Other speakers were J. F. Wilson and Francis Wells.

"Red Birds," "Buccaneers," and "Cherries" by the dozens—all chrysanthemums—stood in stately rows yesterday at the greenhouse of the Department of Agriculture, helping to "put across" the biggest show of its kind ever held in Washington.

Both sides of the greenhouse were lined with pompon varieties in every conceivable shade and in shapes varying from short and flat florets to fluted and quilled ones. Japanese chrysanthemums, tall, straight and bearing a single bloom to each pot, stood in the center, while hanging from the ceiling were baskets bearing plumed feathery flowers of the cascade, or mountain variety.

Many blossoms in the display bore names of prominent men and women. The "Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt," a large yellow chrysanthemum, was the tallest, measuring 7 feet and 7 inches. The "Mrs. Herbert Hoover," a rich russet-colored flower, held a prominent place, as did the "Rexford G. Tugwell," the "Peggy Anne Hoover," and the "Ilo," named for Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who was hostess to a number of persons at the annual private view, which preceded the public exhibition.

A new variety named "Puck" was described as a cross between plants bearing the names of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Grace Coolidge.

Names of many celebrites outside political circles also appeared. A blossom which appeared dark blue was titled "Maj. Edward Bowes."

Less than a year ago, the 417 pompons, 210 Japanese blossoms and 11 cascade plants were all small cuttings. On display yesterday each of these was a monument to horticultural ingenuity and skill in cultivation. Each had its origin in one of two small insignificant chrysanthemums native to Japan. One of these, the "chrysanthemum indicum," was prominently placed in the display, but attracted little attention from the men and women who paused to admire many of the other blossoms. The other, the "morifolium," is a much rarer plant, according to J. Wise Byrnes, horticulturist for the Department of Agriculture, and was not represented in its original form in the exhibit.

Hazen Opposes Funds for Park On Watts Creek

Spokesmen for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday unsuccessfully sought the aid of the District Commissioners in obtaining $550,000 for the purchase of Watts branch and adjacent land for a parkway.

Melvin C. Hazen, president of the board of commissioners, told Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the commission, and John Nolen, jr., director of planning, that he would oppose any plan for leaving the Northeast creek open.

The commission's proposal called for the development of Watts branch through the Deanwood section as a scenic area.

"I am opposed to leaving such streams open," Hazen said. "Watts branch already is polluted, and usually such creeks become worse as the section is built up because the water dries up."

Hazen said that he favored the eventual construction of a storm-water sewer to serve the Deanwood area.

The matter will be given further study and probably will be presented to the Budget Bureau directly by the Park and Planning Commission.

Dime-Novel Theft Staged by Bandit

In true dime-novel style—handkerchief over face, cap low over eyes and coat collar turned up—an armed colored bandit yesterday held up Helen Young, 28, attendant at a High ice cream store, at 2624 Fourteenth street and took $12 from the store.

Miss Young, who lives at 1329 Belmont street northwest, told police the man rushed into the store and excitedly said, "Open that register and give me the money." He ordered her into a rear room. When she returned to the front of the store, the bandit had fled.

Wedell Air Lines Bought by Eastern

Capt. Eddie V. Rickenbacker, vice president of North American Aviation, Inc. and general manager of Eastern Airlines, announced yesterday his firm had purchased the Wedell-Williams Air Service Corporation.

The announcement was made jointly with Mrs. Harry P. Williams, president of the acquired line, who stated application for transfer of the air-mail contract held by her firm would be filed immediately with the Postoffice Department.

Wedell-Williams operates air mail, passenger and express service from New Orleans, La., to Houston, Tex., with intermediate stops at Baton Rouge, La., and Beaumont, Tex. These airlines now will be traveled by the Rickenbacker planes.

Giant Goblin Parade Starts At 7:30 P.M.

BiggestHalloween March to Be Touched Off by Maj. Brown.

The biggest Halloween parade ever planned for Washington is scheduled to begin tonight promptly at 7:30 when an automobile bearing Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, starts up Constitution avenue from Sixth street.

Final plans announced yesterday at a luncheon of the Greater National Capital committee and committees for the Halloween festival indicated more than 5,000 persons will be in the line of march, which also will include 15 huge inflated balloon figures, 22 commercial floats, 15 civic floats, 11 bands, 11 decorated private vehicles, 50 marching units and 104 individual marchers.

Lights along the route of parade, Constitution avenue from Sixth to Seventeenth streets, will be turned on at 5:30 p. m. An hour later a committee appointed for the purpose will be at the Willard Hotel to meet mayors and distinguished guests from nearby towns who will be in Washington for the parade. Harry Somerville, manager of the Willard Hotel, will be host at the reception.

Meanwhile, the queen of the Halloween festival and members of her court will be at the same hotel, until 7 p. m., when they will be transported by bus to Sixth street at Constitution avenue. During the parade, distinguished guests, including members of the Diplomatic Corps, D. C. Commissioners and visiting mayors, will be in the reviewing stands that line Constitution avenue between Fourteenth and Seventeenth streets.

Queen's Section Leads.

The queen's section, which leads the parade, will consist of the chief of police, the Police Boys Club Band, three marching units of Job's Daughters, the court jester, Maurice Jarvis and Ada Dameron, king and queen of the festival, and members of her court.

When the queen's float approaches the center section of the reviewing stand, it will stop for 15 minutes while the queen and her court alight and walk into places reserved for them in the stands. Remaining sections of the parade, led by Frank Portillo, marshal, then will proceed up the avenue past the reviewing stands.

Among some of the unusual features of the parade will be the balloon animals, some of which are 40 feet long and 14 feet tall, which will be a part of the fifth section. In the line-up also will be a float from the Women's City Club depicting "Miss Columbia and Uncle Sam in Politics;" a "Nut Tree" civic float in charge of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and a "Witches Dream" unit from the Community Center Department.

Optimists Give Dinner.

While this celebration is in progress, other entertainments also will be taking place throughout the city. Approximately 150 Washington Optimists and their wives will be attending a formal dinner dance in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel from 9 p. m. through the remainder of the evening. The Newspaper Women's Club will have an informal party for members and friends from 9 p. m. until 1:00 a. m. at the Admiral Club, 1640 Rhode Island avenue. A Halloween Masque Ball, given by Washington Post No. 58, Jewish War Veterans, will take place at the Shoreham from 9:30 until 1:00 a. m.

Ace Dog Attendant Accused Of Promoting Numbers Racket

Canine Awaits as Perfect Servant Goes to Police Station; Employer Declares That the Charge Is Frame-up.

Theodore, "the perfect servant," is the only one in the fashionable household of Miss Violet Biddle who can handle Aldebarontofoscoforlia Chrononthotonthologos.

In addition to being Master of the Hound, Theodore, whose last name is Brock and who is colored, drives Miss Biddle's automobile, with Aldebarontofoscoforlia Chrononthotonthologos often sitting proudly in the front seat because he likes Theodore.

Yesterday, as Theodore was getting ready to take the pet for a walk, Detective Sergt. George Deyoe appeared on the scene and arrested him for setting up a gaming table.

Theodore, Deyoe said, unbeknownst to Miss Biddle, had played the numbers game in his basement servant's quarters, with many of the maids, the butlers, the cooks and the housemen of the aristocratic neighborhood as his customers.

On evenings they knocked on Theodore's door, according to Deyoe, and took their numbers slips, all for a tryst with Dame Fortune in a world otherwise drab with the monotony of servitude.

Deyoe took Theodore to headquarters while the big dog in Miss Biddle's home waited impatiently for his airing. The chauffeur raised $1,500 bond and was released.

"Theodore has been framed," said Miss Biddle last night.

"He has worked for me three years, and is most honest and kind."

Theodore returned to the Biddle home late yesterday afternoon and found his job waiting for him.

School Board Votes to Back Kemp's Appeal

The Board of Education last night voted unanimously in a private poll to approve and concur in the recommendation of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal that Lois Kemp, 11-year-old Clarendon, Va., girl, be allowed to enter Gordon Junior High School.

The girl, however, probably will not know until Wednesday whether she can enroll until the appeal of her father's suit can be decided by the District Court of Appeals.

It was Seal's suggestion that Lois and any other nonresidents whose fathers are employed in Washington be permitted to enroll with the understanding that their status can be reconsidered at the end of the present term of school, January 31.

Through Robert E. Lynch, counsel for Lois' father, John S. Kemp, it was announced that the condition was acceptable.

The proposed poll was made by Charles B. Degges, secretary, and it was understood results would be given Seal through the office of Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou.

Resignation Of Roberts Is Accepted

President Roosevelt has accepted the resignation of People's Counsel William A. Roberts, effective today, it was stated at the White House yesterday.

Although several citizens' associations have suggested by resolution that Roberts be asked to continue in office, the President apparently made no such request.

As he has made no appointment of a successor to Roberts, the office will become vacant tomorrow.

Roberts was out of the city yesterday making political speeches for members of Congress, and the White House secretariat declined to make public the letter that Mr. Roosevelt wrote to Roberts.

It was said that the letter was dated October 26, but it is customary for the recipient of the letter to make it public. Roberts did not do so before leaving on his political trip.

There still is a possibility that the President may in affect abolish the office of people's counsel by failing to appoint a new man. While Governor of New York he rejected a recommendations of a special committee that a similar office be created in connection with the New York Public Service Commission.

Before leaving Washington, Roberts addressed a letter to the District Commissioners indorsing a plan now before judges of the Municipal Court to set up a small claims court. He urged the District heads to take whatever steps are necessary to establish the court, explaining that legislation is unnecessary.

Roberts expressed the opinion that the court will be a benefit to many impoverished District residents who are unable to litigate small claims ranging from $3 to $50.

$830,000 Sought By Welfare Board

With the principal aim of providing direct relief for some 1,000 families headed by "employables," the Board of Public Welfare yesterday asked the District Commissioners to submit a budgetary request for a supplemental appropriation of $830,000.

Actually only $630,000 of the fund asked would be used to give aid to the "employables," now barred from relief rolls and unable to obtain WPA jobs.

An additional $135,000 was asked to supplement the aid now being given to 4,500 families of "unemployables" on the ground that the present monthly allotments are inadequate.

Hollywood, Oct. 30.

So the "guides to movie stars' homes" have reached the end of the road! It required years for the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce to ban them from city streets, but success has finally crowned tireless efforts. The once familiar automobiles bearing "Movie Guide" signs are gone. A new ordinance bars the parking of such "commercial motors" roadside.

KATHERINE HEPBURN.

In one sense, this seems a pity. The movie guides were as much a part of this colony's glamour as are star-studded night clubs and towering studio walls.

The movie guides brought this disaster upon themselves. Had they conducted their business properly, acting simply as pointer-outers of movie star estates, they might have been tolerated indefinitely. But when they gave out erroneous information, such as:

"This is the house William Powell built for Ginger Rogers" and "Here is the home Jack Oakie built with money he won from Bing Crosby in a dice game," the guides became serious menaces. Worse yet, some of them became self-appointed gossips, and entertained customers with juicy, highly imaginative untruths of goings-on behind certain stars' doors.

• • • •

Some days back I ran across Clark Gable's mother and father visiting MGM studio. "It is nice of you," I said, with a side glance at Clark who was listening with a proud grin, "to come to watch your son at work." "Oh, we didn't come to see him," Mrs. Gable exclaimed. "We came to see Joan Crawford." The big, red-faced hulk who beat it to the far side of the stage before I could think up a smart-crack was Clark.

Funny sometimes to watch reactions of new players to previews of their first picture. I recall arriving late for a sneak showing of Katharine Hepburn's first movie and coming upon Katty seated in her automobile parked around the corner from the theater. Her courage had failed her at the theater entrance.

A few nights ago I attended a preview of "The Magnificient Brute" with William Hall. Bill is a newcomer to be watched with interest; his performance in this picture stacks him up as one of the season's bright promises. Well, I had my hands full holding him in his seat. He perspired, figeted, bit his nails, stroked his hair, and breathed in short gasps.

"PIGSKIN PARADE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original story by Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin and Mark Kelley, adapted to the screen by Harry Tugend, Jack Yellen and William Counselman, featuring Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley, the Yacht Club Boys, Stuart Erwin, Johnny Downs, Arline Judge, Dixie Dunbar, Judy Garland, Fred Kohler, jr., Elisha Cook, jr., Eddie Nugent and Julius Tannen. Directed by David Butler. Previewed Wednesday, October 28.

It might as well be set down first as last that this item of celluloid entertainment doesn't add up to anything but a lot of delightful foolishness.

BELL.

The basic idea upon which the gay and tuneful frolic is founded is that by a secretarial mistake at Yale, Texas State University, with an enrollment of 700, gets the big football game with Old Eli. The early scenes of the picture are in the nature of a "build up" to the playing of the gridiron classic and the concluding sequences depict that classic with a wealth of humorous detail that writes this subject down as a distinct departure from the formula upon which all earlier fall football pictures have been compounded.

Comedy is the keynote of the entire charade. It is a joke, to begin with, that Texas State ever got the game, but the satire is made to pursue a cumulative course by subsequent developments. A high school coach from Flushing, L. I., is hired to whip the Texans into shape, and with the aid of his sagacious wife he manages to do it—only the wife, in a playful moment, breaks the leg of the school's star fullback. It is then that Stuart Erwin edges into the picture as a cantaloupe heaver who gives promise of becoming a great passing back. He makes good in a very big and spectacular way—by taking off his shoes and stockings in the course of the blizzard in which the game is played and "getting the feel of his toes on the ground" for the touchdown that humbles the Bulldog by a score of 13 to 7 or something like that.

Is Musically Embellished.

During the movement of this major thread of narrative, there are many songs introduced and most of them are hits. The Yacht Club Boys, Mann, Kelly, Adler and Kern, are a tower of strength in this department of the goings-on, although Dixie Dunbar, Judy Garland, Patsy Kelly and Jack Haley are not to be lightly laughed off—or maybe they are, since their function in the piece is to provide hilarious comedy.

This Judy Garland person is a trick worth watching. She sings with all of the fervor and "showmanship" of an Al Jolson and has a voice that might not do for operatic arias, but very definitely does do for popular swing tunes.

The Yacht Club Boys are in a class by themselves when it comes to putting over tricky lyrics, and in this subject they have the added advantage of casting that gives them parts to play and lines to speak. All of these things they do to the queen's, or is it the king's, taste.

Stuart Erwin, as the hill-billy passer and broken-field runner, is wholly in his element, and Arline Judge, as the college vamp, also is cast completely within her ample capabilities. Patsy Kelly is not always as funny as I have seen her, but Jack Haley, as the bogus coach, does himself fairly proud. Betty Grable is a blonde decoration that adds to the picture's general effect, and Dixie Dunbar picks them up and lays them down in a tap dance number that is pretty much of all right.

Johnny Perkins Stars.

The comedy bang of the film comes in the final scenes when the big game is won in a blizzard and the Yacht Club Boys prance down the field singing "We Brought You the Texas Sunshine." Try and find it!

On the stage this week that animated puffball, known as Johnny Perkins, "a ton of fun," appears as monologistic star and master of ceremonies. His chatter, as usual, is glib and pointed.

During the course of the procedures he introduces three clever male hoofers, Pete, Peaches and Duke, who step off some very intricate measures; Martha Mears, a mezzo torch singer; Anderson and Allen, gymnasts par excellence; Jean Goodner, an acrobatic dancer of the first water; Elaine Arden, a female George Givot, and the Picchiani Troupe of bounding athletes, who contrive some new effects with old stunts.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions are the auxiliaries of a feature that is good for the proverbial "laugh a second," with some catchy songs and dances thrown in for good measure.

Metropolitan

"A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM." Max Reinhardt's picturization for Warner Brothers of the Shakespeare fantasy, with James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter, Veree Teasdale, Hugh Herbert, Ross Alexander, Anita Louise, Jean Muir, Victor Jory, Frank McHugh, Grant Mitchell, Mickey Rooney and all-star cast. Directed by Max Reinhardt and William Dieterle. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

For an unforgettable and incomparable excursion into the land of visions, there is nothing quite like "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Its beauty beggars adjectives. The sweep of its action and its broad human touch, contrasted with will-o'-the-wisp visions, are a keen reminder that there was never such another playwright as Will Shakespeare. Lastly, it proves that Hollywood is still head and shoulders above the rest of the world when it comes to putting out great pictures.

The richness of Shakespeare's imagination has inspired what can only properly be called a corresponding opulence of vision in photography. Titania and her myriad fairy- train play their gay games in a land of mist and moonbeams Oberon, somber king of the night, comes attended by the night and all its stars. The bodies of these folk from fairyland seem insubstantial as clouds, they dance like mist-wraiths. If you ask us, there's black and white magic in this picture and only half of it is Shakespeare's. The rest came out of a camera.

Possesses Earthy Comedy.

The earthy and jolly comedy of human folks which is set against the doings of Titania's realm gives the picture just the weight it needs. Also, it is mightily well done. Hollywood's boys and girls can read Shakespeare's lines with gusto and brilliance.

You hardly need reminding that "Midsummer Night's Dream" is an all-star picture, with Jimmy Cagney, as Nick Bottom; Anita Louise, as the Queen of Fairyland; the sturdy and suave Ian Hunter, as Duke Theseus; Dick Powell, as Lysander, and Olivia de Havilland as his lady-love; Mickey Rooney, as Puck; Joe E. Brown, Ross Alexander, Victor Jory, Jean Muir, Hugh Herbert, Frank McHugh, Verree Teasdale and others. The cast reads like a "Who's Who" of Hollywood.

Cagney does Nick Bottom to, let us say, Queen Titania's taste. Anita Louise is a vision of delight as Titania, although Shakespeare's Titania, we believe, had a touch more of caprice than was indicated. Victor Jory plays King Oberon with great finesse. Though Dick Powell and Ross Alexander put plenty of comic stresses and overplays on their lover roles, this sort of thing is quite in the spirit of the play which is a comedy, after all, even though in the grand manner. Olivia de Havilland makes a delightful spitfire, a sort of demonstration which she is permitted to do too seldom.

Master Mickey Scores.

A good deal of criticism has been directed at little Mickey Rooney, as Puck. But though Mickey's yelps are a bit nerve-shocking and unfairylike, he is just about perfect in his impish carryings-on with mortal folks, where a lighter touch would have been too, too feathery.

The last time "Midsummer Night's Dream" was shown in this town, the price was $2.20, a price too low, in this critic's opinion, considering its rarity and beauty and the fact that it is probably the most wonderful production that ever came out of Hollywood.

Because of the extreme length of the picture, the newsreel is the only added feature. Shots of the new sweeps winners are included. We regret to say that they aren't quite as funny as they were last year.

"THE BIG BROADCAST OF 1937." Paramount picturization of a story by Arnyin Gelsey, Arthur Kober and Barry Trivers, featuring Jack Benny, Shirley Ross, Bob Burns, Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra, Martha Raye, Ray Milland, Frank Forrest, Benny Fields, Bennie Goodman and his band, Gracie Allen and George Burns. Directed by Mitchell Leisen. Reviewed Friday afternoon, second week, by Dorothea Lewis.

This edition of the more or less yearly round-up of radio-screen talent, comedy and music is quite up to its standard, which means it is pleasant, relax-at-able entertainment.

It is badly in need of cutting in spots, particularly early spots, but other than that, its hodge-podge variety is fun and stimulating and not at all hindered by its thread of a story.

That story concerns itself with the trials and tribulations of one Jack Carson, manager of a mammoth broadcasting station about which all manner of strange and clever people wander. His particular headache is caused by a young singer, whom he is supposed to keep off the air to please a temperamental artist and whom he wants to put on the air to please her and himself. Additional complications are the artist, the man the singer loves, and Gracie Allen!

In this well-earned second week, little more than a mere listing of the stars participating need be written.

There is, first and foremost, that ace comedian, Jack Benny, so easy, so expert, with the gift of exact timing, playing Carson. Shirley Ross is most attractive and talented as the young center of the story and romance, with Ray Milland, her choice. Frank Forrest is in excellent voice as the artist who resents competition.

Leopold Stokowski leads his magnificent orchestra in beautiful music, lighted and photographed with great artistry. And in direct contrast there is Benny Goodman and his band, tops in their own field.

The most lovable of all the performers is that big, broad, homey Bob Burns, who appears accidentally on all programs from advice to the lovelorn to beauty hints. Even Martha Raye, quite a bit subdued in comparison with her startling appearance in "Rhythm on the Range," is amusing, and if Gracie Allen had no more to say than that classic line—"George, George, hold his hat!" we'd be satisfied.

The subsidiaries include the "Pups' Picnic," a very animated color cartoon; a Pete Smith short, "Daredevilry," and a newsreel that goes on and on and on, forever.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

The problem of when to win a trick with an Ace is one that a defender cannot always solve without his partner's assistance. The particular card his partner plays from a worthless two or three-card holding can give a defender the clue to the correct defense. Typical is the hand below:

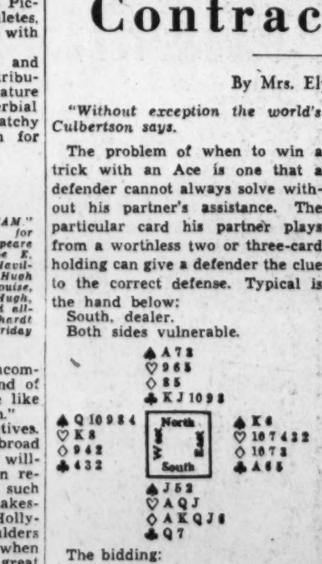
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

Only the spade weakness prevented South from bidding three no-trump after North's two-club response. North, with two honor-tricks and a very strong suit, naturally went to game.

West opened the ten of spades, dummy ducking, and East winning with the King. The spade return was held by West who continued the suit, knocking out dummy's Ace.

Declarer saw that at least one club trick (and more probably two) would have to be brought in if the contract were to be made. His only hope was that East had the Ace of clubs and would take it at the wrong time.

In order to encourage such a mistake, South led a low diamond from dummy and won with the Jack. The purpose of this play was to demonstrate the strength of the suit to East in the hope that he could be frightened into taking the first club. Then the Queen of clubs was led and overtaken by dummy's King.

But West played the deuce of clubs, thus indicating a holding of exactly three cards in the suit. (With two or four West would have played some card other than the lowest.) East, therefore, knew that South had started with two clubs.

With this knowledge, East waited for the second club lead. Then he took his Ace and led a heart. Since the heart King was guarded in West's hand, South could not make more than eight tricks.

"CAIN AND MABEL." Warner Brothers-Cosmopolitan picturization of a story by H. C. Witwer, co-starring Marion Davies and Clark Gable, with Roscoe Karns, Walter Catlett, William Collier, sr., Ruth Donnelly, Fert Kelton, David Carlyle, Hobart Cavanaugh, Allen Jenkins, E. E. Clive and Sammy White. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

With Marion Davies rather hopelessly miscast as a radiant young musical comedy star, and Clark Gable at the top of his form in the role of a professional pugilist, who is "shoved around" a trifle by an equally professional publicity hound, this picture has served the double purpose this week of opening the new Uptown Theater and providing the major screen feature of the new bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle.

The story is the familiar H. C. Witwer concoction of Broadway wisecracks and Madison Square Garden romance that finds a reluctant box-fighter being forced into an unwelcome publicity stunt with the star of a musical revue that isn't doing too well at the box-office. The story, of course, is less important than the manner of its treatment by the cameras. On this point there can be no quibbling. "Cain and Mabel" presents a few spectacular scenes that are almost on a par with the mammoth pictorial glories of "The Great Ziegfeld." Particularly is this true in the "I'll Sing You a Thousand Love Songs" sequence, in which a basic melody is tossed around much as "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" was counterpointed in "Ziegfeld."

There is a vast amount of smart-cracking in "Cain and Mabel," as there always was in every story H. C. Witwer ever wrote, and in the delivery of this portion of the masquerade the cast is pre-eminently qualified to cash in on the clever lines. It is in the song and dance numbers that Miss Davies shows to least advantage. Although once a member of a Broadway chorus, the star of the present opus has lost every vestige of the grace she formerly possessed and is convincing only in the early scenes of the picture, in which she appears as a waitress in a thinly disguised Child's Restaurant.

Gable, as the prizefighter, seems to have all the punch with which he was credited when he knocked a professional sparmate stiff during the screening of the fight scenes. Apart from these two, Miss Davies and Master Gable, the cast does not matter a great deal. William Collier and Allen Jenkins do yeoman's service, as Gable's manager, and trainer, and in Miss Davies theatrical side of the yarn, Ruth Donnelly and David Carlyle contribute comparably painstaking performances. Miss Donnelly is given scant chance to be as amusing as she might be, and the same may be said of Walter Catlett and Roscoe Karns, although both turn in portrayals that catch something of the Broadway flavor. Sammy White, as partner of the star in the Coney Island number—one of the most pretentious in the picture—executes a dance that is up to his usual standard of cleverness and originality.

On the stage at the Earle this week Don Bestor headlines with his orchestra in one of the most thoroughly enjoyable "band acts" that has been seen on a local stage in months on end. There is no blare and fanfare about the Bestor interval of melody, but there is about it a distinctive charm that finds its genesis in the sheer beauty of tuneful music played with almost the repression of a group devoted to chamber music. With only a dozen instrumentalists under his baton, Bestor coaxes more genuine music out of his men than anyone now before the public, with the possible exception of Guy Lombardo.

Two clever specialties accompany the organization. Neil Buckley is a tenor singer with a fine voice and effective delivery and "Ducky" Yontz is a comic songster with a fine flair for grotesque effects that never are permitted to become too grotesque for comfort.

In addition to the Bestor crew, the vaudeville bill includes Allen and Kent, dancers in the strictly modern manner, who introduce their dad and mother who take the audience back to the old days of the buck and wing, which the veterans step off with the precision and skill of schooled artists, and Eddie White, the elongated singing comedian, whose songs and banter never fail to elicit a resounding hand from the pewholders.

The newsreel and Freddie Clark's orchestral contributions are the auxiliaries of a feature that is eye-filling and tuneful, but not quite down its star's most becoming alley.

"DIMPLES." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin, starring Shirley Temple, supported by Frank Morgan, Helen Westley, Robert Kent and Astrid Allwyn. Directed by William Seiter. Reviewed (repeat engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Although this story of a talented, though tattered, ragamuffin and of a rich lady, who has disinherited her nephew because of his love of the stage, and her desire to adopt the child, may lose by comparison with other of the star's vehicles, "Dimples" will still give the dyed-in-the-wool Temple fans their moments of happiness.

The short subjects are "Pink Lemonade," with the Cabin Kids and Toto, the clown (who actually here speaks lines), swapping entertainment bits; "The Chemist," with Buster Keaton in an amusing comedy, and a release of the Metrotone News.

Little

"THE CONSTANT NYMPH." Fox release of the Gaumont British picturization of the novel by Margaret Kennedy, with screen play by Dorothy Farnum and dialogue by Margaret Kennedy and Basil Dean, featuring Brin Ahearn and Victoria Hopper, with Peggy Blythe, Jane Baxter, Jane Cornell, Herol Lavcrick, Lyn Harding, Mary Clare, Leonora Corbett, Fritzi Schultz, Tony De Lungo, Jim Gerald and Athole Stewart. Directed by Basil Dean. Reviewed (revival) by W. A. Whitney.

Filmed against a background of the Austrian Tyrol and relating a dramatic story of love, "The Constant Nymph," translated from the novel and stage play of the same name, brings back to the screen one of the better importations during the early days of the English "invasion."

With Brian Ahearn and Victoria Hopper bearing the main burdens of this story of unrequitted love, the play is effectively told, even if in quite the English way. Lyn Harding is the eccentric composer, with Mr. Ahearn the protege, Miss Hopper "the constant nymph." Lenora Corbett is the second woman in the case.

Rialto

"MOROCCO." Paramount production starring Gary Cooper and Marlene Dietrich, supported by Adolphe Menjou, Ulrich Haupt, Francis McDonald, Paul Porcasi, Eve Southern, Juliette Compton, Albert Conti and Michael Visaroff. Directed by Josef Von Sternberg. Reviewed (revival) by W. A. Whitney.

A great picture and its equally renowned sequal for the first time are being shown on the same bill at the Rialto Theater: "Three Little Pigs" and "The Big, Bad Wolf." Mighty in sheer entertainment, these two subjects present a combination unique in local programs.

Indeed, this return engagement of the pinkish porkers is of moment only slightly less than the presentation of "Morocco," the picture which presented Marlene Dietrich in her first production of Hollywood origin. Costarred with Miss Dietrich is Gary Cooper, both supported by a highly efficient company, including Adolphe Menjou, Paul Porcasi and Juliette Compton.

Always the theme for an engrossing narrative, the French Foreign Legion has seldom been utilized so effectively as in this story of Moroccan cities and deserts. It is replete with all those elements that make for a fine action story and it is given excellent interpretation.

"Morocco" was released October 25, 1930. But the passage of six years and six days has not dulled the worth of the performances of Cooper and Miss Dietrich. Rather does the picture tend to reveal that the stars of "Desire" may not have developed since as much as might have been expected.

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

CHAPTER 26.

"What did I do that was wrong, Strap?" asked Noel.

"That wireless you sent to Inspector Clevenger—in Brannigan's name! The way you organized our party at Manitou and whipped in here to straighten up this camp and keep those men from pitching off—in Brannigan's name. Clevenger didn't know—500 miles away . . . He thinks Brannigan did all that. He gave Brannigan the credit for that live-wire piece of work."

"Who gives a damn about credit? I used Brannigan's name to get action out of the mounted."

"You did get action—and how! Clevenger thought, and I don't blame him, that anybody who started a job so splendelegantly, ought to finish it. So, believe it or not, but"—Strap gestured at Brannigan again—"that balky jackass there, picking his teeth, that hunk of lazy mud, that hairy-necked missing link, that ambulating mistake, that walking-talking vegetable, he's the boss of his detail and in charge of the whole cussed works here!"

"What? Brannigan, in charge here? You're crazy!"

"I'm telling you! He is. And it's all your doings. He'll not only bungle this job but he'll sure ride you plenty, after the lip-larrupings you gave him yesterday. He loves you and Harla both."

Noel went pale. Brannigan, in charge here—the idea was so preposterous that he had laughed when Strap first broke the news. But the laugh died in his throat. The possible consequences of Clevenger's mistake were beginning to dawn on him, and he was frightened.

Brannigan, who had exchanged some words with the mounted detail, came sauntering up the landwash, an exultant grin on his face.

"My God," Strap groaned, "he's so dumb, Noel, that he doesn't kumtux why he's boss here! He thinks he rates it."

"So I got into the mounted p'lice by climbing a fence, hey? And I ain't decent bait for a p'lice dog team, hey? I'll fix you plenty for them remarks."

"And I'll fix you plenty with Clevenger, you engine knock!" Strap promised him hotly. "The first time I get to Fort James I'll light a basket of firecrackers under you."

Brannigan doubled up his fists. "Keep your gib outa this. Get into that plane of your'n and get gone, like you're s'posed to, or I'll pinch you."

As Noel listened to their quarrel, his heart sank and his last ditch plan of whipping up to those mountains and freeing Harla slowly crumbled away. Brannigan would never let him have this mounted detail. In the blind way of an ignoramus, Brannigan was vengeful against him and Harla both, and by a crazy hapchance the stupid dolt was holding the whiphand now. What use to tell him about Harla's plight? The unimaginative blockhead would sneer at the story as a cock and bull yarn.

Even if the facts could be hammered into him, it would be a fool's act to tell him anything at all about Harla or Flood. Brannigan, operating against a man of Flood's power and brains—it was ridiculous and worse. One mistake, one wrong move, would have tragic consequences for Harla.

In this whole sorry crackup of his plans, only one advantage remained with him: He could keep silent and keep this hunt in his own hands. And that he swore to do. If necessary he could say that Harla had stowed away on the Bellanca and gone back to the Mackenzie. Brannigan might bungle everything else, but he was not going to bungle this case or endanger Harla's life by some half baked and blundering attack against Flood.

Thinking swiftly, he decided to whip back to the river with Strap and organize a party to go after Harla. He would be free to act as he saw fit, and he would lead the party himself. If he could land on the camp within a few hours, Harla might still be there.

"Let's be getting gone," he said to Strap. "I'm going across to Manitou with you."

Brannigan stepped in front of him. "Yeah? So you're going to Manitou, are you?" He turned his head and looked down the landwash at the mounted detail—four constables, a corporal and a government doctor. "Hey, Schuler," he called to the noncom, "this fellow says he's going to Manitou. Ain't that a good 'un!"

"Who's he?" Noel asked Strap.

"Corporal Schuler, from New Northumbria—and the sourest pickle on the three rivers. Don't ruffle his feathers, Noel, whatever he wants with you. He's an old-timer, and so damn tough the mosquitoes can't bite him!"

With a premonition that some new calamity was about to fall, Noel watched Schuler draw near. A waspish individual, hardened by his two decades in the North and embittered at spending 20 years getting his two stripes, the corporal seemed to be the "sour pickle" that Strap had dubbed him; and just now his temper, never very genial, was not at all improved by the fact that a raw recruit from the awkward squad had been put in command here over his head.

In tones like a drill sergeant's bark he demanded of Noel, "Your name, Lanier?"

"Yes."

"Y'under arrest! I warn you that anything you say will be used against you." He unbuttoned his shirt pocket and produced a warrant. "You flew an unlicensed airplane. Got no pilot's license. No prospector's license——"

"Oh hell," Strap put in, disgustedly, "he spit in the Mackenize River without a license! Why don't you pinch him for saving these Dinokuis and stopping a bad spread, without a license?"

"Keep your lip to yourself," Schuler snapped at him. "Clear out for Aklavik." He swung on Noel again. "Now look—I'm giving you a little warning. I'm personally responsible for you. Clevenger ordered me to bring you to Fort James. He wants to give you a looking over himself. Wants to know who you really are and what you're doing in this country. So I'm gluing onto you. You walk straight and I'll treat you decent, but one funny move and you'll find yourself hogtied."

Of themselves the charges and the arrest had no effect on Noel. When Clevenger found out who he was those charges would be dropped like hot bricks. But in the meantime, the delay, a week, perhaps two weeks, in the tight custody of this sour corporal—that was what maddened him.

He realized that this arrest was Flood's handiwork. Through an anonymous wireless message Flood had directed these charges and this suspicion at him. Wanting time to whisk Harla away and build up his crumbling defenses, the man had not relied upon his warning letter, but had made assurance doubly sure by this skillfully maneuvered arrest.

Schuler took him by the arm. "C'mon. Up into the camp. Don't want you making any break for that Bellanca. I'd have to plunk you."

Noel shook off his hand and pushed him away. "Let me alone, you half pint. I'm going back to Manitou. I came in here and straightened this camp up, while that jackass there sat on a rock and sulked; and now he's put in charge and I get arrested. To hell with you and your warrant."

Schuler grabbed him again. Noel's self-control snapped.

Shenandoah Battles G.U. At Park

Hagerty Will Use Whole New Team; Hoping to Find Talent.

With all of its contemporaries on foreign gridirons, Georgetown's stay-at-home football forces engage those of Shenandoah College this afternoon at Griffith Stadium in the outstanding engagement of a meager program. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Slaughtered by Catholic University in its first appearance here this season by the startling score of 81-0, Shenandoah does not figure to give the Hoyas much more than an easy workout, and the question of the day boils down to not who will win but what the final score will be. The Hilltoppers, however, are not out to roll up a few fancy figures on thier guests, for the game will be more of an experiment for them.

Reserves to Start.

A team culled from the reserves will start for Georgetown and before the 60 minutes of playing time have elapsed everybody but the dean of the law school probably will have been in action. Performances today are important, too, for Coach Hagerty has promised starting positions in the West Virginia game a week hence to all whose work today seems to merit such reward.

Hagerty will be particularly careful to note the actions of Tony Barabas, long-legged halfback, who has blossomed into a star overnight, and Maury Nee, a local boy, who made good at end against New York University last week. Barabas looks like a fixture in the ball-carrying department, and Nee is casting a covetious eye at a regular wing position.

This reserve team, incidentally, is no weak sister but a second line that can step into the breach at any time and do as well as regulars. Thus, its presence on the field in no wise means Shenandoah is being taken with a grain of salt. There is enough dynamite in the backfield to blast the visitors into another overwhelming defeat—as they probably will be.

The line-ups:

Marquette 20-6 Victor Over St. Mary's

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—Marquette's Golden Avalanche, with sharp-shooting shifty Ray Buivid in every scoring play, rolled over St. Mary's big eleven tonight for a 20-to-6 triumph, to retain its place among the Nation's major undefeated football forces, before 50,000 thrilled spectators at Soldier Field.

With the floodlights of the huge lake-front stadium gleaming down on their golden-hued uniforms, the stalwarts from the Milwaukee Hilltop university, struck with startling suddenness in the first period for two touchdowns. The Big Gaels, bearing down with their great advantage in weight, blasted right back for a touchdown before the initial period ended, and were on the way to another when the half closed.

Opening up again in the third session, Marquette clinched its fifth triumph of the campaign on a long pass from the brilliant Buivid to Bill (Red) Higgins, 6-foot junior end, which a bit of good fortune helped turn into the final touchdown of an exciting struggle.

Jones, Little Beat Smith, Thomson

Atlanta, Oct. 30 (AP).—Displaying the old-time form that carried him to golfdom's heights, Bobby Jones shot a fine 68, three strokes under par, today as he and Lawson Little paired to defeat Horton Smith and Jimmy Thomson, 2 and 1, in an exhibition match.

A gallery of close to 4,000 followed the all-star match around the No. 1 East Lake course, where Jones started his career as a youngster.

Sportswriters Shoot Set Today at Gun Club

The 100-target race for legs on the cup donated to the Washington Gun Club by the sports writers of Washington, scheduled for last Saturday, will be held tomorrow afternoon, 1 o'clock, over the club traps near Benning. It is an added-target contest, with contestants receiving added targets according to their club avarages. Winner of the event will have his name engraved on the cup and as a token of his skill will receive a miniature copy of the large cup, as a permanent trophy. Also given on the program will be one of the club's regular weekly sterling silver spoons.

This Morning . . .

Houston, Tex., Oct. 30.

That 41-0 beating the Colonials took from Rice last season can be dismissed about as lightly as a dive into an empty pool. George Washington is improved, but hardly enough. So, with luck to the Colonials, one resolute vote for Rice. And if Rice repeats that 41-0 score, G. W. Press Agent Jack Espey, who has been here a week ballyhooing the game, will be escorted from town on a rail.

POVICH.

Penn-Navy—This one ought to be a pipe. Penn beat Princeton, Princeton beat Navy. But the Middies rarely lose three in a row and they rarely lose at Franklin Field. With due regard for Penn, one confident ballot for Navy.

Fordham-Pitt—The Rams vs. the Panthers—a good one to tuck. But, unafraid, we rush in. The team that can beat Notre Dame, 26-0, is good enough for me. So, with a nod to Fordham and its unbeaten record—Pitt it is.

Harvard-Princeton—Here's the picker's delight. If Harvard wins, the stewards should hold up the purse. The Crimson has been just a breather on the Princeton schedule in recent years and the Tigers may not even draw a long breath tomorrow.

Yale-Dartmouth—The Big Green is not so big this season, but a bit green. The Yales have beaten Penn and Navy, and Dartmouth is hardly in that class. I am trying to make myself clear. Anyway—Yale.

Maryland-Florida—The 'Gaters are not fast-gaited this season. In fact, they have been Terrapin meat for three years. That Maryland team is actually getting good. Barring an accident to Bill Guckeyson, one forthright vote for the Terrapins.

Cornell-Columbia—Better football players and less tradition would probably be welcomed by both these colleges. Columbia is no great shucks this season, but neither is Cornell. I'm lisping it: methinks the Ithacans ith thunk.

Army-Colgate—Unbeaten Army has not been tested this season. Those 16 points Columbia scored against the Cadets may be significant. Colgate will push the West Pointers tomorrow, but will hardly beat 'em. Yes? No?

Purdue-Carnegie Tech—Minnesota probably did things to Purdue last week that the Boilermakers will still be feeling tomorrow afternoon. But you can throw that game out. Carnegie is hardly up to Purdue this season.

Holy Cross-Temple—Holy Cross is unbeaten and this is no time to get off a winner. Temple is tough but nobody is accusing the Crusaders of being softies. Holy Cross it is, then, with no misgivings.

Northwestern-Minnesota—Minnesota people have been fearing this one for two years now, but methinks they've been borrowing trouble. Anyway, as long as Bernie Bierman's team is unbeaten you've gotta go for the Gophers.

Notre Dame-Ohio State—Things have changed since that epic battle of last year. Ohio State is still nearly tops, but the Irish have slumped pitifully. The Pitt team that beat the Buckeyes only 6-0, walloped Notre Dame. On form, then—the Buckeyes.

Indiana-Iowa—Here are a couple of Big Ten also rans and, to coin a phrase, anything can happen. But I detect a wee bit more strength at Indiana. Thus, one wobbly vote for Bo McMillan's club.

Michigan-Illinois—Forty thousand fans would see this game if the Wolverines and Illini were battling for last place. It may not be classic football but it will be earnest. Strictly on the dope—Illinois.

Auburn-Santa Clara—Auburn isn't going to the Coast just for the guarantee or the scenery. No team from Alabama has ever been beaten in California and the Californians have tried it four times now. So, one vote for Auburn.

North Carolina-North Carolina State—The Carolinians can't lose this one. State may be playing to save Hunk Anderson's job, but N. C. U. wants this ball game, too. One wavering vote for N. C. U.

Colonials Schedule 5 Major Foes for 1937

By a Staff Correspondent.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 30—George Washington University has already scheduled five major games for the 1937 football season, the Post learned today from Head Coach James E. Pixlee, here for the game with Rice tomorrow.

Featured by the battle with the University of Alabama, the George Washington home schedule next year will also include games with Arkansas, Tulsa, West Virginia and Wake Forest, Pixlee made known.

The Tulsa game will mark a resumption of the rivalry with the colorful Oklahoma team which, until this season, had appeared on the G. W. U. schedule for five consecutive years and always provided Washington fans with one of their most attractive spectacles.

Wake Forest earned its place on the Colonials' schedule for 1937 as a result of the spectacular 13-12 battle of last week at Griffith Stadium. Following that game, Pixlee hurriedly negotiated for another contest next year in Washington.

Arkansas and West Virginia, like Wake Forest, also were on the 1936 schedule of the Colonials. Pixlee is now attempting to arrange one more major game for next season. Colgate expressed its willingness to play at Griffith Stadium but its demand for a $15,000 guarantee was rejected.

Garcia and Jannazzo Fight 15-Round Draw

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Ceferino Garcia, hard-hitting Filipino from Los Angeles, and Izzy Jannazzo, New York welterweight contender, fought a furious 15-round draw in Madison Square Garden tonight. Leaving the question of a November opponent for Champion Barney Ross as high in the air as ever. Garcia scaled 145½ pounds and Jannazzo, 145¼.

South Carolina Beats Citadel Eleven, 9 to 0

Orangeburg, S. C., Oct. 30 (AP).—South Carolina scored its tenth straight victory over The Citadel in their Orangeburg County Fair rivalry today, 9-to-0. The victors registered a touchdown on a 54-yard forward lateral pass, and a safety before a crowd of 9,000.

Rice Is Slight Favorite Over G. W. Today

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 30.—The battle of the thrill producers, George Washington U. vs. Rice Institute, tonight awaited only the toot of the referee's whistle here in the longhorn country on the morrow.

Before 23,000 fans, the stadium capacity, they will meet, these two teams which last week staged the most sensational finishes of any in the land to win their respective battles, and thus is tomorrow's game advertised here as the test of the thrill teams.

Almost matching G. W.'s spectacular triumph over Wake Forest at Griffith Stadium was Rice's conquest of its traditional enemy, Texas University. With 50 seconds to play, the score tied and Rice in possession of the ball on third down 14 yards from the goal, the crowded stands saw Rice line up in field-goal formation.

Then it was that Rice confounded the fans, the Texas team and even its own coaches. No kick did they attempt, but with a sneak play through center the Rice quarterback dashed 12 yards to pave the way for the winning touchdown on the third play before the game ended.

Odds Shaved Down.

Tall tales of G. W.'s prowess have preceded the unbeaten Colonials here and Houston folks, who shout "bet" at the first sign of an argument, tonight were retrenching on what they have come to believe were foolhardy wagers made on the Rice-G. W. game earlier in the season when the memory of G. W.'s 41-0 defeat by Rice last year produced odds of 2 to 1 and 3 to 1.

To 7 to 5 they have now whittled the odds, with Rice continuing as the favorite. No more than six points will they concede the Colonials on an even money bet.

Virtually side by side on the Rice campus the two teams staged their final workouts today as the Colonials rid themselves of the train-legs acquired on the 1,900-mile trip from Washington. In size they appeared on a par, with Rice averaging 184 pounds per man to 180 for G. W.

Same Lineup.

Head Coach Jim Pixlee is hewing to the line-up he determined upon earlier in the week, with Jenkins, Kaufman, Reeves and Turner constituting his backfield and the fleet Vic Sampson in readiness on the side lines.

An additional warning of the talents of Rice's backs was given Coach Pixlee by his friends here when G. W. arrived shortly after noon in weather which, in Washington, would be described as mid-summer.

Despite the loss of such as Bill Wallace and Ed McCauley, the two backs who were rampant at Griffith Stadium last year in the route of the Colonials, Rice will present a backfield fully as strong as the 1935 crew, Pixlee has been advised.

Quarterback Jake Schuehle, hero of the sneak-play triumph over Duke last week, and Fullback Buck Friedman, a battering-ram type, will be the marked men when Rice takes the field. Schuehle, the sophomore son of a Texas county sheriff, is hailed as even a greater back than Wallace, and unrivaled by any punter in this section.

Six sophomores will be in the line-up that Pixlee will send on the field against the Owls when the Colonials today make their greatest bid in history for an unbeaten season.

G. W. U.	Position.	Rice.
Holt	L.E.	Williams
Prather	L.T.	Franklin
Weinberg	L.G.	Ard
Harrington	Center	Arthur
Remaglia	R.G.	Morris
Hanken or Rebholtz	R.T.	Hughes
Jenkins or Hanken	R.E.	Forbes
Kaufman or Jenkins	Q.B.	Schuehle
Reeves or Kaufman	L.H.	Brandon
Turner or Reeves	R.H.	Parker
Turner	F.B.	Friedman

Detroit Rallies to Beat Duquesne Eleven, 14-7

Detroit, Oct. 30 (AP).—University of Detroit's football Titans, paced by Andy Farkas and Ed Palumbo, flashed a brilliant attack in the fourth quarter tonight to come from behind and down Duquesne University 14 to 7. Farkas scored both Detroit touchdowns on passes from Palumbo.

Pitt, Gophers Favored In Climax Grid Battles

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—The college football campaign, which comes to a smashing climax in the Big Ten with Northwestern's challenge to the all-conquering marchs of Minnesota, finds the title-seeking vanguard subjected to the heaviest kind of firing tomorrow on most main fronts.

Although the big guns, from coast to coast, look to have the situation under better control than at any previous stage of one of the hottest October's drives on record, it won't be surprising tomorrow evening to find additional cases of gridiron shellshock on the casualty list.

Ten outstanding games likely will draw an aggregate of nearly 500,000 eyewitnesses. Capacity crowds are slated for Minnesota-Northwestern at Evanston, Fordham-Pittsburgh at New York, and Notre Dame-Ohio State at South Bend, with a top figure of 65,000 expected at Philadelphia for Navy-Pennsylvania.

Gophers Favored.

Minnesota at Northwestern—Riding the crest of football's greatest existing winning streak and in high gear, after a slow early season start, the Gophers appear to have too much manpower for the Wildcats. However, Minnesota may need 'em three deep in every position, as they are, to outscore a team that has been pointed all season for this game. Northwestern, with two of the best ball carriers in the Big Ten in Heap and Geyer, might win by getting a big enough jump to withstand the second-half pressure. But it's a long-shot chance. Consensus: Northwestern to score, Minnesota to win.

Pittsburgh at Fordham—The East's best offense meets the East's best defense. Neither Southern Methodist nor St. Mary's could cross Fordham's goal line, defended by a stalwart set of low-charging forwards who may have what it takes to extract the sting from Pitt's formidable attack. On the theory that the Panthers have had their "off day" against Duquesne, they are picked to win, but Goldberg & Co. won't tear Fordham apart the way they did Notre Dame. It's the kind of a game where the first team to score may win.

State Too Strong.

Ohio State at Notre Dame—Last season these two put on the "Firpo-Dempsey" battle of football at Columbus, with national title aspirations at stake. This year both are already out of the championship running but well matched. Unless the Irish can uncover another ball of fire like Andy Pilney, hero of the 1935 game, they are unlikely to set off any fireworks. Ohio State, overdue in the attacking department, figures to win this one.

Dartmouth at Yale—The Eli opportunists, led by Larry Kelley, generally has had the bulge on the Indians from Hanover. The jinx was broken last year by Dartmouth, but Yale, currently unbeaten and playing some of the smartest football in the "Ivy League," is the choice.

Illinois at Michigan—Two old rivals struggling to scramble into the Big Ten winning column. The Wolverines snapped out of their losing streak last week, at Columbia's expense, and it's Illinois' turn to win.

Washington at Oregon—The Huskies, riding high, wide and handsome since they lost their opener to Minnesota, figure to keep their Rose Bowl hopes intact but not without a struggle. Oregon, improving steadily, is in much the same long-shot class as Northwestern.

Tigers Have Manpower

Princeton at Harvard—The Crimson is more heavily endowed as an institution of learning but the Tigers are more heavily equipped with football manpower. Princeton has yet to show its full scoring strength but figures to win by a sizeable margin.

Two of the East's handful of unbeaten survivors, Army and Holy Cross, collide with teams anxious to wipe out the sting of earlier reverses, Colgate and Temple.

Badly beaten by Duke and Tulane, Colgate showed a return to form last week. Any time Andy Kerr's razzle-dazzle offense is clicking, there's trouble ahead for the opposition, but Army's Monk Meyer, one of the East's most versatile backs, looks to carry the winning weapons.

This, apparently, meant Vic Willis and Blair Smith would be on the flanks; Ed Fletcher and John Birkland at tackle; Bill Wolfe and Mike Surgent at guards; Bob Walton at center; Charlie Ellinger at quarterback; Bill Guckeyson and Jim Meade at halfs, and John Gormley at fullback.

Dobson would not discuss the physical beating the Terps took at Syracuse, saying only, "Maryland always puts the best resources on the field it has the day of the game and never wants to talk about the boys who may not be in the best of shape. All teams have their problems along this line and I guess Florida has as many as we."

The coach ventured the assertion the trip here had been beneficial. The team had rested, he said, and appeared in better trim than when it left home early yesterday afternoon.

It was learned Maryland's practice today brought the total workouts for the week to one hour and a half. The team drilled 45 minutes Wednesday.

Florida had routine Friday workout. The 'Gators have full strength available and Coach Josh Cody said he felt the players had recovered from last Saturday's game with Kentucky.

Victors' Deadly Punts, Penalty on Cards Pave Way for Touchdown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Loyola Stadium, New Orleans, La., Oct. 30.—Loyola's Wolves surprised a hefty Catholic University eleven at Loyola Stadium tonight with a 6 to 0 victory in a hard fought battle. The Wolves played inspired football from start to finish, outplaying the visitors at every twist and turn and holding the vaunted attack of Maurice (Irish) Carroll and Bill Adamaitis all in check.

The lone touchdown of the game came in the second quarter after a scoreless first period marked by a great punting duel between Pel Hughes, of Loyola, and Spec Foley, of the Cardinals. It was Hughes' great kicking that kept the visitors deep in their territory. Once he put a kick out of bounds on the Catholic U. 3-yard line. Another time he kicked it out on the 12-yard stripe.

It was after this latter boot that Dixie Walker made a high, spiralling punt to Hughes on the Catholic U. 49-yard line who made a beautiful return of 42 yards to the Cardinals' 7-yard line, where he was run out of bounds.

Clipping Penalty.

A penalty for clipping by Peterson was inflicted on Loyola and they took the ball into scrimmage on Catholic U.'s 22-yard stripe. Two off-tackle plays by Mike Casey gained 6 yards and then a penalty for holding by Catholic U. brought Loyola to their 1-yard line.

Clay Calhoun, great plunging fullback, found it an easy matter to score through center on the first play. Cecil Sanders' attempt for the extra point from placement was blocked.

The Cardinals made only one scoring threat. At the close of the first period they took a Loyola punt at midfield and swung on down the field to the 10-yard line, where a fourth down pass fell incomplete behind the goal line. A beautiful pass from Adamaitis to Foley, who lateraled to Schmarr, was completed for a gain of 40 yards. A 15-yard penalty for an illegal backfield shift hurt the Cards here. Finally they resorted to passes and lost the ball on downs.

Card Attack Fails.

At no other time did the Cardinals seriously menace Loyola's goal. They were a constant threat, what with Carroll shaking loose now and then and their lateral passes working smoothly, but they were unable to maintain any sustained attack against Loyola's efficient defense, led by Capt. Art Merchant at center.

Loyola made two marches deep into Catholic U.'s territory, once to the 1-yard line where they were held for downs when the Cardinals staged a stubborn goal-line stand. Three times they held the hard-driving Calhoun and the speedy Daigle for no gain.

Near the end of the game Daigle and Hughes alternated in bringing the ball to Catholic U.'s 10-yard line, but Loyola was gradually pushed back by a raging defense. The Wolves finally lost the ball on the Catholic U.'s 32-yard line.

Carroll, Adamaitis Star.

Carroll and Adamaitis were Catholic U.'s offensive stars. They ripped off goods gains almost every time they carried the ball. In the line, Capt. Schmarr stood out. His defensive play was of the highest order. Daigle, Calhoun, Hughes, Merchant, Costanza were Loyola's stars.

The weather was chilly and there was no cause for complaint from the Cardinals on that score. It was a roughly played game. The penalties were many.

Neither team scored in the first period.

Loyola threw a scare into the Catholic U. team early in the quarter when Bob Murphy intercepted Captain Schmarr's long pass on the first play from scrimmage on Loyola's 30-yard line and ran the ball back to the Catholic U. 43-yard line. A pass from Hughes to Calhoun gained 12 yards and a first down on the Cardinal's 31-yard line. Two passes, one from Hughes to Calhoun for 12 yards and another from Calhoun to Hughes for 14 yards, put the ball on the Catholic U. 14-yard stripe. Here a third down pass from Hughes to Beach was knocked down on the goal line by Adamitis. Then on fourth down, Calhoun of Loyola tried a

Infantry Easily Takes Laurel Feature for 3d Win in 4 Starts

Daily Double Pays $308 Mutuel

Jockey Morris Escapes Injury When Mount Falls in Fourth.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 30—Infantry, three-year-old gelded son of Chane Shot, won his third race in his four starts at this track, taking the chief honors in the running of the Carney Purse, feature event of today's Maryland Fair Inc. Program. Coming out of the starting gate as if he were shot out of a cannon, Infantry made every post a winning one and easily defeated Walter M. Jeffords' Jean Bart by two and a half lengths. Must Be was third all the way and was beaten by seven lengths for the place money.

Despite a strong wind, Infantry stepped the mile and 70 yards in the creditable time of 1:42 3-5. The winner was a heavily played second choice and brought a return of $6 for each $2 investment.

Jockey Charlie Corbett rode Infantry and once in front he rated his mount along while Jockey M. Peters, on Jean Bart, made futile attempts to dislodge him. The main race was between this pair all the way with Jean Bart failing to gain after making a mild bid entering the stretch.

The black and yellow colors of Dr. J. Fred Adams made one of their occasional visits to the winner's circle in the opening race with Adams Eve, four-year-old filly. Jockey Jackie Westrope had the mount and brought her home a half length in front of Riding High, the favorite, with Balcony third. The race was run in the mediocre time of 1:14 and Adams Eve, a member of the betting field, paid a $33.60 mutuel.

A field of eight claiming timber-toppers competed in the day's steeplechase and the chief portion of the purse went to Duncan H. Read's Dundrillin which led John K. Culver, jr.'s Little Marty to the wire by two and a half lengths. Wilfrid G., owned by K. R. Marshal, was a distant third. The winner was clocked in four minutes and paid a $12.20 mutuel.

Golden Vein Wins.

Golden Vein, the property of Mrs. P. Da Lee Watte, won his fourth purse in seven starts this year in the third race. In charge of Jockey Joe O'Malley, Golden Vein scored by half a length over Fervid with Credulous third. Golden Vein operated in the role of a $4.70 favorite and ran the mile and a furlong in 1:54 2-5.

Jockey Bobby Morris miraculously escaped serious injury when the plater Brown Bud fell in the fourth race and sent him to the track in a maze of flying hoofs. The boy suffered only minor cuts and a shaking up. She Knows took the winner's share of the purse, while running in the colors of Mrs. W. E. Martin. Trickling was second by a length and Naval Cadet was third. She Knows took the lead going into the first turn and gave her backers no anxious moments. As the favorite, she paid $5.50 and ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:44 3-5.

The Shandon Farm's Minton came up on the outside in the stretch to take a head decision from Shot and Shell in the sixth race over the 1 1-16 miles course. Third money in the field of seven went to Sea Gull with Inferno Lad, the favorite running a disgraceful race. Minton was clocked in 1:47 and paid a $7.80 mutuel.

Wandrel Scores.

Wandrel, owned and trained by J. McNamara, took the seventh race from a field of a dozen platers competing at a mile and 70 yards. The mare had a length advantage at the finish over three which the camera separated. Wise Advocate was given second money with Tutticurio judged third and Bill Bleiweiss fourth. The winner paid $9 and was clocked in 1:45 4-5. Jockey Ritz, who rode High Torque, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADAM'S EVE (Field), $33.60, $8.50, $9.20; RIDING HIGH, $3.20, $2.90; BALCONY (Field), $9.20.

ADAM'S EVE, within striking distance of the leaders from the start, came to the outside for racing room and moved up sharply inside the sixteenth pole to win going away. RIDING HIGH was squeezed back while racing between BALCONY and FLOWER TIME approaching the far turn, swung out to the clear, moved up smartly to take command in the late stretch, but could not resist the winner. BALCONY, first away, was hard used running with FLOWER TIME and tired gradually. WATERMAN gained gradually throughout the running. FLOWER TIME stopped. TITIAN KIDDIE showed a dull effort. BALLY BAY was virtually left at the break and closed a gap. NELLA CANTER raced greenly and had early speed.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:59½. Off at 2:00½. Winner, D. H. Read's br. or blk. g. (6), by His Majesty—Caller Herrin. Trained by J. T. Skinner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time 4:00 (14 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUNDRILLIN, $12.20, $4.70; $3.90; LITTLE MARTY, $9.80, $7.70; WILFRED G., $8.20.

DUNDRILLIN, always a forward factor while under slight restraint and being steadied over the fences, shook off repeated challenges from LITTLE MARTY during the last mile and held away to the end under a drive. LITTLE MARTY moved up to threaten after a mile and fought it out willingly. WILFRED G. allowed to drop far out of it, came with good speed during the final half. QUICK VERDICT was never a factor. GREATOREX could not keep up and had no excuses. WRACKONITE raced kindly throughout, while weakly handled. POPPYMAN stopped after a mile.

THIRD RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:33. Winner, Mrs. P. Da Lee Watts' red r. h. (5), by Spire—Daisy Vein. Trained by P. D. Watts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:14, 1:41, 1:54 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN VEIN, $4.70, $2.90, $2.40; FERVID, $7.30, $3.70; CREDULOUS, $2.80.

GOLDEN VEIN, steadied along within striking distance of the pace, came through on the inside entering the stretch to gradually assume command and was drawing out at the end. FERVID went to the top at once, was rated along and could not resist the winner while finishing willingly. CREDULOUS chased FERVID, but tired when placed to pressure. MADDENING went evenly, but could not threaten. The others were outrun.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $308.10.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:00½. Off at 3:03. Winner, Mrs. W. E. Martin's ch. f. (3), by Jack High—Playcany. Trained by W. E. Martin. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:39 4-5, 1:44 3-5.

BUD BROWN	(Morris)	105	7	2	Fell					48.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHEKNOWS, $5.50, $3.90, $2.60; TRICKLING, $13.10, $5.70; NAVAL CADET, $2.70.

SHEKNOWS, rushed to the front on the outside going into the first turn, was rated along while opening a gap, rallied when placed to drive and was kept to pressure to hold TRICKLING safe. The latter was hard ridden throughout, gained steadily to the stretch and hung in the final eighth. NAVAL CADET, bothered when BUD BROWN fell, gained sharply entering the stretch, but was held safe. NIMULE was hustled to a commanding position at once, but tired gradually. BUD BROWN stumbled and fell approaching the first turn.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Carney. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went post at 3:30½. Off at 3:31. Winner, Millsdale Stable's b. g. (3) by Chance Shot—La Bayonette. Trained by A. Pelletert. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:37 3-5, 1:42 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INFANTRY, $6.00, $2.70, 2.40; JEAN BART, $2.70, $2.40; MUST BE, $3.30.

INFANTRY sprinted to the front at once, opened a good lead along the back stretch, was shaken up entering the stretch and easily held away to the end. JEAN BART was closest to the pace-setter from the beginning, but could not threaten. MUST BE went evenly, but could not menace. BABY TALK was allowed to drop out of it going to the back stretch and was a distant trailer.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:58. Off at 3:59½. Winner, Shandon Farm's b. g. (7), by Anzon—Mint Drop. Trained by W. Greely. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14, 1:40, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINTON, $7.80, $4.10, $3.20; SHOT AND SHELL, $4.40, $3.70; SEA GULL, $5.40.

MINTON came to the outside for racing room in the stretch and withstood a long drive to get home inside the sixteenth pole. SHOT AND SHELL, assumed command at once, disposed of SEA GULL, but could not resist MINTON. SEA GULL pressed the pace, but tired in the final stages. INFERNO LAD was listlessly ridden. ROSS went evenly. PAN TOY and COPPER TUBE were overmatched.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:30. Winner, J. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WANDREL, $9.00, $4.10, $3.90; WISE ADVOCATE, $3.20, $2.70; TUTTICURIO, $6.70.

WANDREL, outrun for a half, came to the inside to reach the leaders entering the stretch and under pressure was drawing out at the end. WISE ADVOCATE came with a rush on the outside at the finish. TUTTICURIO went evenly and closed courageously under pressure. BILL BLEIWEISS pressed the pace of HIGH TORQUE and was in tight quarters along the rail at the finish while tiring. HIGH TORQUE was faltering in the final sixteenth after setting a brisk pace. GLOWING COAL moved up with a rush swinging for the stretch and flattened out. BARN STORMER stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:01½. Winner, E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARTAN LADY, $4.70, $2.80, $2.60; TAMBOV, $3.30, $3.10; PRECIOUS KING, $6.80.

SPARTAN LADY, steered out of trouble going to the first turn, took command midway of the backstretch, opened a long lead and was in hand at the end. TAMBOV was rushed to the front, chased the pacemaker and was tiring at the end. PRECIOUS KING closed gamely after gaining gradually. DUNAIR moved up sharply approaching the stretch, but could not threaten. CANTIE dropped out of it after a half. WARNED OFF had good early speed. ARDOR stopped early.

Eastern High stole a march on the Republicans yesterday and beat Roosevelt. Scoring two touchdowns in the last quarter, the Lincoln Parkers won their first interhigh series game of the season, 13 to 0, before 2,000 spectators in Theodore Roosevelt Stadium.

Roosevelt seemed about to win on the grounds of a moral victory when the visitors from the Northeast section broke a scoreless tie on a 32-yard drive in the last few minutes of play for their first touchdown and added another for good measure. Al Kidwell, fast-stepping Eastern quarterback, went over for the first score from the 6-yard line.

Throwing back Eastern time and again with a series of great defensive stands, Roosevelt looked more impressive than a Rough Rider eleven has for years. Its tackling in comparison with its defeat by Western, was savage and its backfield alert. On one occasion in the second quarter, the Rough Riders fought off a touchdown after Eastern had penetrated to a first down on the 2-yard line. Roosevelt's quarterbacking was rather poor, however.

Kick Is Blocked.

Eastern's steady hammering finally broke the Roosevelt resistance late in the third period. After a short punt by Bob Kollmyer of Roosevelt to his own 32-yard line, Kidwell opened up a touchdown drive by skipping off 6 yards. Alternating the ball carrying with Pat O'Brien, Kidwell led a quick march to the 6-yard line when Roosevelt called for time out.

The Roosevelt coaching staff rushed in reserves to stem the tide but on the first play, Kidwell shot through the Roosevelt left guard and raced over the goal-line standing up, side-stepping the Rough Rider secondary. O'Brien's place-kick was blocked by Eddie Vasvary.

Less than two minutes later, Eastern scored again. Kollmyer, a good ball-carrier, brilliant defensive man, but rather poor field general, decided to kick on third down from his own 32-yard line and Bill Kemp, scrappy Eastern center, crashed through and blocked it. The ball bounced a long way and back over the goal-line where Jack Kearney, Eastern end, fell on it for the second touchdown. O'Brien's place-kick was good.

Eastern Outfought

With sparkling defensive work by Vasvury, at guard Moore and Paul Dunbar at end, Joe Koiker at tackle and Buddy Rich at guard, Roosevelt outfought Eastern on the line for most of the game, throwing the Lincoln Parkers for a total loss of 29 yards.

The outstanding Roosevelt stand came early in the second quarter. Climaxing a 28-yard march, Russell Speith, rangy Eastern back, ripped ox 13 yards to the 2-yard line where Kollmyer threw him outside with a savage tackle. O'Brien on two plays went to the 2-foot line but Moore tossed Speith for a three-yard loss on fourth down and Roosevelt took the ball.

The Rough Rider's big chance to score came in the third period when Rich blocked O'Brien's punt to give Roosevelt the ball on the Eastern 33-yard line. Bill Hammett plunged to the 29-yard line but Eastern held on the next play, Kollmyer's third and fourth-down passes failed to connect, Eastern taking the ball on downs.

St. Alban's Held To 6-6 Tie by Little Hoyas

Scoring in the final seconds of play, Georgetown Prep partially avenged a 47-to-6 defeat suffered last year at the hands of St. Alban's School by playing its rival to a 6-to-6 tie yesterday. Little Andy Hagan, Georgetown Prep halfback, almost single-handedly gave the Little Hoyas their last-minute touchdown.

Ripping off two runs of 20 yards each, Hagan lugged the leather to the St. Alban's 1-yard line as the stopwatch ticked off the waning seconds of play. With the game nearly over, Ed Cummings, a converted tackle playing fullback, plunged off-tackle for the tying score. Hagan tried to rush the winning point, but was halted inches short of the goal line.

Cary T. Grayson, son of the former White House physician, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, scored the St. Alban's touchdown on a 15-yard end run. The Saints got their scoring break in the third period on a freak play in which the wind carried a punt by Bob O'Shaughnessy, Georgetown Prep quarterback, for a 5-yard loss, coming to rest on his own 15-yard stripe, St. Alban's recovering. Grayson cut loose for the score on the next play.

Meeting in their eleventh annual game, the schools battled on even terms throughout the first half as each tried to capitalize on the heavy wind, with O'Shaughnessy and Grayson matching each other in a punting duel.

Out Fishin'

by Jack Hawley

One or two more columns on Chesapeake Bay fishing and then North Carolina and Florida fishing news for those that make annual journeys to these famous fishing grounds. Between the months of November and March thousands of local anglers and their families make the Southern migration to warmer climes for relaxation and fishing. Most of our local anglers spend from four to seven days in Florida waters seeking either the sailfish, barracuda or blue marlin. The latter is always obtained over at Bimini, which is a good four-hour run from Miami. Very fast boats make the trip in 2½ hours, but prefer the party staying one or more days, due to the chance of not returning on schedule because of inclement weather.

This proposition on the part of the boat owner is reasonable when one considers he can get out of Miami every day, with few exceptions, and realize a fair profit over a long-drawn-out summer without customers. Editor's Note—Why anglers fish in Florida in the winter time when fishing is 100 per cent better in the early summer for fighting species is something we cannot understand and we have tried both seasons, with summer scores far ahead of winter catches.

Chesapeake Bay Fishing.

Fishing during the last few days with few exceptions has been virtually at a standstill at Solomons Island. (Yesterday the wind out of the north, northwest blew a gale and kept all boats ashore). Up to Thursday boats were making good catches of rockfish. With a wind moderation sufficient to get out onto the fishing grounds, we would suggest a try for the big rockfish which abound in the vicinity of Tall Timbers, Point Lookout and the area between Cove Point north to Point Patience. Reports we have received through to Thursday are indicative of very good fishing over the grounds mentioned. We intend to try them today and tomorrow. We suggest the following lures and you better try each method for best results:

When trolling in deep water use several sizes of spoons or drones (don't use feathers which are decidedly a surface lure) ranging in length from a 2-inch (we suggest inch length instead of size because of various differences in manufacturer's specifications which are not always clearly understood by the average angler) to 5-inch lure. Use either the plain chromium metal lure or (preferably) the red and white lure which has been recently added (by a Maryland manufacturer) to the already oversupply of fish-getters" to our local tackle dealers. It's light and produces the best results.

Consult your dealer regarding this lure or phone us and we'll tell you where to get the most suitable rockfishing bait. Regardless of what bait you prefer don't forget to add one or two long lucious bloodworms hooked but once through their middle. Without a bloodworm there can be no rockfish of the size you can feel and they can be had with the present chilly weather. Frosty winds are excellent, providing the winds are moderate. No fun fishing in a gale when one cannot stand or sit comfortably.

Within the past few days we have received reports (authentic) of catches weighing up to 15 pounds per rock, but the majority are around the 5-pound class in the better waters. Rockfish, as is customary, always await one or two very cold winds and then start looking for a juicy bait. This is the time of year when most anglers hang up their tackle (unless they are going south) and regret it. Some cold weather sportsman hits a good catch of rockfish and sends the bereaved angler a big one.

It's much like fishing for small mouth bass (they like it cold and snappy) but the angler forgets that warm clothing is most essential for an all-day trip becaise he has been accustomed to hot-weather fishing. This writer caught one rockfish yesterday after a severe bouncing around in a high gale, but that one fish landed at 5:45 p. m. was worth the trip—14 pounds, 12 ounces. After November 10 we advise anglers to forget the Chesapeake and try fishing off Buckroe Beach, Va., for teautogs, a good gamey fish and very edible. This fishing lasts for approximately two weeks. Then, try the channel bass in the surf off southern North Carolina in the vicinity of Core Banks—it's the best place we know of and they grow big in these waters.

Capt. Harry Woodburn, at Solomons Island, just informed us over the phone that if anglers can stand a little cold weather (glove fishing) to phone him at Prince Frederick 221 and he would be glad to inform local anglers on where and how to go rockfishing for sizable rockfish. This boat captain is seldom wrong and gets them (fish) when others scratch the bald spot and wonder how he does it. Don't forget your supply of bloodworms. Take along 3 dozen.

Clarke Bowls Jacobson at Convention

Duckpin fans of this city will be treated to a bowling match of the highest caliber this afternoon at 230 o'clock at Convention Hall when Astor Clarke, local No. 1 national ranking champion, locks horns with Meyer Jacobson, pride of the Baltimore mapleways, in the first of four blocks of a 20-game match.

Clarke, rounding into the form which won him the national crown last season, gave his rival an inkling of what to expect in the opening stanza when he cracked the maples in his last District League effort for games of 130, 132 and 134. Jacobson's work on the Monumental City alleys has been little short of brilliant and he is touted as that city's greatest head-to-head bowler of all time.

The second block is scheduled for 8 p. m. on the same alleys, and provision has been made by the alley management to handle an overflow audience.

The last half of the match will be rolled at the Baltimore Recreation alleys on Sunday afternoon and night.

The highest team set in 20 years of competition of the Prince Georges County League was chalked up last night at Hyattsville when the Smith's Tavern team pounded out a huge total pinfall of 1915, shooting games of 863, 622 and 630. Norman Lillie contributed a 416 and Jim Madden a 407 set to aid in establishing the record score.

Charlie Olive, new proprietor of the Queen Pin establishment, expects a heavy entry for his Queen Pin Halloween Sweepstakes. The event is open to all league bowlers and a handicap of two-thirds on 115 scratch average will be allowed. A guarantee of $25 will be the winner's share while others among the winners will receive cash and merchandise.

Near the end of the period Adamitis broke lose for 42 yards around left end to put the ball on Loyola's 40-yard line and a pass pushed it up to the 30-yard line, but Hughes ended this threat by intercepting Adamitis' pass on his own 10-yard line and running it back to the Loyola 26-yard line, where he was run out of bounds.

Later, after taking the Loyola punt, Adamitis uncorked a beautiful pass to Foley who raced to the Loyola 30-yard line, where he lateralled to Schmarr. Schmarr brought the ball to the Loyola 10-yard line, where the quarter ended.

At the start of the second period, Catholic U.'s drive toward the Loyola goal line was hampered by a 15-yard penalty for an illegal backfield shift. It was finally halted when a long pass by Adamaitis over the goal line was intercepted by Calhoun of Loyola for a touch-back.

Hughes of Loyola set the Cardinals back on their heels when he got off a beautiful punt that went out of bounds on the Catholic U. three-yard line. Carroll and Adamaitis made a determined effort to bring the ball out from the shadow of their own goal posts but were forced to kick on fourth down after getting a first down on the 22-yard line.

After the Loyola attack bogged down in Catholic University territory Hughes made another nice punt that traveled out of bounds on the Cardinal 12-yard line.

After repeated punt exchanges during the early part of the period, Loyola got a break when Foley fumbled Hughes' punt on Catholic U.'s 42-yard line and Buster Costaganza, of Loyola, recovered. From there the Wolves drove to the 1-yard line where the ball was lost on downs. A great 1-yard end run by Hughes and slashes off the tackles by Clay Calhoun and Al Liska netted the Wolves three successive first downs.

With first downs on Catholic U.'s 5-yard line, Loyola moved the ball to the 1-yard marker, but was unable to push it over. The Cardinals put up a stubborn defense when their goal was in danger.

Punting from behind his goal line, Foley sent a long spiralling kick to midfield. Loyola's attack was unable to make any headway, so Smythe made a nice punt to Catholic U.'s 6-yard line, where the ball was downed.

From the Catholic U. 27-yard line Adamaitis, Makofske and Carroll picked up one first down as they advanced the ball to their own 40-yard line, but were forced to punt when the attack bogged down there. Foley sent a boot sailing to Lyons on Loyola's 12-yard line and he ran the ball back to the Loyola 26-yard stripe.

Loyola punted on third down to Carroll on the Cardinals' 20-yard line and he ran the ball back 12 yards to the 32-yard line. Here Adamaitis broke off left tackle and then laterallied perfectly to Carroll, who continued to the Loola 25-yard line. It was a gain of 25 yards.

A penalty of 15 yards for illegal use of hands on first down temporarily set back the Cardinals, so they started to throw passes, two of which were incomplete. Then on the fourth down, Adamaitis, back to pass, found no receivers and ran with the ball, gaining 5 yards, which wasn't enough to make first down. The ball went over on downs to Loyola on its own 32-yard line.

After being penalized 5 yards for excessive time out, Hughes dashed around left end behind perfect interference for a gain of 9 yards, being thrown out of bounds. The Cardinals were guilty of unnecessary roughness on the play and penalized 15 yards, putting the ball in midfield.

500,00 Expected To See Ten Games

by touchdown margins, Pop Warner's Temple Owls do not figure to halt the burly Crusaders. Tossing comparative scores out the window, this observer looks for Temple to spring an upset.

Cornell's sophomores have at least an outside chance to beat Columbia, but the Lions, rebounding from last week's setback, are the choice. Navy, outscored and outlucked by Yale and Princeton on successive Saturdays, is due to deliver a winning broadside, with Pennsylvania as the victim. The Sailors may need the breaks but get the call, anyway.

South's Big Games.

There are few particularly crucial tests in the South. Tulane, rival of L. S. U. for the Southeastern lead, takes on a breather in Louisiana Tech. Tennessee, still celebrating the upset of Duke, is the choice over Georgia. Alabama gets a slight nod over Kentucky, which has been handicaped by injuries. North Carolina State has a good chance to trim its neighbor, North Carolina U. Duke is picked to beat Washington and Lee.

Nebraska, No. 1 power in the Big Six, will find Missouri no longer a pushover, but the Huskers carry too many big guns for the rapidly improving Tigers.

Southern Methodist is the choice over Texas in the headline event of the Southwest Conference card, with Texas A. & M. picked over Arkansas and Baylor over Texas Christian. Utah State looks to have the edge over Denver in the standout Rocky Mountain Conference test.

On the West Coast, California's Golden Bears do not appear to have the scoring punch to halt Washington State's title bid. Santa Clara, one of the topnotch independents on the Coast, takes on a rugged Southern opponent, Auburn, with the outcome a toss-up for lack of comparative data. U. C. L. A. is the choice over Stanford.

Blues Favored Over Wilson Teachers

Gallaudet Is Host Today; Both Elevens Light and Rely on Speed.

The young but not so tender football rivalry existing between Gallaudet and Wilson Teachers will be resumed today at Kendall Green, with the kick-off scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

Defeated by William and Mary (Norfolk) by the slim margin of a field goal in the last few minutes of play last week, the Blues seem to pack too much of a punch for the future schoolmasters. It is one of those games, however, in which anything can be expected, and while Gallaudet is a slight favorite, Wilson has plenty of supporters.

Rival Elevens Light.

Both teams are unusually light, Wilson averaging around 165 pounds and its host about 170, but the weight disadvantages are offset by a fine spirit unequaled by any other school in the District.

Gallaudet's attack, in all probability, will be built around Racy Drake, hard-running and elusive quarterback, and Hoffmeister, triple-threat star. Wilson will depend on Captain Preston, Newton, Winter, Dunn, Thomas and Gordon.

It will be Gallaudet's last home game of the season as the Blues' next engagements take them to New York for a game with City College of New York, and to Emmitsburg, where they tackle Mount St. Mary's.

Betty Jameson Medalist In Mexican Golf Open

Mexico City, Oct. 30 (AP).—Betty Jameson, of Dallas, Tex., scored a 76, two over par, over the Chapultepec course today to capture medalist honors in the Mexican National Women's Golf Championship. Miss Jameson's margin was six strokes better than Mrs. Patty Newbold, runner-up, who carded an 82.

5,000 Requests Made For Rose Bowl Tickets

Pasadena, Calif., Oct. 30 (AP).—Signs of January 1 poured into the Rose Bowl office today.

Even though no one knows which Western and Eastern football teams will play here New Year's Day, 5,000 persons already have sent in requests for tickets.

"And that makes my job no bed of roses," said William Dunkerley, manager of the Tournament of Roses Association.

"I have to disappoint each of the 5,000. Would-be buyers are told they will have to wait until the teams are picked, because the Western school always handles the ticket sales."

D. C. Wholesale Trade Passes Level of 1929

Census Bureau Reports 66 Per Cent Gain Since 1933.

Statistics indicative of expanding business in Washington were made public by the Census Bureau yesterday with a report that wholesale sales here gained 66 per cent in the two years after 1933 and outdistanced the figures of 1929.

In 1935 Census Bureau Director William L. Austin said, there were 621 wholesale establishments with net sales during the year of $239,423,000, while in 1933 there were 568 establishments with sales of $144,119,000.

"Net sales exceeded the 1929 peak by 7 per cent," Austin said. "Both of the percentage changes in net sales are affected by variations in price levels between the census years, which are not taken into consideration in this release, but which will be evaluated in the final report."

Kroger Grocery Votes 30 Cents a Share Extra

Cincinnati, Oct. 30 (AP).—Directors of the Kroger Baking & Grocery Co. at a special meeting today declared an extra cash dividend of 30 cents a share on the no-par common stock. It will be paid December 1 to share holders of record November 10 with regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents.

President Albert H. Morrill said the extra dividend was declared in an effort "to avoid payment of a heavy tax on undistributed earnings."

Amoskeag Mill Pays $3,000,000 Dividend

Boston, Oct. 30 (AP).—Three million dollars, a 40 per cent liquidation dividend, will go tomorrow to stock and bondholders of the defunct 110-year old Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. of Manchester, N. H., Arthur Black, Federal referee in bankruptcy, announced today.

The payment, Black said, would bring to $11,000,000 the amount returned to Amoskeag's security holders and mean a 100 per cent return on par value of the stocks and bonds.

Silver Imports Jump; Gold Influx Drops

A sharp drop in gold imports for the week ended October 23 was reported yesterday by the Commerce Department. Gold imports for the week were listed at $5,148,967, compared with $53,574,685 in the previous week and $124,938,717 in the week ended October 9.

Silver imports were set at $15,726,045 for the week ended October 23 and at $1,028,774 in the previous week. Renewed Government silver purchases from China were indicated in the report, which showed that of the total silver imports $13,916,260 came from that country.

'Insiders' Originate Fifth of Stock Trades

The Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that 19.85 per cent of all transactions on the New York Stock Exchange during the week ended October 3 was conducted by "insiders."

It showed that 19,159,320 shares were involved in purchases and sales during the week, of which member transactions accounted for 3,962,110 shares.

The Market

New York, Oct. 30.—Stocks moved uncertainly through moderate dealings. Best prices were paid in the first few minutes of trading, when gains were general, but the score was about the same for both bull and bear side toward the close. Foreign exchanges were unchanged. December wheat dropped ⅝ of a cent to 113¾ cents a bushel.

Stock traders could find nothing to excite them outside the political field, and most of their gossip on individual stocks or groups was merely filed away for action after the election. More activity was shown in placing the election bets. The phoney odds of 3 to 1, much broadcast a few days ago, disappeared. Actual money, which recently has been wagered at odds of 2 to 1 on Roosevelt, was overwhelmed by a flood of Landon money, much of it from out of town, and by early afternoon the odds had been driven down to 9 to 5, with some reports of 8 to 5 money. It would require little, in view of some Wall street observers, to bring the election odds in line with the straw vote polls, and that in itself probably would affect some votes.

If betting on the election in a direct way increased, indirect betting through purchase or sale of stocks continued on a moderate basis. One reason for that is so few people have decided convictions on which way the market will go immediately following the election, picking either side to win. Seldom has there been so much confusion of guesses on that score, and in the meantime the real investor is maintaining his calm.

Utilities Improve.

In stocks most of the railroad shares were a shade easier, but an exception was Norfolk & Western. With a juicy extra dividend in sight would-be buyers are finding it difficult to find stock. Bid and asked quotations run on the ticker this morning brought a sale at 310¼, a gain of 4 points, and a new high record price for the shares. Public utility shares were uniformly higher with the gains moderate. Sales volume in the group was the largest in some time. Commonwealth Consolidated Edison, Pacific Gas and Public Service were prominent.

Irregularity in price movements predominated among the steels, metals, motors, tobaccos, foods, railroad equipments, motor accessories, oils and chemicals. Bethlehem Steel retained the greater part of an overnight gain on its good earnings report. Cerro de Pasco reached a new high price on a rise of a point. Kennecott and Anaconda also sold at new tops. Chrysler picked up in the late trading. Mail orders pushed into new high ground.

Sharp gains were seen for Allied Chemical, Du Pont, International Business Machines, Safeway Stores, Waukesha and U. S. Rubber common and preferred. The ill-fated Pittsburgh United receded further into new low ground.

Business Health.

While the final figures on the Literary Digest's Presidential poll were being read, indicating a New Deal defeat, Wall Street continued to divide its time for reflection between guessing on the election outcome and speculating on what likely will follow in business and markets, whichever way the ballots fall. Statistics on industry now appearing indicate that neither the summer's drought in parts of the agricultural West nor the uncertainties over the election outcome have stopped the business recovery, which began with the spring of 1935.

Doubtless trade would have been much brighter had farm income received no such sharp setback as that delivered by the dry weather, coming on top of that species of planned economy which had succeeded in eliminating much of the reserve supply of grains and live stock on the farms. Probably also business men would have moved ahead with more confidence had no election been in early prospect. However, trade has been well sustained, which explains the robustness of the stock market in a period during which many observers several months ago had looked for weakness.

What Comes Next?

Principally because business has done so well this autumn and last summer the belief is quite widely held that, regardless of the election outcome, it will rquire something drastic to stop the forward momentum for a few months at least. As the anti-New Dealer sees it, business with a Democratic victory won't bog down for another few months, which means that no real currency inflation is in early prospect, but that method will be used when the pressure comes. As seen by the New Deal sympathizer, a new "mandate" at the polls would merely accelerate the recovery pace.

His opponent, while not admitting that with regard to business, foresees inflation as a certainty with Roosevelt, but not necessarily so with Landon; and he also looks for a real boom in industrial enterprise of a sound sort if the New Deal with all its uncertainties, threats and experiments be overthrown. As between business improvement founded on recovery of the major heavy industries and as between a fillip for the quick consumption trades and speculation against credit and currency inflation, the former is the choice of all but short-sighted individuals and of gamblers. Meanwhile a good many people are inclined to settle back with the highly comforting if shallow thought that, be it Roosevelt or Landon, nothing bad is going to happen right away.

Brokers' Loans.

The drop of $30,000,000 in brokers' loans virtually wiped out the expansion reported for the previous week, and yet the action of the stock market suggested that the reverse might have taken place. Assuming that the shift in loans was the result of speculative changes, in a rather shaggy market last week outright holders gave way to margin purchasers, while this week, with a rising market, the margin traders sold out to cash customers. Probably the explanation doesn't quite fit the case, and the real reason may be found in a shift of loans to bond dealers in connection with the recent Telephone and other financing.

Steel Preferred.

Steel preferred was a sensation of the trading. The highest price at which the stock ever sold was 151¼, in 1930. In the following year its best price was 150. Last night's closing price was 150½. This morning the shares were ex dividend $3.75 a share. In the first hour bid and offer quotations were run on the ticker tape at 148@153, 148@152 and 150½@152, followed by an opening sale around 11 a.m., at 150½, which meant full recovery of the 3¾ points dividend.

French Gold.

France, in extending the date for hoarders of gold to turn in their metal to receive payment at the rate which ruled before the franc was devalued, is following almost exactly the unpopular procedure of the administration in Washington, which at periodic intervals threatened gold holders who had refused to disgorge and, in the end, did little, if anything, to them. There is still outstanding here about $100,000,000 in gold certificates and about $300,000,000 of gold coins. The latter was written off by the Treasury from monetary stocks, but the former, a liability of the Treasury, cannot be written off so easily.

Freight Traffic Maintains Gain Over Last Year

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 24 totaled 813,972 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 103,351 cars, or 14.8 per cent, compared with the corresponding week in 1935, and an increase of 191,164 cars, or 30.6 per cent, above the corresponding week in 1934, but a decrease of 118,743 cars, or 12.7 per cent, below the corresponding week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of October 24 was a decrease of 10,183 cars, or 1.2 per cent, below the preceding week.

Grain Loadings Heavier.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 33,025 cars, an increase of 443 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 907 cars below the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, an increase of 861 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone grain and grain products loading for the week ended October 24 totaled 21,434 cars, an increase of 93 cars above the preceding week this year, but a decrease of 594 cars below the same week in 1935.

Livestock loading amounted to 22,273 cars, a decrease of 339 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,342 cars above the same week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 3,270 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone loading of livestock for the week ended October 24 totaled 18,300 cars, a decrease of 228 cars below the preceding week this year but an increase of 1,225 cars above the same week in 1935.

Coke loading amounted to 10,334 cars, a decrease of 248 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,379 cars above the same week in 1935, and 5,391 cars above the same week in 1934.

Yachts, Gems, Wine Show Sales Jump

New York, Oct. 30.—Sharp upturns in the sales of three luxury items are revealed in a survey made public today by the newly organized American Champagne Guild.

"Yachts costing more than $5,000,000 have been built so far this year for Americans," says the report, "representing an increase of 300 per cent over 1932, with contracts for yachts double in volume and dollar value over last year. Jewelry firms are enjoying a 60 per cent increase in sales this month, compared with last autumn. American champagne sales in the metropolitan area alone since January are 30 per cent head of the first nine months of 1935."

Milk Sales Pass One Billion Mark

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Sales of milk, the Industry Foundation reported today, brought farmers cash income of more than $1,000,000,000 in the first nine months of this year, a five-year record for the period.

The total of $1,074,000,000, according to the foundation, was $80,000,000 greater than that for 1935. The report added that milk continues as the best single source of farm cash income, with rising consumer-buying power in the cities contributing to the mounting sales.

Wheat Drops Cent a Bushel On Ship Strike

Active Selling Movement Wipes Out Earlier Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—An active selling movement that developed late today from Eastern sources carried wheat values down about a cent a bushel, more than overcoming earlier gains. Fears that shipping strike troubles would spread to the Atlantic seaboard were a generally accepted reason for the outbreak of wheat selling.

Chicago wheat futures closed weak, ¼-⅝ under yesterday's finish, December 113⅜@113¾, May 112¼@112⅝, July 98⅞@99, corn ⅝ off to ¼ up, December 93⅞@94, May 89⅜@89½, July 86⅛@86¼, oats at ⅛-¼ decline, December 40¾, and Rye ¾ down, December 82¾. The provisions outcome was 2 cents to 12 cents setback.

On the Air Today

Political haranguing via radio has run about 25 per cent stronger than in the campaign of 1932, according to the Associated Press. But from the appearance of the schedules for at least two of Washington's stations tonight that seems a modest increase.

Speech-making gets right down to business tonight. Campaign headquarters in the two major camps will learn a bit of the problems of the show business—theater or radio—when during a part of the evening the Roosevelt and Landon forces find themselves "opposite" each other—or competing for audience attention.

For the most part, however, the orating favors the fans beautifully. If you are not too busy chasing away small boys bent on soaping your windows you can hear Col. Knox, from 8 to 8:30; Al Smith, from 8:30 to 9:30; President Roosevelt, 9:30 to 10:30, and Gov. Landon, 10:30 to 11. Or perhaps you would prefer John Hamilton, 9:45 to 10:30.

Everyone has given to the cause as the campaign warms into its finale this week. Tonight the "National Barn Dance" just refused to give in entirely, however, and rather than not be heard at all the period from 11 to midnight was selected.

Even Maj. Bowes and his alleged amateurs were nicked this week. Just when I was beginning to be convinced that no one, not even a candidate for the Presidency, could be more important than Papa Bowes. The major's press agent must be slipping, at that. No one proposed him as a Presidential candidate!

Here and there: Morton Bowe, relatively unknown last season, is turning up this year as one of radio's busiest singers. The tenor now adds the singing assignment of Jack Pearl's new show to his list, beginning November 9 . . . Mabelle Jennings will tell listeners over the Nation what a voteless city does—and what it thinks about on election day, next Tuesday, for the Columbia net. It's to be a woman-in-the-street airing . . . The fan magazine, Radio Guide, announces a new "Radio Queen" for this year. She is Lulu Belle, songstress of the "National Barn Dance." Lulu Belle won out in the last few days' voting over Jessica Dragonette, Joan Blaine, Frances Langford, Gracie Allen, Margaret Speaks and Kate Smith.

Premier Mussolini is expected to speak over the Blue net of NBC (WMAL) at 10:15 a. m.; Cardinal Pacelli's remarks in accepting an honorary degree by Fordham University will be broadcast over the Columbia net (WJSV at 4:45; Father Charles E. Coughlin speaks over a Columbia net at 4 under the auspices of the National Union for Social Justice from Scranton. J. H. H.

Canada to Assist U. S. Drive on Dope

By the Associated Press.

Treasury officials disclosed yesterday they are negotiating a close working agreement with the Canadian Royal Mounted Police in a move to smash narcotic smuggling rings operating along the West Coast.

In the past, the Royal Mounted has co-operated with the Customs Service in law enforcement activities, but a closer understanding now is being effected to lend added strength to an anti-narcotics drive in the Pacific.

The agreement, Treasury officials said, will embrace an arrangement by which Canadian officers Guard vessels.

School Arts Display To Terminate Today

The ninth Scholastic High School Arts and Crafts display will close today after a two weeks' exhibition at the National Museum. The traveling art show is sponsored by Scholastic Magazine and the American Federation of Arts, and exhibits oil paintings, sculpture, water colors, drawings, sketches, designs and pottery by high school students, not only in this country, but from Canada, Belgium, Russia, Austria, France and Denmark.

Because of limited space at the museum, there were only about half of the 1,000 items exhibited, five of these being by Washingtonians.

24 Publications Banned.

Danville, Va., Oct. 30.—Chief of Police James H. Martin has submitted to all local news venders a list of 24 publications with the warning that if they are displayed or sold, charges of violating the obscenity law will be filed.

Railroads Get Permit to Seek Truck Business

I. C. C. Order Allows Start of Door Pick-up and Deliveries by Dec. 21.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday opened the way for closer competition between the railroads and motor truck transportation in the East with an order approving free pick-up and delivery service by the rail carriers.

The order applies to less than carload freight hauled for a minimum of 45 cents per 100 pounds.

Proposed schedules for pick-up and delivery service filed by the leading Eastern rail carriers last April, and suspended by the commission pending an investigation of their lawfulness, become effective not later than December 21.

Pick-up and delivery service has been operated at some of the chief terminals of the Pennsylvania, the Erie, Grand Trunk, Boston and Maine, and Maine Central railroads to a limited extent since 1933. The service, however, was limited to 260 miles of line haul for freight carried for 30 cents per 100 pounds.

The commission's order yesterday eliminates the "plus charge" and limits the free pick-up and delivery to freight carried for 45 cents per 100 pounds. The order also provides an allowance of 5 cents per hundred pounds for consignors and consignees who elect to make their own delivery to or from the rail terminals.

The commission said that between 1920 and 1935, less than carload traffic handled by the rail carriers declined 74 per cent. In the same period registration of motor trucks increased nearly 260 per cent.

Text of Gov. Landon's Address in Charleston

By the United Press.

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 30.—The text of Gov. Alf M. Landon's speech in Charleston tonight follows:

Last night in New York City I summarized my position on the major issues of this campaign. I pointed out that a basis essential of representative government is for the candidate to take the people into his confidence—that representative government rests upon the combined wisdom of the peope—and that in this election we will decide the future of our form of government by the combined wisdom of the people.

Tonight here in West Virginia I wanted to talk quietly about a few of the issues as they relate to the home. I want to do this because one of the outstanding points of this campaign has been the interest of thousands of men and women who in ordinary years take no active part in political contests. This interest is not the result of a sudden outburst of party enthusiasm. It is a result of the realization that the choice to be made in this election will vitally affect their homes.

For many months the people of West Virginia have been in the forefront of those working to make this election reflect the real wishes of the people. I am happy to be with you as we bring this stirring campaign to a close.

Quotes Franklin.

Let me remind you of a remark made by Benjamin Franklin following the Constitutional Convention of 1787. A friend asked him: "What kind of a government have you given us?" and he replied: "A republic—if you can keep it so."

That was a profound remark. It reflected the homely wisdom that is one of our heritages from horse and buggy days. Its meaning is quite plain. A republic—a government of the people—cannot be kept a republic except through the efforts of the people.

Now it is obvious that a government of 130,000,000 people must be handled in the periods between elections by the people's servants—their elected representatives. During these periods, through error or misguided actions of those representatives, government may wander off the course. This is always possible.

But so long as the voters of the Nation are interested in the management of the Government, so long as they are jealously determined to keep the Government their own, they can always bring it back on the course. They do this by exercising their rights on Election Day.

We have been living for a hundred and fifty years under our Constitution. We have maintained our Republic. And we have achieved a high measure of prosperity and happiness. But we have not done this merely because our ancestors drew up a great document. We have done it because we were determined to keep a republic.

And our determination to keep a republic will be the measure of our success in the future.

In this task our women must play their part as well as our men. More than our men, indeed, for always, over all the world, it has been the women rather than the men who have been the mainstays of the home.

Men in pursuit of varied interests sometimes get away from the fundamentals. This is natural. But the women, through their devotion to the ideals of the family, never lose sight of these fundamentals. This is just as true, in my observation, of those women who today are taking positions of leadership in our business and public life.

But men and women alike must never forget that our Constitution is the charter of our liberties. It is the charter that keeps our homes.

No Longer Home.

We have only to look across the ocean to see what can happen when the people have no such protection against the power of government. To these people home is no longer a place to which they can retire in security—a place in which they can think and speak as they please; in which they can worship as they please; in which they can bring up their children as they please. In these countries homes are no longer protected by law against invasion by the agents of an all-powerful government.

We must never forget that the loss of liberty in these countries followed depressions; that the trends in government which preceded this loss of liberty were similar in many respects to the trends in government which we see in America today.

Outstanding among these trends was the disregard of the old-fashioned principle of making both ends meet, a principle which we all follow in our homes, and which our women know even better than our men.

This principle has been lost sight of in the last three years. We have seen waste and extravagance on an unparalleled scale. The people of West Virginia know this only too well. They know there has been almost unlimited waste and extravagance in the handling of relief funds in this State.

Two Issues Involved.

In this type of expenditure there are two issues involved. There is the spending of public monies, voted by the people for the relief of their less fortunate fellow citizens, for purposes which have nothing to do with relief; you know what these purposes are. Relief funds are being spent to maintain a political machine in power. WPA workers are being intimidated and coerced. In many cases approval of party leaders is necessary to get relief work. And workers on relief are told that they must vote for the Administration in power or lose their jobs. This kind of practice violates the first principle of civic decency. When government itself follows this policy how can we teach the duties of good citizenship to our children?

The second issue involved in this misuse of public money is the plain dollars-and-cents side. Let me show you how foolish and vicious waste in Government affects the citizen. I am going to talk not in billions, but in terms of nickels, dimes and dollar bills—in terms of the pay envelopes and the household budget.

Last year the cost of all Government in this country—Federal, State and local—amounted on an average to about $500 a family. Twenty-five years ago the cost of all these governments amounted to only about $140 a family. In all this spending the Federal Government is the chief offender.

The Government in Washington spends the equivalent of about $275 per family a year. Think of this in terms of your household budget.

This $275 a year is not taken in direct taxes. Most of us never see a tax bill for the expenses of the Federal Government. We are borrowing half this money and we are paying through hidden taxes—taxes concealed in the cost of the things we buy.

For example, during the life of the AAA, every time a housewife bought a loaf of bread she contributed one-half cent to the Federal Government through the processing tax alone. Every gallon of gasoline carries a concealed tax for the Federal Government amounting to 1 cent. And every package of cigarettes carries a tax amounting to 6 cents.

It is through these thousands of t little taxes—1 cent here, a half cent there—that most of us pay our Government bill. These taxes have increased the cost of living by raising prices. And the dangerous thing about them is that they go on increasing without our being aware that the Government is eating into what we have to spend.

Still Can't Pay Bills.

Let me mention just one more point about this waste and extravagance as it affects the home. Even with all the hidden taxes we are paying the Federal Government is unable to pay its bills out of income. Today, out of every dollar it spends it has to borrow fifty cents. This money will have to be paid back in the future—paid back by deductions from the household budgets.

We cannot continue forever this policy of spending more than we take in. It leads inevitably to inflation—to impossibly high prices for the necessities of life—to the destruction of our savings.

Another question is much in the thoughts of us all at this time—especially of all wives and mothers. That is the question of peace. The world is restless. Disturbing news comes to us almost every day. But I do not believe war in Europe is inevitable. I am sure the terrible memories of the last war still are so vivid that no people wants to break the peace.

At the same time we must all recognize the dangers. If other nations should become involved in war while I am President, I pledge you that I will do everything in my power to keep America out. And I believe that in the light of our experience in the last war we can avoid the pitfalls. We can keep out.

We can keep out if we are prepared to defend ourselves; if we observe strict and impartial neutrality, if we are willing to forego short-run profits; if we keep our heads.

This last is the most important of all. For in the end the issue of peace or war for America must rest with the American people. If the issue is clearly presented to them I know that their answer will be. I know what the answer will be from the men and women who make our homes. It will be peace.

In the West we are home folks and we are proud of being home folks. The men who run for public office can never get very far away from the people. They can never forget that they are still neighbors. They can never overlook the fact that even in office it is as neighbors that they will be judged.

Let me tell you a piece of homey advice that was given me the first time I ran for office. I had dropped into a store to buy a hat. The storekeeper was an old friend of mine. I had been dealing with him for years.

Cites Merchant's Advice.

As he made the sale he said to me: "Do you know why you've kept coming back to me all this time? Because I've always told you exactly what you were getting and you've always got your money's worth. Now you are offering the people a piece of political goods. You've got to see to it that the quality is what you say it is and that they get their money's worth. If you let them down they won't be coming around to vote for you the next time."

Apply this wisdom to the present Administration. Did it tell you frankly in advance what you were getting? And do you feel you got your money's worth? Is it telling you now what it proposes to offer you if it should be re-elected? And do you want the quality of goods it carries in stock and that you are likely to get if it is returned to power?

In my campaign at home I have always tried to follow my old friend's advice. I have tried to tell the people exactly what I intended to do and I have tried to do it. In this campaign I have followed the same plan. I have told you I propose to go forward along the American way of life and I have repeatedly stated the policies that in my opinion will guarantee us a safe course.

Next Tuesday the men and women of America will set the country on this course for the next four years.

Nominees Urged To Help Building

In an open letter addressed to President Roosevelt and Gov. Alf M. Landon, the committee for economic recovery yesterday asked that whichever is elected co-operate in promoting a home-building program.

"Intensive study of the various work opportunities," the letter said, "has convinced the committee that a vast private home-building program is the largest single avenue for potential employment.

"We have been disappointed to note that no political party has shown an adequate appreciation of the importance of a great National home-building program. We hope this does not portend any lack of immediate action in this direction after November 3."

The letter was signed by Allie S. Freed, chairman of the committee.

Election Will Decide Name of New-Born Cub

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Oct. 30 (AP). The voters are going to do more than elect a President Tuesday—they also will name a lion cub born at a zoo here three weeks ago.

Mayor Louis E. Moore said it was planned at first to call the cub "Cracker," but then officials decided to name him either Roosevelt or Landon, depending upon the outcome of the election.

A public christening will be held Inauguration Day.

Social Security Plan Again Target of Knox

Gary, Ind., Oct. 30 (AP).—Opening a new attack on the social security act, Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, declared tonight it was "a scheme for sharing poverty."

That the pension and insurance measure "puts half the working people of America under Federal control," was another charge Knox leveled in an address prepared for delivery in this Indiana steel city.
